BY UNANIMOUS VOTE.

Republicans Decide to Fight For Control of the Senate.

Censure of Ambassador Bayard Almost Certain.

Final Vote on Bond Silver Bill to Be Taken This Afternoon.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—The Republican senators, at their caucus yesterday, decided upon making an attempt to complete the reorganization of the senate and to meet again next Friday for that purpose.

There was no rollcall upon the proposition, but the motion was put and carried unanimously by a viva voce vote. The vote was preceded by quite an animated discussion, in which some of the senators favorable to the program for a complete change expressed themselves freely.

Among these were Senators Pettigrew, Chandler, Gallinger and Wilson, all of whom made speeches declaring it to be the duty of the Republicans to complete the work which they had begun when they organized the committees. There were some unmistakable references to the senators who are supposed to be willing to permit the present Democratic officers to remain, with intimations of favoritism to some Republican senators.

Senators Platt and Hoar also spoke, the latter addressing himself to the general subject of senate patronage and its distribution. While he did not absolutely oppose the proposed change, Senator Platt contended that the senate should assume a higher plane than that of going in for the small spoils of the party patronage.

It is understood that, in accordance with the motion carried at yesterday's meeting, at the caucus a week hence, candidates for the offices of secretary and sergeant-at-arms will be put up and voted for, and that if the caucus agrees upon men for those offices, as it has already done upon Senator Frye for president pro tem, there will soon thereafter be an effort to elect the nominees in the open senate.

To Be Settled Today.

The final vote on the bond silver bill will be taken in the senate at 2 o'clock today, an agreement to that effect having been reached yesterday. This brings to a conclusion a debate covering many days.

The agreement came rather unexpectedly at the close of Mr. Vilas' speech. He had talked for three hours, and was about to be followed by Mr. Bate, when Mr. Chandler precipitated the question of a final vote by stating that he would ask unanimous consent for a recess from 4 until 7:30 o'clock. While the senator did not mention a vote, it was well understood that the move was to expedite a vote by disposing of speeches during the evening.

Mr. Harris (Tenn.) put the voting proposition in more definite form by asking that the agreement cover a recess from 4 until 7:30 last night, a further recess until 11 a. m. today, then the five-minute rule of debate to apply, except to Mr. Morrill, the venerable head of the finance committee, and, finally, a vote on the bill and all amendments at 2 o'clock.

For a few minutes it looked as though Mr. Hill (N. Y.) would again prevent an agreement. He asked for a distinct understanding that various parliamentary motions to postpone, lay on the table, etc., should not be cut off. This was readily conceded by Mr. Harris, so long as the final vote was at 2 o'clock. This disposed of the last remaining objection, and the presiding officer declared the unanimous agreement to be in force. Aside from this, the day was given to speeches on the pending bill.

The house confined itself to routine business. Most of the session was devoted to the District of Columbia appropriation bill. The regular attempt was made to have all the expenses of the district government paid by the district, but the motion made by Mr. Dearmont (Dem., Mo.) to effect this was ruled out on a point of order. The district bill carried $5,417,960, $353,423 less than the sum appropriated for the current fiscal year.

It was expected that A. J. Rosenthal, who contested Miles Crowley's seat from the Tenth Texas district, would address the house in support of his claim, but he waived the privilege accorded him, and the resolution of the committee, confirming Mr. Crowley's title to his seat, was adopted.

Bills were passed to amend section 3255 of the revised statutes regarding exemptions allowed distillers of fruit brandies so as to extend the provisions of that section to distillers of brandies from pears, pineapples, oranges and berries; to authorize the president to appoint John T. J. Ryan, John R. Morris and Chester Wells assistant engineers in the navy, and to change the time for holding district and circuit courts in the eastern district of Tennessee.

Still Hanging Fire.

The question of a censure of Ambassador Bayard for his two speeches in England will be again considered by the house committee on foreign affairs at a special meeting today.

Since Thursday's meeting the Republican members of the committee have talked with their party colleagues in the house, and a majority have agreed to support a resolution drawn by Mr. Cousins (Ia.) which censures the ambassador. It is probable that this resolution will be reported to the house, for while Chairman Hitt of the committee has not yet expressed an opinion upon the matter, most of the Republican members have an understanding.

The Democrats of the committee under the leadership of ex-Chairman McCreary will antagonize any resolution of censure, even a general expression of disapproval of speeches by diplomatic officers. They will not be able to gain time by forcing an adjournment, however, as they did Thursday, for since Thursday's meeting Chairman Hitt has asked permission from the house for the committee to sit during the sessions of the house.

Seeking Extension of Exports.

The house committee on ways and means yesterday adopted a resolution providing for an investigation of the tariff discrimination against American products, and of the effect of the repeal of the reciprocity laws. The resolution, which was introduced by Mr. Tawney (Minn.), recites that it is desirable to extend the export of surplus of agricultural and manufactured products of the United States to foreign countries; that in certain countries the importation is prohibited, restricted or subjected to burdensome inspection, overvaluation or discriminating duties, and authorizes the committee to prepare a report which shall show in what countries such discriminations are in force, and the effect of the reciprocity treaties upon commerce and of their abandonment. Experts to make the investigation are provided for.

Army Estimates.

The army appropriation bill was completed yesterday by the house committee on military affairs and will be reported to the house soon. The bill carries $23,275,302, a decrease from the estimates made by the war department of $817,000. Last year's bill appropriated $23,252,608. Of the appropriations, $13,103,512 is for the pay of the army, $1,655,000 for subsistence, $7,337,000 for the quartermaster's department, and $1,089,000 for the ordnance department. The bill prohibits appointment of paymasters from civil life.

Marin to the Front.

HABANA, Feb. 1.—The departure of General Marin for active operations in the field is given out here as marking the beginning of a more aggressive and efficacious military policy, and great things are expected of his campaign. His purpose is stated, officially, to be to enter upon the pursuit of Gomez and Maceo in Pinar del Rio. He takes with him 1700 cavalry, 2000 infantry and four batteries of artillery, and he depends on the military wall along the railroads from Habana to Batabano to prevent the escape of Gomez and Maceo, while he runs them down and captures them in Pinar del Rio. There are going with him about 3000 additional troops under the command of Generals Canellas, Aldecoa and Linares, who will co-operate with him.

A fallen eucalyptus has been found to be 480 feet in length.

THE Q. & B. PETITION.

What Is Contemplated in Quincy and the Suburbs.

At the State House this week, the petition of the Quincy & Boston Street Railway company for authority to purchase the Braintree Street Railway company and to lease the Randolph Street Railway company was heard by the committee on street railways and the Herald's report will be of interest, showing as it does what is contemplated.

The bill accompanying the petition asks for authority to increase the certified stock of the Quincy Street Railway Company $300,000.

John R. Graham, president of the Quincy road, in explaining the provisions of the bill, said that the people of Braintree were anxious for the consolidation. The Braintree road had not paid expenses, operated as an independent company, but since the Quincy road has obtained control of its stock and bonds and operated it in connection with the Quincy road it has paid expenses. The selectmen of Braintree have approved the consolidation.

The Randolph road is not built. A location has been granted, however. The Braintree road has capital stock of $35,000; bonds, $35,000; debt, $25,000. It is the intention of the Quincy company, in the event of the consolidation, to wipe out the bonds.

The increase of capital is wanted for the following purposes: To continue the Braintree road to the Randolph line, and for other purposes, $100,000; for building the Randolph line, $50,000; for rebuilding road from Quincy Centre to Quincy Point, substituting electric for horse construction, $25,000; rebuilding and double tracking Hancock street line from Quincy Centre to Neponset river, $70,000; power plant, $25,000; new equipment, $30,000.

There has been an increase of 65 per cent. in the business of the Quincy company in a year. Formerly it cost 15 cents—three fares—to go from Quincy to Holbrook, but since the Quincy company has begun to operate the Braintree road only two fares are required to ride that distance.

Boston Horse Show.

Extensive preparations are being made for the big horse show to be held in Mechanics Building, Boston, during the week of April 6, and although the event is some two months off, gowns and horses are already being talked up. Judging from the amount of enthusiasm displayed, the coming horse show promises to be the social event of the season in Boston. All New England is interested in the exhibition and the promoters of the show are sure of a big list of attractions as $10,000 for prizes is offered.

The executive committee of the horse show consists of the following representative Bostonians: Mr. Francis Peabody, Jr., Mr. Frank Seabury, Mr. J. Murray Forbes, Mr. Robert C. Hooper, and Col. John E. Thayer. The committee is represented by Mr. Thatcher Goddard at the office of the horse show, room 28, No. 40 State street, Boston.

The preliminary arrangements are being completed as fast as can be expected and the premium list and other details will be announced at an early date.

Granite Ratings.

The United Mercantile Agency, Boston, Mass., have filed a bill in equity in the United States Circuit Court, Massachusetts District, against the Marble and Granite Exchange Mercantile Agency Co. of the same city, publishers of the "Blue Book" so called, alleging an infringement by the latter company of the book of credit ratings of the marble, granite and stone trades, copyrighted and published annually by the United Mercantile Agency. In their bill the plaintiffs pray for an injunction to restrain the defendants from further infringement of their copyrights.

THE NEW OFFICIALS.

Commissioner Knowlton Comes Well Recommended.

City Treasurer Gray and Overseer Bass Men of Integrity.

Water Commissioner Baker Gives Wollaston a Representative.

Charles F. Knowlton, the new Commissioner of Public Works, was born in Swampscott, Jan. 31, 1865, and was, therefore, 31 years of age the day on which his appointment was made public. His early education was received in the public schools of his native place and at a private school.

Graduating from school he entered the employ of a wool firm as clerk and from that entered the employ of Norman & Weever in the construction of the Swampscott Water system.

In the spring of 1889 he went to Duluth, Minn., where he was employed in the construction of sewers, bridges, streets, etc.

He remained there ten years and then entered the employ of the Everett Land Co., of Washington, to build the city of Everett, where he had charge of the construction work and the laying out and building of its streets.

Owing to the illness of his father, he returned east last spring, and entered the employ of the Massachusetts Highway Commission, as constructing engineer and has built since that time the State roads in North Adams, Williamstown and West Newbury, the latter being left uncompleted on account of winter weather.

He paid his first visit to Quincy this morning with Mayor Adams, who presented him to Mr. Eaton, the retiring Commissioner.

After a brief inspection of the methods of the office, the two gentlemen made a visit to the city stables and stone crusher.

When seen later by a representative of the LEDGER, Mr. Knowlton said he had made a study of streets and material used in their construction so as to get the best results for the money expended. He considered the first thing was proper drainage, without which it was impossible to have good streets.

Next was the proper construction and the putting on of the material in the proper way, and in this connection, he said, different localities needed different modes of construction, according to the use to which the streets were put and he should have to make a study of Quincy streets before he could tell what form of construction to use.

The great trouble, however, was that people do not attach enough importance to good roads. He considered that they were second in importance to schools, and the appropriation for such should be second to that of schools, for it was better to have good roads if some other departments suffered.

The city of Quincy appropriates a less proportion of its valuation for care of streets than any other city in the Commonwealth. In other words $1.12 of the taxes in Quincy is expended on streets, while in some cities it ran as high as $4.

In conclusion, he expressed a desire that his relations with the people of Quincy would be of a pleasant nature and said that he should enter upon his duties Monday morning.

City Treasurer Gray

Is an ex-Councilman, and a well known citizen. He is 53 years of age and has been a stock broker and in other business, and has been interested in the financial institutions of the city.

A critic of the Council of 1891 said of Mr. Gray: "No member of the Council has stood up more manfully against the most bitter sarcasm and fierce attack of words than Councilman Gray. He is a strong believer in pure and systematic finance. He never votes in the affirmative if he takes the slightest exception to the way of borrowing the money or if he considers the proposed appropriation at all in excess of his ideas of the city's needs. This makes him unpopular during the sessions of the Council, but it is the kind of unpopularity that the city can afford. In pure slang he is a kicker, and we thoroughly believe in the necessity of kickers in all legislative bodies. We earnestly hope that every Council in Quincy's future will have one or more Grays. Socially he is one of the finest members, and even after a heated debate he is as affable to his bitterest opponent as to his fellow partisan.

Overseer Bass

From his long term in the City Council, three years as its President, needs no extended introduction to LEDGER readers. He is well acquainted with city affairs and is well adapted for the position to which he has been appointed.

The Assessors.

Israel Waterhouse of Wollaston and B. R. Redman of Atlantic have both served on the Board of Assessors, and their reappointment will strengthen the board.

Water Commissioner Baker.

The appointment of Mr. C. T. Baker gives Wollaston a worthy representative on the board of Water Commissioners, but at the same time leaves the Republicans without a representation. James H. Stetson, who retires, has been on the board since it was created. Mr. Baker has resided in Quincy since 1875, his birthplace having been Boston. He has served acceptably in the City Council.

W. R. Tyler, the head master of the Adams Academy, and ex-Congressman Everett, who preceded him, are the new members of the Board of Managers of Adams Academy.

Hon. W. B. Rice and ex-Mayor Porter are again on the Board of Park Commissioners, and Mr. Pfaffman, who was appointed late in 1895 continues.

J. A. McDonnell is transferred from the Park Commissioners to the Board of Health.

The most comment is heard concerning the appointment of Commissioner of Public Works; many believing we should not go out of the city for a man. The LEDGER reserves comment until Monday.

DR. DAVIS REPLIES.

Good Reason for Not Using Anti-Toxine.

Quotes Authorities Which Are Unfavorable to it.

Denies Emphatically That It Would Have Saved His Patients.

To the Editors of the Ledger:

In your issue of Jan. 29, an article appeared in regard to the cases of diphtheria under my care, which would lead one to suppose that the use of anti-toxin would have saved some or all of them, which I deny.

In the first place the cases were very malignant, which opinion is confirmed by the physicians, who were called in consultation, and they are men of experience in this disease.

In the interview published the statement is made that "the opinions of the leading physicians of the country are universally in favor of the remedy." This is not so. The most determined opposition to the use of anti-toxin comes from prominent regular school physicians and journals, from which allow me to quote.

In the February "Medical Brief" is as follows: "The really scientific, eminent, conservative men in the profession who love truth for its own sake, and are capable of judicial investigation and an unbiased verdict, are beginning to send in reports on anti-toxin. One and all condemn it, and demonstrate conclusively that its use has really increased the mortality of diphtheria."

As instance, we cite the two able and impartial papers on the subject, read before the New York Academy of Medicine by Doctors William Henry Porter and William Vissman, lecturer on Pathology and Clinical Microscopy, at the New York Polyclinic.

Dr. Porter says in American Medico-Surgical Bulletin as follows: In the practical application of diphtheria, anti-toxin, from a clinical standpoint, we find the common statement that anti-toxine of diphtheria is of avail, only when it is used early and in the mild cases of the disease. In the later stages, and when the disease is of a severe type, the anti-toxin is of little value, and should not be used; in the diptheria with mixed infections it has no influence of value. Neither does it render the human subject immune to diphtheria, but rather it tends to lower the nutritive resistance of the living cells of the body, and thus increases the susceptibility to the disease."

"Yet in the face of all these statements which have been made by the experimental biologists, innumerable statistics are being published which appear to prove conclusively that the mortality from diphtheria has been greatly reduced by the introduction and use of the diphtheria anti-toxin. The real facts however, appear to be as follows:

"The diagnosis of diphtheria for a long time was based upon the presence of Klebs-Loeffler bacilli in the throat. The presence of the bacillus, even in the absence of clinical manifestations constituted a true case of diphtheria. This naturally swelled the total number of the mild cases of diphtheria that would in all probability have recovered upon almost any rational plan of treatment. This single factor has greatly increased the total number of cases, and it alone helped largely to lower the percentage of fatal cases. The severe cases not ameniable to the anti-toxin treatment, one eliminated, which again helps to lower the apparent mortality.

"Then a large percentage of cases having a pseudo membrane in the throat and all the clinical manifestations common to diphtheria, and in which the mortality runs high in consequence of the mixed infections, but in which the examiners failed to find the Klebs-Loeffler bacillus, have been excluded in comp ling the statistics. Of this class some observers put the number as high as thirty or forty per cent. of all cases of diphtheria.

"All of the above enumerated classes of cases have helped to keep down the apparent fatality of diphtheria. If now, some of the first-class, which, from a clinical standpoint, never had true diphtheria, are deducted as they should be, and the two other classes added, the true and total mortality from diphtheria will be found not to have been perceptibly lowered.

"On the other hand, there appears to be an accumulation of evidence which, in the near future, and in the absence of any severe epidemic, will show conclusively, that the mortality from diphtheria has been raised rather than lowered, by the employment of diphtheria anti-toxin."

Bad dreams distress the man whose digestion is out of order. Constipation creates more dreams than are in the infernal regions. People who are troubled with constipation sleep badly and restlessly. Sometimes they cannot sleep at all, and when they do sleep, the dreams come. It doesn't take so very long to wear a man out with that sort of thing. He gets up in the morning feeling worse than he did when he went to bed. He is listless and without energy. The chances are he is dizzy, has "heartburn," palpitation, sees black spots before his eyes, has headache and is bilious. What nonsense it is to let a condition of that sort continue. Nine-tenths of all the sickness in the world comes from constipation and neglect of it. It is a simple thing to cure if you go about it right. It's a bad thing and a serious thing if you don't take the right medicine. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are designed for the cure of constipation. The "Pellets" are tiny, sugar-coated granules. One is a laxative, two a mild cathartic. Everybody who has ever used them has a good word for them. They have prevented more serious illness than any other remedy ever sold. Druggists sell them, and an honest druggist will not try to sell you something else.

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser is the greatest family doctor book ever published. It explains human physiology and the laws of life and health in plain yet scientific language. It has had a tremendous sale; 680,000 copies at $1.50 each, bound in cloth. The present free edition is the same in all respects except that it is bound in strong manilla paper covers. A copy will be absolutely given away to anyone who sends 21 one-cent stamps to pay cost of mailing only, to World's Dispensary Medical Association, No. 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

Engineer for Commissioner.

Editors of Daily Ledger:

Your articles by "Progress" on the improvement of Hancock street contains some good ideas. When this improvement is carried out it should be done by the Massachusetts Highway commission and not by the city. This commission has been or soon will be petitioned to improve Washington street, and they will undoubtedly be asked to continue the work from year to year, until the Boston line is reached.

I think "Progress" would find it impossible without police surveillance to keep the heavy traffic on the paved side of the street.

A few days ago the LEDGER stated editorially that Mayor Quincy had decided to appoint a business man for superintendent of streets rather than an engineer, the conclusion to be drawn of course was that it would be better also for this city to do the same. The LEDGER should have given Mayor Quincy's reasons which were that the office is well supplied with engineers, namely an executive engineer, a sewer engineer, also one for street laying out and he also draws on the city engineer. Such men as ex-Mayor Matthews and Curtis think an engineer is the proper man for the head of the department.

For our city it requires no argument to show that an engineer is the best man for Commissioner of Public Works, as he has no staff and must do his own engineering, or has been done heretofore, do without as a ride over the city will show. ■.

Young Men's Christian Association.

The Y. M. C. A. had the largest boys' gymnasium class this morning in its history, twenty-seven boys being on the floor.

The Y. M. C. A. is planning for a crowd at the men's meeting in the Presbyterian church tomorrow afternoon. In addition to his confidential talk Mr. Roberts will also sing.

Sure to be Adopted.

There was an intervisitation of the Y. M. C. A. at Brockton, Wednesday, and Quincy participated. The Enterprise says: "The need of a social something" was the topic chosen by Delevare King of Quincy, who had prepared a paper on the subject. The paper was read by Secretary A. C. Colton of Quincy. The ideas set forth were for numerous original socials essions for evenings, which would bring the people in touch with the associations wherever they might be tried. The members would be sure to enjoy parties of this sort, and many would be interested in the work from observations they would make while guests of the association. The plans outlined in the paper are sure to be adopted by many branches of the Y. M. C. A., as they met with universal favor when read yesterday.

Castle Square Theatre, Boston.

Verdi's masterpiece "Il Trovatore" will be continued another week at the Castle Square Theatre. This is in response to the unanimous request of the theatre's patrons who have found the theatre filled at every performance and a consequent difficulty in securing seats. Trovatore, the Twenty-eighth opera produced by the Castle Square Opera Company, has proved the greatest success of them all. Not only are the members of the company excellently cast, but the opera itself is produced in the same thorough manner that has been the source of so much comment during the long season. Monday evening next, Feb. 3, will witness the opening of the Gilbert and Sullivan Season with that favorite opera "Iolanthe." Mr. Rose promises an adequate production, which has come to mean, when used by him, that the opera will be placed upon the stage with every detail that experience can suggest and money buy.

Keith's New Theatre, Boston.

Maggie Cline, the Irish Guilbert, is to lead the attractive bill of entertainment provided for the patrons of Keith's New Theatre, Boston, next week. She is without doubt the cleverest in her special line of work in the vaudeville profession, and one of the highest salaried vocalists. There is to be the customary strong bill of first class vaudeville artists, including some European novelties never seen in this country before. Keith's has gained an almost national reputation as being the most popular amusement resort for women and children in America, as every provision is always made for their comfort, and they are as well taken care of as in their own homes.

Our stock of billheads is large, and was bought when the cost was less than now. We can quote you low prices for lots of 1,000 to 5,000.

Sultan's Prestige Will Ultimately Restore Order.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—Prime Minister Salisbury delivered a speech here last night, in the course of which he rebutted the statements made by John Morley to the electors at Arbroath, concerning the Monroe doctrine. Lord Salisbury said:

"I have been held up as the denouncer of the Monroe doctrine. As a matter of fact, although the Monroe doctrine is no part of international law, my dispatch to Mr. Olney, the secretary of state for the United States, supported it as a rule of policy in the strongest and most distinct terms.

"But when I stated in that dispatch, and reiterate now, that, as a rule of policy, we are the entire advocates of the Monroe doctrine, we mean the Monroe doctrine as President Monroe understood it. In that sense you will not find any more convinced supporters than we are."

Lord Salisbury then turned abruptly to the Armenian question, and he reproached the religious communities with laboring under a mistake when they supposed that England had bound herself in honor to succor the Armenians, which means to go to war with the sultan, in order to force him to govern the Armenians.

The Berlin treaty, Lord Salisbury said, merely bound the signatory powers that if the sultan promulgated certain reforms they would watch over the execution of those reforms. Nothing more. He did not think anyone could interpret that as an understanding to go to war. As to the Cyprus convention, Lord Salisbury continued, it contains no trace of an understanding to interfere in behalf of the sultan's subjects.

"I was concerned in the drafting of both these conventions," Lord Salisbury said, "and nothing would have induced me to pledge my country to such a desperate undertaking."

The speaker reminded his hearers that the reforms which the sultan had recently accepted, although very good reforms, could not be expected to produce good government in two months.

"They require time to work out," the speaker went on to say. "They would require time in a civilized community, and much more so in a savage and fanatical community. I hope they will have a beneficent government as things progress."

Lord Salisbury then continued by saying: "Meantime, by spreading among the Turks the feeling that their dominion was threatened, these reforms have unfortunately led to the perpetration of horrors which can only be compared with the days of Genghis Khan and Tamerlane. I am aware that many influential people aver that this was done by the sultan and his government with set purpose.

Excuses Made For the Sultan.

"My own opinion is that the sultan's government is weak, wretched, impotent and powerless; but it is a dream to imagine that he ordered the perpetration of those cruelties. In my judgment there is no ground for thinking so. It was race faction and creed faction, driven to the highest point in their most corrupt and most horrible form, which brought upon the wretched Armenians these terrible sufferings.

"If you ask why we have not interfered, I can only answer for England that we could have threatened what I may call annoyances in the seizing of customs here and there; but when you are dealing with the rising of a whole fanatical population against a population with whom they have been at bitter emnity for ages, and who are situated in mountains, far removed from the seashore, you are deceiving yourselves if you imagine that England's arm, long as it is, could have done anything in mitigation. Nothing but a military occupation could have done it, and England does not possess the power for military occupation at that distance.

"Mr. Gladstone wrote in a letter that England could cope with five or six Turkeys. That was a most ill-judged and rash observation. If the sultan would meet us on the open sea, undoubtedly we could cope with five or six sultans. But it is not worth arguing the possibility of England occupying these inaccessible provinces. I am not bound to answer the question why Europe did not interfere. I say, confidentially, that none of the powers wished to interfere, and I believe their view is that, with patience, the sultan's prestige, which is the only power left in the country, will ultimately re-establish order and allow industry and commerce to take their usual secure course.

"That is their view, and it is our duty to give the sultan time. It is not for me to pass judgment on that view, but no other remedy has been suggested. It is some encouragement to find that already some degree of order is being restored. If you do not act with the great powers, you must act against them, and produce calamities far more awful and terrible than the Armenian atrocities."

In conclusion, Lord Salisbury referred to the recent patriotic demonstrations in the colonies in the face of the threatened foreign complications, and said: "I care not how much we are isolated, if we are united. An example has been set which will shed a beneficent light on the latest generations of Englishmen."

Lord Salisbury, at the opening of his speech, referred to the recent Transvaal crisis as throwing a lurid light upon what might happen if home rule were granted to Ireland. As soon as the Transvaal was in trouble, he pointed out, it applied to the foreign powers, instead of to England, for support.

Salisbury Censured.

An editorial in The Chronicle (Liberal) this morning describes Lord Salisbury's speech as "the most amazing utterance that ever fell from the lips of the governor of a great empire at the crisis of its fortune. Lord Palmerston, in his wildest after-dinner escapades, could not have beaten it. It will do England grievous harm in the eyes of the world. He bestowed but one word upon America, and it had better have been unspoken. We take leave to tell him that he is playing with fire again. He should have said either less or more. His confession of failure, with regard to Armenia, is a most ignominious admission."

The Times says of the speech: Lord Salisbury's tone, with reference to Armenia, was apologetic, and his explanations were rather unusual. But they will convince all fair-minded men that the fault does not lie with the British government.

CHARGES GROUNDLESS.

Cup Defender Fully Exonerated by the Investigating Committee.

Dunraven Should Have Heard All the Evidence.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—A meeting of the New York Yacht club was held at the clubhouse last night. The meeeting was called for the purpose of presenting the report of the special committee that investigated the Dunraven charges.

Commodore Brown called the special meeting of the club for 9 o'clock last night. All was bustle and excitement up to the hour of meeting. The members of the committee present were Captain A. T. Mahan, U. S. N.; J. Pierpont Morgan, ex Secretary W. C. Whitney and George L. Rives. The only absentee was Hon. E. J. Phelps, who is out of the city.

LORD DUNRAVEN.

Promptly at 9 o'clock Commodore Brown called the meeting to order, and after the secretary called the roll the report of the investigating committee was read. In the absence of E. J. Phelps, who was chairman throughout the investigation, the report was read by J. P. Morgan.

Report Unanimously Accepted.

During the reading, every point made elicited hearty cheers and applause. When Mr. Morgan had finished, ex-Commodore Smith moved that the report be received, accepted and adopted; that the thanks of the club be tendered to the committee for their very able and exhaustive communication, and that the committee be discharged. This was seconded and adopted unanimously.

C. OLIVER ISELIN.

After reviewing the evidence in detail and explaining fully its efforts to obtain all the facts possible bearing upon the controversy, the committee states its conclusion as follows:

Upon a careful consideration of the whole case, the committee are unanimously of the opinion that the charge made by Lord Dunraven, and which has been the subject of this investigation, had its origin in mistake; that it is not only not sustained by evidence, but is completely disproved, and that all the circumstances indicated by him as giving rise to his suspicion are entirely and satisfactorily explained.

They deem it, therefore, but just to Mr. Iselin and the gentlemen concerned with him, as well as to the officers and crew of the Defender, that the committee should express emphatically their conviction that nothing whatever occurred in connection with the race in question that casts the least suspicion upon the integrity or propriety of their conduct.

And the committee are not willing to doubt that if Lord Dunraven had remained present throughout the investigation, so as to have heard all the evidence that was introduced, he would of his own motion, withdrawn a charge that was so plainly founded upon mistake, and that has been so unfortunate in the publicity it has attained, and the feeling to which it had given rise.

After transacting some financial business, which had nothing to do with the Dunraven-Defender case, the meeting adjourned.

Dunraven Rebuked.

LONDON, Feb. 1. — An interview was sought last night with Lord Dunraven, but he refused to express an opinion or to speak for publication on the decision of the investigating committee of the New York Yacht club.

The Chronicle congratulates the Dunraven committee upon their studied courtesy and consideration when the complete demolition of Lord Dunraven's monstrous charges might have justified the severest censure. "The only course open to him," says The Chronicle, "is an instant and complete apology."

The Times, in an editorial, expresses the greatest respect for the committee, the only possible objection to the composition of which, in The Times' opinion, is that the legal and business element somewhat outweighed the expert element. It is not quite obvious, The Times continues, why they declined to investigate other charges than the immersion charge. While some grounds for the committee's decision are undeniably strong and pertinent, others appear to be of a less cogent nature.

Proceeding then to call in question some of the findings as inconclusive, The Times says: The language adopted by the committee will seem unduly severe when it is remembered that the charge was not made public by Lord Dunraven until it had already been published by the cup committee in New York. It is to be regretted, also, that the committee were unable to take a wider view of their functions and to judge the whole case on its merits. The result of the inquiry is to acquit Mr. Iselin and his friends of a charge which was not brought against them. But it can hardly be said to have cleared in a satisfactory manner the real matter at issue.

HELD AS A SUSPECT.

Mrs. Quinlan May Know Something About Her Sister's Death.

Motives For the Crime Are as Yet Unknown.

Mysterious Tragedy Which Has Startled Residents of the Hub.

BOSTON, Feb. 3.—When the murderer of Mrs. Sophia Grant left the kitchen of her Brighton street house, Charlestown district, Saturday night, the retreat was perfectly covered. Mrs. Grant lived with her sister, Mrs. Quinlan, who left the house at 9 o'clock. Returning at 11 and receiving no answer to the bell, she secured a key and found her sister prone on the kitchen floor in a pool of blood. There were five terrible wounds in the back of her head, three of which fractured the skull.

Mrs. Ida Quinlan, the younger sister of Sophia Grant, has been seized upon as the fruits of police enthusiasm and lies weeping in a cell at station 15. There is almost no evidence against her, save that she was the last to see the living Sophia Grant and the first to find her dead.

No motive for the murder can be discovered. And yet the murderer must have been animated by the most passionate hatred or by the most frenzied insanity. Not alone was Mrs. Grant killed instantly by a tremendous blow delivered from behind, but her prostrate body was pounced upon and hacked by repeated assaults with some rough, heavy instrument, delivered with quick ferocity.

Mrs. Grant is more commonly known as Mrs. McLeod, she having resumed her maiden name after having separated from her husband, James Grant, two years ago. The McLeods knew nothing of this mysterious marriage until a year after their sister left her husband. Mr. Grant is said to be in the dry goods business in Pawtucket, R. I.

Mrs. Quinlan was placed under arrest yesterday at the house where the murder was committed. She was taken to station 15 much against her will. When the sergeant arrived at the station house with his prisoner she was first taken into the guardroom. There she was severely cross-examined as to her part in the Saturday night affair.

Sergeant Fessenden followed up several clews, bringing to light a hatchet, a shovel and a heavy stove-lifter. He requested Mrs. Quinlan to remove the dress she was wearing at the time. It was the same garment she wore Saturday night when she Directed the Officers to Her Home.

The dress and the hatchet, shovel and stove-lifter will be taken to Professor Wood of Harvard. He will be requested to ascertain if certain stains which are upon the garment and each of the three instruments are blood stains or otherwise.

Mrs. Quinlan, after undergoing the cross-examination, was placed in a cell In the afternoon she complained of being sick, and a physician was summoned to attend her. He made an examination of the woman. Briefly, it is his belief that the woman's condition is similar to the condition of persons whom he has examined previously, after which he has pronounced their case as bordering closely upon delirium tremens.

It seems Mrs. Quinlan's husband, who is a freight conductor, ceased to live with his wife some time ago, and made no secret of the fact that his action was due to Mrs. Quinlan's drinking habits and bad temper.

During this time he has allowed his wife sufficient money to garb herself and children, but not enough to squander in liquor. This, it is said, has occasioned constant friction, the woman sending messengers to her husband demanding more money.

David Quinlan is a very popular man in Charlestown, known to be a man of domestic habits and good-natured disposition. But the location, the occupation, the character of the man Grant, remain a mystery to the police.

Thus two women, one in jail, the other dead, have both been married and both separated from their respective husbands.

Would Have Missionaries Withdrawn.

HARTFORD, Feb. 3.—Rev. Frank Dixon, pastor of the South Baptist church, last night preached a vigorous sermon on "The Efforts Now Making to Entangle the United States In the Turkish Difficulty." He thought the United States had no right to interfere in the Armenian troubles, and he characterized the resolutions recently adopted in congress as the work of professional politicians. Mr. Dixon also thought the American missionaries in Turkey should be withdrawn, and all attempts to spread Christianity there suspended, rather than jeopardize American interests. He blamed England for not coming to the aid of the Armenians, as that nation, he said, was alone responsible for their safety.

Slide, Fire and Explosion.

ROCKLAND, Me., Feb. 3.—A reef of limestone containing 100,000 cubic feet toppled over at the Cobb Lime company's quarry at Meadows yesterday, the mass crushing the pumphouse in falling. The machinery was demolished, and fire started in the ruins. This fire ignited large quantities of giant powder, and the discharge created great alarm for miles around. The loss is $4000, and work will be delayed four weeks.

Half a Century of Illegal Marriages.

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 3.—The authorities have discovered that the new law requiring all persons performing the marriage ceremony to register yearly is identical with one enacted 70 years ago, which has long been a dead letter. The authorities state there has not been a legal marriage in Rhode Island for 50 years, and will apply to the legislature to have the acts of all unlicensed clergymen made valid.

Quincy's Advisers.

BOSTON, Feb. 3.—The advisory cabinet of business men appointed by Mayor Quincy formally organized Saturday. It is composed of Jerome Jones, James P. Stearns, Robert M. Burnett, Andrew G. Webster, A. Shuman, John C. Cobb and Jonathan A. Lane. Mr. Lane was chosen chairman of the committee and John C. Cobb vice chairman. The committee voted to meet once in two weeks.

Suicides' Busy Day.

BROOKLYN, Feb. 3.—One woman and two men committed suicide in this city yesterday. The sensational suicide, however, was that of Mrs. Augusta Schwarz, a wealthy widow. For some time past she had been a constant sufferer from neuralgia, and that, together with the fact that her husband, Anton Schwarz, had been found dead, about a year ago, under peculiar circumstances, had given her great mental worry. She shot herself through the mouth, and had placed several rubber tubes over the gas jets and run them across the bed where she lay. An empty bottle which had contained laudanum was also found in her room. Henry Burnz, 50 years old, killed himself by drinking a mixture of strychnine and lager beer, during a fit of temporary insanity, because he was reduced from the position of foreman to that of conductor on the Reade avenue trolley line. Raynor E. Rogers, 36 years old, shot himself in the head, and died soon afterward.

Too Much Water.

MADISON, Miss., Feb. 3.—A terrific rain fell here, washing away bridges and roadbeds all through this section. The water at Calhoun station was the highest for 30 years. Rains in the past 48 hours in the vicinity of Canton have caused the most destructive overflow known in this section for 20 years. Houses are flooded, and in some cases the inmates were awakened by water coming into their houses. The Illinois Central railroad is submerged and many bridges destroyed. An entire family of children were drowned on the Reid place, four miles from Canton, the parents having gone to a festival and the dwelling being flooded before their return.

Duestrow Convicted of Murder.

UNION, Mo., Feb. 3.—The celebrated case of Dr. Arthur Duestrow, the St. Louis millionaire, who has been on trial during the past month for the cold-blooded murder of his wife and baby, two years ago, ended yesterday, the jury returning a verdict of guilty in the first degree. After arguments that took up the greater portion of Saturday, and lasted until almost midnight, the case was given to the jury, the members of which went to rest without considering it. Sunday morning the jury took up the case, and on the first ballot unanimously found the defendant guilty of murder in the first degree.

It will seat 15,000 people when finished.

FORMOSA PORTS OPEN

To Subjects of Powers Having Commercial Treaties With Japan.

Long Step Toward the Island's Development.

A Decided Advantage to Those Interested In Oriental Trade.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—The Japanese legation in this city has received an important cablegram from the foreign office of Japan, with directions to make it public, by the terms of which the rich island of Formosa, which Japan acquired from China, will be opened to trade and commerce. The declaration is as follows:

"Order and tranquility having been established in Formosa, the Japanese government grants the following privileges and facilities to the subjects, citizens and vessels of treaty powers being in or resorting to Formosa: First, the subjects and citizens of powers having commercial treaties with Japan may reside and trade in Formosa at Tamsui, Kelung, Amping, Tai-Wan-Fu and Takao, and vessels of such powers may visit and carry cargoes to and from the ports and harbors of Tamsui, Kelung, Amping and Takao; second, notwithstanding the exceptional conditions of affairs in Formosa, the treaties of commerce and navigation and the tariffs and arrangements between Japan and other powers are, so far as they are applicable, extended to the subjects, citizens and vessels of such powers being in or resorting to Formosa, it being at the same time understood that all persons availing themselves of the above enumerated privileges and facilities shall obey all decrees and regulations which may at any time be in force in Formosa."

Existing and Now In Force

Since the acquisition of Formosa by Japan there has been considerable speculation by merchants and others interested in Oriental trade as to the policy Japan would pursue, and the above cablegram indicates the purpose of the government of the mikado to be an enlightened one, having for its object the free development of the industries and commerce of the island.

The places named, it is believed here, are the principal towns of the island, and it is understood that towns excluded from the second list is an interior point, the other four being ports.

It is supposed that trading vessels in the Pacific will arrange hereafter for regular stops at some of the ports.

A Quaker City Blaze.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 3.—Chestnut street was visited early Sunday morning by one of the fiercest fires this city has known for years. The big seven-story building of Charles Hazeltine and the adjoining five-story structure of the American Baptist Publication society and the American Baptist Historical society were almost totally destroyed. The buildings damaged by fire and water and falling walls were the four-story dry goods house of Homer, Leboutillier & Co., the dwelling house owned by the Wistar estate and the Hotel LaFayette. On either side of the main entrance to the Hazeltine building were the piano warerooms of Hallett & Davis and of Steinway & Co. A conservative estimate places the aggregate loss at close to $2,000,000. There were about 250 guests in the LaFayette hotel. While there was considerable confusion in the hotel, the guests, barring a few fainting woman, kept cool heads, and all were removed in safety. Many of the guests rushed from their rooms in their night clothes.

Can't Fight For a While.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 3.—Parson Davies and several members of his aggregation passed through here yesterday, en route to El Paso, Tex. He stated, in an interview, that Choynski is in no condition to make any more matches for the present, for he is suffering from an abscess in the ear and from over-training. Choynski, who expected to challenge the winner of the Maher-Fitzsimmons fight, will not be able to go into training for four or five months, so the "Parson" declares.

Old Warship Unearthed.

HALIFAX, Feb. 3.—Workmen in the imperial navy yard here were digging a trench in which to sink a grounding anchor, when they found their progress obstructed by the remains of an old-fashioned British man-of-war. The timbers are four inches thick, of oak, and in a splendid state of preservation, notwithstanding the fact that they have been imbedded for probably a century. How the hull got there is a mystery.

Walls Fell In.

PARIS, Feb. 3.—A terrible accident, resulting in the killing of eight persons and the wounding of 60, occurred yesterday at Manlevrier. The accident was due to the collapse of the village church. Mass was being celebrated, and the structure was comfortably filled. Suddenly the walls fell. The roof descended upon the struggling throng beneath, and it is surprising that no more than eight were killed.

Not Guilty.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 3.—The jury in the Colt case at Circleville returned a verdict of not guilty late Saturday night. The jury were out three days. Colonel Colt was indicted for manslaughter. He commanded the militia which fired into the mob at Washington Courthouse, October, 1894. The verdict is of vital interest to the National Guard of the state.

Death For Both.

MARION, Ills., Feb. 3.—Frank Thompson and Willis Sanders met at Johnson City, a new town near here. Both began shooting. Both were mortally wounded, Thompson receiving a bullet in the spine, and his opponent being shot through the lungs. Sanders suspected Thompson of intimacy with his wife.

What Next?

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—After an apparent struggle with ancient and modern history for the past six months, the patent office has just granted to a Brooklyn inventor letters patent covering the up-to-date article of female apparel known as bloomers.

AN OUT-OF-TOWN man for commissioner naturally provokes considerable comment. Many think that it was unnecessary, and that it was an affront to men in the city who are just as capable of filling the position. They claim that a Quincy man would know better the peculiar needs of the city, and knowing also the resources would not be extravagant in demands upon the taxpayers. That the failure in the past to give Quincy the best of streets should not be laid wholly at the door of the commissioners, but to the meagre appropriations. Our new commissioner tells us at the outset, that they are small; not only small, but less in proportion to valuation than any other city in the commonwealth. Doubtless, too, he can more readily convince the City Council that the department must have more money than any Quincy man could. An out-of-town teacher generally succeeds better in a small city or town than does a native born young man or young lady, with whose history every gossiper is acquainted, and perhaps it will be so with a commissioner.

The city charter provides that a person to be eligible for appointment to most of the city officers shall be a resident of the city for at least one year, but the commissioner of public works is an exception, the other positions being superintendent of schools, chief of police, and chief engineer of the fire department. It has never been found necessary to import a man for either of the last two positions, but other small cities find it advantageous to secure an out-of-town man for police marshal, and Quincy schools prosper under superintendents from other fields.

Perhaps Mayor Adams found it necessary to go out of town because there was too much rivalry for the position among Quincy aspirants. While he would have liked to reappoint ex-Commissioner Ewell, he doubtless felt that he could not consistently go out of his party, and to have appointed either Mr. Eaton, Mr. Shea or Mr. Fallon would have caused a split among the Democrats. By selecting an out-of-town man, he has in a great measure removed the office from politics, and the same independent business administration which the people expect of Mayor Adams, they will doubtless receive also from Commissioner Knowlton. The new official has a pleasing address, and has passed muster under the scrutiny of Henry H. Faxon. With a Mayor 29 years of age, and a commissioner 31, Quincy has a young vigorous team from which much is expected.

Commodore Pettengill presided and the business of the evening was put through with dispatch. The report of the treasurer, Mr. James S. Whiting, showed the total receipts for the year from all sources to have been $1,373.68; the expenditures, $1,348.64, leaving a balance on hand of $25.04.

The secretary's report was as follows:

Total number of members during season, 196.

Number of members admitted, 1895, 20.

Number of members, residents elsewhere, 58.

Total number of yachts enrolled, 92.

Average number of yachts entered (a decrease of 9 over preceding seasons) 7.

Both of the above reports were accepted.

It was voted to proceed to the election of officers and Messrs. Edwin Newcomb, Amos Merritt, Harold B. Faxon and H. F. Spear were appointed to receive and count votes, and the voting began.

While the committee were counting the ballots the following business was transacted:

COMMODORE PETTENGILL.

Voted, That the club become a member of the Yacht Racing association of Massachusetts and that the Commodore be a committee to appoint a member to represent the club at the association.

Article seven of the by-laws was amended by the addition of the following: "Members who are absent from Massachusetts during the whole fiscal year, commencing on the first Saturday in February, shall be exempt from their dues for such year, provided they give notice of their intended absence to the Secretary."

That section of the same article relating to delinquent members, was amended so as to read: "Members in arrears on the first day of June shall be notified by the Treasurer of such indebtedness and may be debarred from all Club privileges until the same be paid. If the dues of a member remain unpaid on the first day of August the Treasurer shall cause his name to be posted in the Club House, and his name may be erased from the list of members by the Executive Committee," etc., etc.

The executive committee was authorized to select and adopt some device or insigna for caps.

Paragraph four of article four of the by-law was amended by the addition of the following words: "And give to the owner of each yacht measured a certificate of measurement."

Section two of chapter three of the rules and regulation was amended by the addition of the following words: "the fee for which shall be one dollar."

Section six of chapter three of the rules and regulations was amended by substituting the words "half raters," for "jib and mainsail yachts."

The following resolve was adopted: "That it is the sense of this meeting that the executive committee to consider the matter of securing winter quarters for the club in the centre."

The result of the ballot was then announced and the following were declared elected:

Commodore,—Charles F. Pettengill.

Vice-Commodore,—John W. Sanborn.

Secretary and Treasurer,—James S. Whiting.

Measurer,—William C. Harrison.

The sharpest contest was for measurer—Mr. Harrison receiving 18, a bare majority to 16 for George Crane, and 1 blank. The lowest man elected on the house committee received 20 votes, and he had a close call, for Joseph L. Sturtevant received 19, and Arthur J. Shaw 18.

This is Commodore Pettengill's second year, and his popularity was shown by an unanimous reelection under an Australian ballot. A year ago the LEDGER published a lengthy sketch of the commodore, and todaywe are able to present an excellent portrait.

QUINCY BREVITIES.

Notes from Quincy Point, Wollaston Atlantic, South and West Quincy.

City Council tonight.

Dances will be plentiful this week.

Mayor Quincy of Boston was in town Sunday.

Shall we hear from the new schoolhouses this evening.

Another death was reported from diphtheria at Atlantic, Saturday.

It is reported that the recent ball of Mt. Wollaston lodge of Odd Fellows netted over $100.

The high wind Sunday did considerable damage to the telephone service by crossing the wires, which caused the blows.

The ladies of the Wollaston Baptist church hold a social Wednesday evening, and a pleasing entertainment has been provided.

A communication on the Mayor's appointment of Commissioner of Public Works has been received but too late for this issue.

Mr. Charles Francis Adams, 2d, will have a racing half-rater in the field next season, from the board of Designer, John R. Purdon of this city.—Herald.

The city men were around town yesterday, relieving the streets of the ponds, by making drainage possible. The gutters were all plowed out so that there was not a great deal of water left standing in the streets last night.

The electric lights in the Swedish Lutheran church went out suddenly Sunday evening during the service, but there was no commotion. Those present remained quiet and the lights came on again in a few moments.

Mr. Walter B. Holden left Saturday night for Buffalo, to be present and to usher at the wedding of his friend, Mr. Frank Bartlett Steele, who is to be married Tuesday at Titusville, Penn. Mr. Steele was best man at the Schenkelberger-Harlow wedding in this city last October.

At the last meeting of the Boston Bicycle Club, Dr. W. G. Kendall of Atlantic was elected captain. This is the ninth year he has been honored by such an election, and he is without question the oldest captain in the country, in point of service. He will get his long service medal soon.—Herald.

The Quincy school, Atlantic, has been undergoing a thorough cleaning and disinfecting. On account of the many cases of diphtheria among the children it was deemed advisable to thoroughly renovate the entire building and contents. Several women have been engaged since Saturday and the school is closed today as work will not be completed until night.

HATTIE BENEDICT'S NAPS

First One Lasted Five Weeks and the Second Beats the Record.

MARENGO, N. Y., Feb. 3.—Miss Hattie Benedict, aged 19, four months ago fell asleep, or rather lapsed into a cataleptic trance, and did not awake for five weeks, except at long intervals, when she was conscious for only a few minutes at a time. Once during this period when she awoke her mother hurried to get her some food, but before she could prepare it the girl sank back into a trance. At the end of five weeks she awoke with an acute pain at the base of the brain, but her faculties were in no way impaired, and her general health appeared good, excepting the symptoms stated.

Five weeks ago she fell into another trance, which still continues. Her vital functions appear to be reduced to the lowest point, digestion being at a standstill. Her muscles are rigid, but her heart beats and she breathes regular. During the present trance her heart has shifted three times by muscular contraction to the right side, but this does not appear to have affected its functions. It is thought that she is hazily conscious of her surroundings during these trances, because when she awoke from the former she had some vague recollections of what had happened by her bedside. It is believed by her physicians that these attacks are due to scarlitinal poisoning during her infancy.

A Four-Cornered Fight.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 3.—Ankle deep in mud, with a drizzling rain falling through the darkness on a lonely country road, four men fought a desperate hand to hand conflict with knives. The participants in the fight were St. Louis county farmers. On one side were Henry Segar and his son-in-law, John Tegeman; on the other were Charles and William Gillhaus, brothers, and neighbors to their opponents. William Gillhaus is now dead, and Charles is suffering from dangerous wounds. Neither of the opposite party was hurt. A dispute over the right to drive over a private road on Segar's land was the cause of the fight.

Goes to Van Horn.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—In the contested election case of Van Horn (Rep.) vs. Tarsney (Dem.) from the Fifth Missouri district, elections committee No. 2 of the house decided by a party vote in favor of seating Van Horn. Mr. Tarsney had introduced in the house a resolution to reopen the case and take additional testimony, but the committee opposed it.

Lost In a Fog.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—During a fog, Saturday, Boatman John Ferguson started from Swinburne island to row across to the South beach, Staten Island. The boat also contained Louis von Neres, steward of the island, and his wife. Nothing has been heard of them since.

Anti-Toxin Dangerous in Its Effect —Dangerous to Life.

To the Editors of the Ledger:

Dr. William Vissman, B. A., M. D., New York, says: "From what we have learned from the experiments of Landois, Naunyn, Francke, and many others, we are not justified in the subcutaneous introduction into the human organism of the blood serum of the lower animals; because it does produce a very serious effect even on healthy persons. In diphtheria antitoxin, however, we have a modified serum, which its discoverer informs us is almost indifferent in its effect on the human organism. So far as we can learn from the reports of those who have administered it to man, its effect is far from indifferent. Nearly all are agreed that there are certain disagreeable results from the use of antitoxin.

Among these complications are erythema hemorrhages in the skin, heart weakness, pain in the joints (with or without swelling) which may last for several days. If all of those persons having virulent diphtheria bacilli in their fancies, were treated with anti-toxin, many would be injured for an uncertain benefit to a very few.

After the disease has made such progress that it can be diagnosed the toxin has produced such an effect upon the organism, that, judging from the experiments of Behring, Parks and others, little benefit is to be expected from the anti-toxin. And, since observing the results of experiments on rabbits, it is highly probable that, instead of reducing the mortality of diphtheria, anti-toxin has really increased the death rate."—Amer. Medico. Surg. Bulletin.

The Journal of the American Medical Association reviews editorially the position of the eminent London laryngologist, Lennox Brown, (the worthy succesor of Sir Morrell MacKenzie, M. D.,) who states that after the use of serum theraphy "A greater number of children have been found liable to attacks of cyanosis and faintings with a correspondingly increased demand for nervines and stimulants. Complete recovery is found to be greatly delayed and an unexpected fatal result at a late period is more frequent"

"He calls attention to the increased liability to the most grave complications of diphtheria, viz. anuria, rephritis and cardiac failure. He also alludes to cases in which immunizing serum had produced noxious and even fatal results.

"In view of these facts, the Journal A. M. A. cautions the practitioner to give antitoxin a wide berth, and not make the profession rediculous by too much haste in accepting "every continental fad that is forced upon us."

From Medical Brief, Feb.—All observers unite in saying that anti-toxin is absolutely valueless in septic diphtheria, malignant diphtheria, genuine diphtheria. No man who has ever administered a dose has had sufficient courage to trust it alone. Recourse is always had to local and supporting treatment.

"It has been shown in many instances, especially in the Willard Parker Hospital for children, in New York, that the mortality from this anti-toxin treatment which a year ago promised such favorable results, is now alarmingly high. Not only are paralysis, acute nephritis, convulsions, fatal congestions, of the abdominal viscera and other alarming conditions produced as a result of the treatment, but various septic states follow as remote effects.—Medical Brief.

The Medical Brief contains the following: "At a regular meeting of the New York Academy of Medicine, Dr. Joseph E. Winters, visiting physician of the Willard Parker Hospital, led the discussion upon anti-toxin. His words had the true ring of honest conviction and absolute truth, and greatly disconcerted the advocates of anti-toxin. The following is the substance of his remarks:

"Some months ago, he began, I hoped and expected, in company with the rest of my associates here, that a specific for the toxin of diphtheria had at last been discovered. My experience of the past three months, a personal experience dealing with 150 cases at the Willard Parker Hospital, has been a sad—an extremely sad—disappointment. I am here as the result of that experience—and I regret extremely to say it—to oppose the anti-toxin treatment of diphtheria. I have watched for three months, and I say that not a single case of septic diphtheria has shown one sign of improvement under anti-toxin treatment. I have asked Dr. White at the hospital—and he is here and will bear me out—not to use any treatment in this case and that case, saying that without it the patients would recover. And they did recover.

"Statistics seem to be the principal part of the papers here tonight, but I wonder if you have noticed that a larger part of the statistics consist of elimination. We exclude this and we accept what they say. Dr. Biggs in his paper did not tell you that in December we had eight consecutive recoveries in diphtheria without anti-toxin. At the Foundling Asylum there were fourteen cases of laryngeal diphtheria and twelve recovered without anti-toxin. I can show you by the records that Dr. Biggs has—or did have, for I gave them to him myself—that, in a group of eight cases two were given the first injection on the eighth day and they recovered. Two more were given the first injection on the fourth day, two on the fifth day, and two on the sixth day, and they all died. I can show you further by the records that the stronger the dose, the worse the result; the weaker the dose, the better the result.

"I have daily examined every case sent to Williard Parker hospital for three months. I have seen many cases on the list which Dr. Biggs quoted, in which there was not the slightest clinical evidence of diphtheria. Two little girls who slept in the same crib were brought in. One had mild diphtheria; the other had a normal throat. The first was given three injections; the other was given one. They both recovered.

Dr. Winters paused a moment and there was a burst of encouraging laughter, He resumed: "I wonder if you see the context, gentlemen?"

"Some of these patients, continued Dr. Winters, dramatically, receive what I call make believe treatment. They are included in this list. A little boy, ten years old, was brought in the ambulance. I examined him. There was no evidence of any disease, any throat trouble. He was sent up to the ward and received the treatment. He is on the list—recovered. (Laughter.) A man was brought in. He had a slight tonsilitis. He received antitoxin. He is on the list. (Derisive laughter.)

"Now, gentlemen, you may think this a laughing matter. I am speaking from a strong sense of duty. (Applause.) There are more than a score of cases of that sort which I have examined without finding the slightest evidence of diphtheria. There may have been the bacteria of diphtheria, but not the clinical evidence of the disease. Almost every case examined bacteriologically come back to the hospital from the Board of Health as diphtheria. This is the general statement of men of my profession made to me by physicians in every part of the city. The statements which have been presented are absolutely worthless—and I speak with candor—they show nothing.

"Then Dr. Winters described in detail the unfavorable effects of anti-toxin, as they have come under his observation; the great rise in temperature, the unnatural position of the head, the agonizing pains in the joints.

"There is a difference between individuals in their susceptibility to the same quantity of the same drug, but we have assumed that we were treating animals; that the serum will act on all alike. This difference in susceptibility explains the unfortunate death of Miss Valentine of Brooklyn. It explains the deaths in all the fatal cases I have alluded to.

"When a bacteriological diagnosis, in the absence of any clinical diagnosis can force the poor and unfortunate into a contagious disease hospital, then I say that such a diagnosis becomes a crime.

"Anti-toxin is dangerous in its immediate effects on the kidneys and the nervous centres, dangerous in its effect on the blood, dangerous to life."—Med. Tribune.

DR. F. S. DAVIS.

BRAINTREE.

Mr. Anderson of Quincy has moved into the house recently vacated by Mrs. Adolphus Porter on Holbrook avenue.

Wednesday evening there was a dime party at Pythian hall, under the auspices of the Universalist ladies. It was well attended and well enjoyed.

Since the adoption and pursuance of the plan of issuing notices to all parents whose children are falling below a certain quality of work in their classes, good results have appeared. About one hundred notices have been sent out by the teachers of the different schools. Two-thirds of the pupils thus reported have awakened to the seriousness of their position and have made a quick response by increased diligence and faithfulness in school work and in the home work assigned. So much for the co-operation of parent with teacher. Of the remaining one-third those who have not been transferred to a lower grade are close upon the change. This method of keeping the parent informed if his child is doing less work than he is capable of doing, or inferior work for any cause for which he is directly responsible, throws an additional burden of work upon our faithful teachers, but will aid in keeping the average scholarship at a good standard.

The selectmen have offered the franchise for a street railway through Pond street, to the Braintree Street Railway company. It was at first given out that no franchise would be given unless the company would agree to allow citizens of Braintree to ride on the present system, anywhere within the town limits for 5 cents. This clause has been withdrawn and the company will accept the franchise at its next meeting.

Mr. Azel R. French, with his accustomed generosity, gave all the clerks in his three stores, their annual dinner at Young's hotel last Wednesday afternoon. In the evening they witnessed the Prisoner of Zenda at the Museum.

Church on Fire.

The First Parish church of Dorchester, better known as the Meeting House Hill Unitarian church, was partially destroyed by fire this morning. The alarm was pulled in at 7.25 and at 8 o'clock the structure was a seething mass of flames.

A CHURCH PROBLEM

And Other Notes of Interest from the Quincy Churches.

Rev. E. N. Hardy preached the third sermon in the series of church problems, Sunday morning. "The Relation of Men to the Church." Figures were presented showing a careful research. In his church he found that about 34 per cent. of the attendants were males. He also found that this per cent. was higher than in neighboring Congregational churches, and of other denominations about us. The average of Congregational churches was 33 per cent.

Some charge our church with being puritanic and narrow, but it could not be the great Episcopal and Presbyterian churches, for they wonder we can be so liberal. It was those churches who were not succeeding as well. The Congregational churches were making the best progress. In the Presbyterian churches the attendance of men was no larger than in the Congregational. The Catholic churches according to statistics were not holding their men as well. But the churches have done but little to organize the men, only 8 in 100 in Massachusetts have organizations for men.

As viewed from without the church, the stronghold of the Protestant faith among men is in the South. There from 50 to 75 per cent. attend church, while in Massachusetts only 15 per cent. and in Maine 14 per cent. Divided longitudinally, the central portion leads the East and West. There are few Roman Catholics in the South, while the West was their stronghold. The population of the country was about 60,000,000, while only 20,000,000 were attached to churches. Of these over 6,000,000 were Catholics and about 14,000,000 Protestants. As the church people were only 25 to 30 per cent. of the total it was not easy to see how they could have everything their own way.

The above was the dark side, and there was a bright side. In the first decade not 1 in 5 were church people. At the close of the last century more infidelity existed than today. The church never had such a hold on men as now. Much activity was shown in the colleges, and there was a great change for the better. If such societies as the Free Masons and Odd Fellows could prosper and do good, it showed the church had not organized the men as it should. Men had supported the church but women had done the work. Now that women were entering public life, perhaps the solution was at hand.

Next Sunday Mr. Hardy will discuss the relation of the church to men.

"Wither goest thou" was the subject of Rev. Preston Gurney's sermon Sunday morning, at the Baptist church. Previous to the discourse Mr. A. D. Albee made a few remarks on Sir Joseph Branby, the eminent composer who has just died. The music sung by both the quartette and congregation was by Barnby.

The attendance at the Memorial Congregational church, Atlantic, Sunday, was as it has been recently very large. The pastor preached both morning and evening. The evening service was in the form of a descriptive lecture on Jerusalem and was intensely interesting. Miss Moxon and Miss Coe sang two duets at the evening lecture which were worthy of great praise, being rendered in an exceptionally fine manner.

On Tuesday evening there will be a Union devotional service in the Wollaston Baptist church.

Religious Awakening.

Since the week of prayer there has been considerable religious interest in several of the churches of the city. The Swedish Congregational church on Garfield street has held meetings every evening for the past month and over a score have expressed a determination to lead christian lives.

The First Presbyterian church in its regular meetings has seen good results, over thirty persons having manifested their interest.

The Presbyterian society in Wilson's hall has had a number confess Christ.

In Memoriam.

A public service in memoriam of the late Miss Mary A. Webster was held in the Methodist Episcopal church, Atlantic, Sunday afternoon. There were a great many of the friends present and the order of services were as follows:

Prayer and eulogy, Rev. George B. Shanor.

Letter read from Rev. H. D. Dietz, her former pastor.

Letter read from Mr. Frank E. Parlin, Superintendent of Schools, Natick, Mass.

Resolutions from School Committee of Natick.

Poem, (written by Miss Ruth Bassett expressly for this occasion).

A TRIBUTE.

She has not gone away for long,
But waits within a region fair,
To greet with joy the loving ones,
Who follow on to meet her there

No sorrow now can claim the child,
That God has called ere blest to be,
No earthly pain will ever rest
Upon the soul so pure and free.

No longer can the earthly ties
That held her while she lingered here,
Cling to God's angel, pure and fair,
Though every tie to us is dear.

No tears must fall because our eyes
Can never see her smiling face;
Her soul is nearer to our own,
And yields to us its heavenly grace.

And hand in hand with angels fair,
Her head all wreathed in heavenly flowers,
She whispers that she is God's child;
No longer can we claim her ours.

God bless the hearts that mourn the loved,
And when they gaze up at the skies,
Oh, may they feel that she is near,
And looks on them through starry eyes.

The time is not so very long,
And e'er the end for which we've striven
Is reached, comes rest and great reward;
We gain a lasting life in heaven.

Address on her school life, Mr. Chas. F. Merrick.

Representing Epworth League, Miss Flora Brown.

Representing Sunday School, Mr. John Ramsdell.

Resolutions from Epworth League and Sunday School.

Deadly Dynamite.

The death of George M. Hobbs, the father of Conductor George Hobbs of West Quincy, was briefly noted last week. As an illustration of the deadly power of dynamite, which is extensively used in Quincy, a lengthy report from the Suncook, N. H., Journal is given.

Mr. Hobbs was in the employ of the Boston & Maine railroad and was in charge of the dynamite which was being used for blasting purposes. A gang of men were at work on a ledge a short distance above the passenger station at Hooksett widening the tracks at that point when the accident happened. The holes had been drilled for the explosives. Mr. Hobbs went down an embankment to the chest, just back of the shanty, where the dynamite was stored, and taking four cartridges in his hands started back up the enbankment. When about half way up he tripped his foot on a jutting rock and fell to the ground with the cartridges. Then came the crash, the powerful explosives creating terrible havoc. Mr. Hobbs was literally blown to atoms and the air was thickly filled with flying debris. The shanty was shattered, the ground torn up and bushes wrenched from their roots and blown away, and everything about the locality gave evidence of the power of the destructive element. The remains of the unfortunate man were blown in every direction and the only complete piece of anatomy which could be found was that of one leg from the knee down. One part of the body was found in the river, nearly 400 feet distant, and another was lodged in the limbs of a tree. The skull was also blown to pieces, and there was nothing left of the clothing but shreds. None of the other workmen on the ledge were injured, they being protected by the embankment, but they were shaken considerably by the shock.

Twenty Passengers Hurt.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 3.—An electric car, loaded with about 75 people, was bound in from the beach, and while descending a steep grade the motorman lost control of the car, and it jumped the track and plunged about 50 feet through the sand. Broken legs and ankles, bruises and wounded scalps were numerous, about 20 suffering injury. None of the passengers was fatally hurt.

Too Much Coal.

SHAMOKIN, Pa., Feb. 3.—Fifteen thousand men and boys in the western anthracite coal fields have received orders not to report for duty at the mines until further notice, as the Reading collieries have been shut down for an indefinite period. It is stated that three-quarters time will be the order when work is resumed.

Murphy, Sure Enough.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 3.—The police are now satisfied that they have in custody Clarence Murphy, wanted for the embezzlement of $60,000 from the Salem (Mass.) Savings bank. John D. Eaton, formerly a prominent resident of Salem, identified the prisoner as the defaulter.

Nothing Definite.

ROME, N. Y., Feb. 3.—Notwithstanding rumors to the contrary, a clerk in the Stanwix bank is the authority for saying that up to the present it had not been found that Cashier Barnard, who had committed suicide a few days ago, is a defaulter. Bank Examiner Van Vranken will neither affirm nor deny the defalcation.

The Porte.

The porte is the short name of the sublime porte, which is the official way of speaking of the Turkish government. In the east judicial business is transacted at the city or palace gates. One story says that the sultan of Bagdad put in the portal of his palace a piece of sacred black stone of Mecca, thus making his gate the porte. Another says that Sultan Orkhan built a gorgeous gate to his place in Broussa. Both of these stories are probably untrue so far as they purport to explain the name as applied to the Turkish government. Just as the British court is called the court of St. James and the late French court that of the Tuileries, because their headquarters were in the palaces of St. James and the Tuileries respectively, so the Turkish court got the name sublime porte because its headquarters were in the palace of Bab-i-Humayun, or the Lofty Gate, in Constantinople. The name has been attached to the building in that city which shelters the four principal departments of the government.—New York Sun.

Legal Punning.

We do not mean punning which is legal—for there is no pun which the law authorizes—but punning by members of the profession which calls itself legal. It is credited by The Green Bag to Vice Chancellor Robertson of New York.

The chancellor was listening patiently at chambers to an argumentative conflict over the amount of a fee claimed by a counsel. At the close of the contention, he remarked:

"Let me have your papers and the affidavits of the expert, and I will see what is feasible as to the fee, and will endeavor to see my way to a just solution between the contention on the one side that the fee is a phenomenal one and on the other side that there should not be a nominal fee."

A Woman's Will.

Talk about a woman's will! Why, up in Lansing resides a lady who has enjoyed good health and yet has not been outside the dooryard for 14 years. On one occasion when she returned home too late to get supper for her husband he grumbled and said that he hoped the next time she went out she would break her leg. This led the woman to declare she would never again go outside the yard. Later when the husband died, of remorse probably, she followed the casket to the gate and refused to go farther and from that time has never left the premises.—Kalamazoo Gazette.

A Cranbrook Custom.

At Cranbrook, in Kent, as well as in other places, it was the custom to strew the bride's pathway, not with flowers, but with emblems of the bridegroom's trade; thus a carpenter walked on shavings, a shoemaker on leather parings and a blacksmith on pieces of old iron.—Detroit Journal.

Among the manufacturing states New York stands first, having 850,084 persons engaged in her factories, the output of which reaches the enormous aggregate of $1,711,577,671.

BY STRICT PARTY VOTE

It Is Decided to Censure Bayard For Indiscreet Utterances.

Free Silver Substitute to Bond Bill Passed.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—A resolution censuring Ambassador Bayard for the sentiments expressed by him in his recent English speeches was adopted by the house foreign affairs committee Saturday.

Two resolutions were reported. The first censures Mr. Bayard by name for the language used by him in his Boston and Edinburgh speeches, and incorporated with this was a second resolution, expressing the disapproval of the committee of our representatives abroad discussing American political affairs and displaying partisanship and the condemnation of political parties or other reputable organizations of American citizens.

This conclusion was not reached until the subject of Mr. Bayard's alleged indiscretions had been fully discussed by the committee. Party lines were strictly drawn, the Democrats opposing any censure of Ambassador Bayard, while the Republicans insisted that his offense deserved a rebuke from the American congress.

Twice the proposition was made to the Democrats by the Republicans that if the former would admit that Mr. Bayard's utterances had been indiscreet, the Republicans would agree to a mild resolution, that is, merely an expression of the sense of the house that the ambassador's speeches were indiscreet.

This proposition was refused by the Democrats, Mr. McCreary declaring that they would neither admit that Mr. Bayard had been guilty of indiscretion nor that the house had any power to reprimand him or express its views upon his course. The Democrats argued that the power of appointment of foreign representatives was vested in the president, with the consent of the senate, and that the president and the senate were the only authorities who had jurisdiction over these officials.

Mr. Quigg prepared a general statement of the limitations which diplomatic officers should observe in their public utterances which contained no reference to the Bayard speeches, but this was a milder resolution than most of his colleagues wanted.

It is understood that Mr. Draper, who was absent, and Chairman Hitt were not in favor of strong censure. Several of the new members of the committee—Messrs. Cousins, Pearson, Heatwole and Smith, particularly, have, from the beginning, advocated an unqualified and direct censure, as well as Mr. Newlands, and Messrs. Hitt and Adams on the final vote were recorded with them. Chairman Hitt will report the resolution to the house this week, and a warm debate will doubtless follow. Messrs. McCreary, Money, Turner (Ga.) and other Democrats are preparing speeches in defense of Ambassador Bayard.

For Free Silver.

The long contest over the silver bond bill is at an end in the senate, that body having passed the free silver coinage substitute to the house bond bill by the decisive vote of 42 to 35, a majority of 7 for free silver.

This result was reached at 3 o'clock Saturday, after three hours of caustic debate and sharp parliamentary fencing. The public interest in the culmination of the protracted struggle was shown by crowded galleries and a full attendance on the floor, 77 senators being present and the others paired.

Members of the house crowded the chamber, filling available seats and standing room in the rear and side areas. It had been expected that a final vote would be taken at 2 o'clock, but a conflict of opinion arose as to the agreement, resulting in considerable bitterness and personal feeling. Many amendments were pending when 2 o'clock arrived, and these were summarily cut off by a strict construction of the agreement, although the differences over the agreement itself held off the vote for an hour beyond the time set. The result was such a foregone conclusion that little excitement or surprise was occasioned by the announcement of the passage of the substitute.

The early hours of the session, beginning at 11 o'clock, were given to the closing speeches, including that of Mr. Morrill, the octogenarian of congress, who is still vigorous in speech and thought. The other speeches were under the five-minute rule, being brief and snappy. Mr. Lindsay took occasion to say that in his judgment the president had fulfilled the full measure of his duty in financial affairs and should do no more. If calamity came, as a result of congressional inaction, the president should leave the responsibility where it belonged—on the shoulders of congress.

Another interesting incident occurred when Mr. Gorman was urging that the legislation was fruitless, as it could not receive executive approval. Mr. Morgan called attention to the fact that the duty of congress was to act without executive influence or direction, to which Mr. Gorman with much earnestness replied: "I fully agree to that proposition and only regret that there has not been a closer adherence to it in the past. The senator from Alabama cannot go farther than I to resist encroachments of any executive in giving any suggestions beyond those he is bound to make by the legislation of the United States, and due weight should be given to whatever recommendation he makes, without fear of political power or patronage from the president."

Mr. Mills, who had voted with the silver men on all test motions, changed his vote at the last, and recorded himself as against the passage of the free silver bill.

The bill passed by the senate as a substitute for the house bond bill provides that from the date of the act the mints of the United States shall be open to the coinage of silver, and the dollar shall be of the present weight and fineness, and also provides for the issuance of silver certificates. It further provides for the coinage of the seigniorage now in the treasury, and authorizes immediate issue of certificates upon the same in advance of it being carried. One section of the bill provides that no bank note of less than $10 shall hereafter be issued, and those outstanding of less amount shall be taken up and cancelled as rapidly as possible.

Section 4 provides that the greenbacks and treasury notes shall be redeemed in standard silver dollars or in gold coin, at the option of the treasury, and the greenbacks when so redeemed shall be immediately reissued.

Coppinger Confirmed.

After a two hours' contest in executive session the senate confirmed the nomination of General J. J. Coppinger, a colonel in the army, to be brigadier general, by the decisive vote of 44 to 17. The nomination was sent to the senate very soon after the convening of congress, but had scarcely been made public when protests against confirmation began to pour in from the A. P. A. societies in all parts of the country. After a delay of about six weeks the senate committee on military affairs made an unanimously favorable report to the senate.

The opposition to confirmation was led by Senators Burrows, Gear, Perkins, Teller, Pettigrew, Squire and Wilson, all of made speeches during the course of Saturday's session. Senators Hawley, Bate and Palmer, all members of the committee, championed the general's cause, detailing the results of the investigation of the committee, which, they said, were entirely favorable to General Coppinger.

The opponents of confirmation based their course of action almost entirely upon the fact that Coppinger had been promoted over the heads of 13 colonels who were his seniors in rank, which was dwelt upon as an unjust proceeding. When they were met with the statement that Coppinger was selected because of his superior military record, they asserted that there were others of equally meritorious record.

They also made the point that in case of war the probabilities were altogether favorable to younger men coming to the front. The opposition did not fail to point out that Mr. Coppinger had served in the American army for almost 30 years before he took out naturalization papers, and one senator, at least, said that he would not vote for any man who had fought, as it was admitted Coppinger had, against Italian unity in the Garibaldian wars.

The opponents were taunted with being influenced by the A. P. A. influence and with making war on Coppinger because he was a Catholic in religion, but they resented this imputation to a man. Some of those who voted for confirmation declared that they did so in resentment of the interference of the A. P. A., and declared that otherwise they would have opposed the nomination because of its invidiousness. The debate was a most animated one from start to finish.

Congressional Forecast.

The senate has no well-defined plan for this week's proceedings. There will be no session today. It is possible, though by no means certain, that the finance committee will be able to report on the revenue tariff bill tomorrow, the matter still depending upon Senator Jones (Nev.). If the bill should be reported there will probably be some desultory speech-making based upon it, but the consideration of the measure would scarcely be seriously begun this week, even though a report should be secured as promptly as is hoped by the friends of the bill.

The committee on appropriations will claim a good share of the time that the senate will be in session. The urgent deficiency bill has already been reported, and the military academy and pension bills will be put in early in the week. None of these will excite any prolonged debate, and it is altogether probable that all will be disposed of before the week closes. The Cuban and Monroe doctrine resolutions are also on the calendar and can be taken up at any time.

There is more or less executive business to claim attention, and the general calendar has been growing rapidly as the result of committee work, while the silver bond bill has been claiming the attention of the senate. Under these circumstances the week bids fair to be one of diversified interest, with no one topic claiming attention.

The important features of the week's proceedings in the house will be in connection with the resolution to censure Ambassador Bayard adopted by the foreign affairs committee, and the senate free coinage substitute for the house bond bill. The resolution censuring Mr. Bayard will probably precipitate an exciting contest on the floor, but will doubtless be adopted when it reaches a vote.

The week, except the portion devoted to the bond bill and the Bayard resolution, will be given to a continuation of the work on the appropriation bills.

Zeitounlis Holding Out.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 3.—Reports believed to be fairly accurate state that it is believed that the Zeitounlis are still holding out. The Turks have made seven different attacks upon the town, but all have failed, and their losses are reported to amount to 10,000. It is believed that the Zeitounlis number 15,000 to 20,000, well-armed and provisioned for a year. There is a doubtful report that 4000 Russian Armenians crossed the Persian frontier and defeated the Turks at Ziz, 18 hours from Zeitoun, and have now joined the Zeitounlis.

Died In a Cell.

SING SING, Feb. 3.—William Caesar, the condemned murderer, died suddenly Saturday night in his cell at the state prison. Caesar was sentenced on June 25, 1895, and the day of his execution was set for July 29 of the same year. He was convicted of having murdered a young colored woman, Mary Martin, with whom he had lived. Warden Sage states that a thorough investigation into Caesar's death will be begun. He did not believe that the man had committed suicide.

Body Beheaded.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 3.—An employe of James Lock, who lives on the Alexandria pike in Kentucky, while going to work, found the body of a young woman in a somewhat secluded place about 50 yards from the pike. There were evidences of a fierce struggle, and the astonishing feature of the case is that the victim was beheaded and the head missing. Nothing has been found to establish the identity of the murdered woman or to give a clew to the murderer.

Canadian Nerve.

BUTTE, Mon., Feb. 3.—Complaint comes from settlers in Teton and Choteau counties alleging that the forests on the American side of the boundary have been almost denuded of timber by the Canadians, and that millions of dollars' worth of lumber has been taken during the past few years. The matter has been referred to the secretary of the interior.

Terrell Attending to Business.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 3.—United States Minister Terrell has demanded an indemnity of $100,000 for the burning and pillaging of the American missions at Marash and Kharput. He has also asked for the immediate granting of firmans for rebuilding them.

THE BOSTON MYSTERY.

Linking a Chain of Evidence Against Mrs. Quinlan.

Articles to Be Submitted to Chemical Analysis.

BOSTON, Feb. 4.—The strongest link in the weak chain of clews to the mysterious Mrs. Grant murder in Charlestown, Saturday night, surrounds Mrs. Ida Quinlan, sister of the murdered woman, who is held for a hearing on Feb 11. The significant circumstances are: She seems addicted to the use of liquor, had trouble with Mrs. Grant, was the last to see Mrs. Grant alive and was the first to find her murdered. Inspectors have sent Mrs. Quinlan's dress, a hatchet and stove lifter to Professor Wood of the Harvard medical school to examine for blood stains.

The most important witness, next to Professor Wood, is William D. Doughty, proprietor of the tailoring shop at 40 Perkins street. Mr. Doughty is married, about 35 years old, and lives in Somerville, a few minutes' walk from his place of business, which is near the railroad crossing and about 20 yards from the corner of Brighton and Perkins streets. The Brighton street house where the murder was committed is only a few steps from the corner.

Doughty will swear that he saw the 6-year-old son of Mrs. Quinlan standing alone at this corner between 9 and 9:15 o'clock on the night of the murder, this being the time when the deed is supposed to have been done. The tailor was on his way to his shop and he knew the little boy thoroughly.

Sergeant Fessenden will swear that the boy, at their first interview, said that his mother left him alone near the railroad crossing while she returned to the house with her first purchases.

Mrs. Quinlan's Little Boy's Statement.

The boy had been left alone since that first interview until yesterday afternoon, when three inspectors from headquarters got at him. They found his story changed completely, so that he now says he was with his mother when she returned to the house; that he saw her enter the kitchen and speak to Sophia; that he saw Sophia in the rocking chair, reading the paper, when he and his mother left the house.

The boy tells a detailed story of his trip to Boston with his mother, and the inspectors have learned that it is true. Some influence has evidently been at work on the child.

Maggie Brennan, waitress in Cauley's, will testify to the several visits of the Quinlan woman there, the visits most in question being those at 9 and 9:30 o'clock.

The police believe that if Ida Quinlan is guilty, she killed her sister when inflamed, slightly, with rum, at the end of a quarrel. Witnesses will be called to show the police record of the woman, her poor reputation for sobriety and her violent temper. Their religious difference is considered not a motive reasonable enough for murder.

O'Sullivan at Liberty.

WORCESTER, Mass., Feb. 4.—In the superior criminal court yesterday, Cornelius O'Sullivan was arraigned on the charge of manslaughter in causing the death of Harry Dolan. He pleaded guilty, and the district attorney stated that he would not ask for sentence, considering the circumstances of the case. O'Sullivan was allowed to depart on furnishing bonds. Dolan died as the result of a blow received in an altercation with O'Sullivan at a dance last November.

On Trial For Arson.

WORCESTER, Mass., Feb. 4.—The case of the commonwealth vs. Benjamin F. Townsend of Rutland, charged with arson, in setting fire to the barn of George Calhoun of Rutland on the night of Nov. 25, at which the latter's son, George P. Calhoun, aged 30 years, lost his life, was begun in the superior court yesterday before Judge Maynard. The evidence, which is mainly circumstantial, goes to show that Townsend and the younger Calhoun were on unfriendly terms, and the prisoner had made threats against the deceased. On the night of the fire Townsend was seen in a gig, and marks of a two-wheeled vehicle were found about the Calhoun place the morning after the fire.

Will Prove a Total Loss.

BOSTON, Feb. 4.—Tottering walls and charred ruins now crown the summit of Meeting House Hill, the site of one of the landmarks of Boston and one of the oldest churches in America, the First Parish Unitarian church. Early yesterday morning the church was entirely destroyed by fire, which started from the furnace. Five firemen were injured, two of them quite seriously. The loss of the church itself is total, but the building is so old that it is hard to say just what the value was. When the church was built in 1816 it cost $30,000. There is insurance on it to the amount of $20,000.

Heavy Liquor Seizure.

LITTLETON, N. H., Feb. 4.—Fresh from a successful trip in closing drug stores in the counties of Cheshire and Sullivan, Daniel C. Remich returned to Littleton Saturday afternoon, and in the evening made two complaints—one for keeping for sale and one for being a common seller—against F. A. Robinson, a Littleton druggist. Deputy Sheriff Coburn served the papers, and, according to an inventory made by that gentleman yesterday, over 250 gallons of spirituous liquors were confiscated, being the largest quantity seized at any one time in this county.

ON BEACON HILL.

Is Foxboro's Hospital a Failure?—Boston's Subway Receives Attention.

BOSTON, Feb. 4.—In the senate, Mr. Neill introduced a bill which proposes to abolish the Foxboro hospital for dipsomaniacs and inebriates and to use the buildings for an "asylum for boys of simple mind." The meaning of this bill apparently is that Mr. Neill shares the opinion entertained by many others that the drunkard-cure hospital is a failure, and that the buildings at Foxboro might advantageously be occupied for the accommodation of the "custodial" inmates of the school for feeble minded at Waltham, which is wholly unable to provide for the teachable portion of the feeble minded, simply for lack of room.

In the house, a bill was introduced by Mr. Mellen to authorize the subway commission to lease the subway, when completed, for a term of 10 years, subject to annulment by the commissioners on 60 days' notice. In the act of 1894 the lease to the street railway company by the transit commission was to be for 50 years and subject to the approval of the board of railroad commissioners.

The committee on public service reported against the bill introduced by Mr. Johnson prohibiting from holding office all persons who, since attaining their majority, have served a sentence in any penal institution of this commonwealth or any other state or country.

Mr. Mellen gave notice that when the resolve in favor of biennial elections is reached he will move to so amend the resolve as to make the resolve, if adopted, operative in 1897. The speaker informed the member from Worcester that the resolve, when it comes up, will contain the words 1897. Mr. McCarthy gave notice of intention to move perfecting amendments to the resolve, providing that it shall take effect in 1898.

Mr. Mellen said that the resolve adopted in 1894 provided that it should take effect in 1898; that the resolve, as reported by the committee on constitutional amendments, this year, provides that it shall take effect in 1897; that the resolve so reported has taken one reading, and cannot be amended without making it a new resolve, which must be adopted by two successive legislatures before being submitted to the people. He gave notice that he would raise that point of order today.

The liquor committee had an interesting hearing on the 25-foot law, although the matter has been pretty thoroughly ventilated in previous years.

Among the petitions was one for an equestrian statue of General Benjamin F Butler.

Pastor Allen Steps Out.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The pastorial relations of Rev. Adolis Allen and the First Presbyterian church were formally dissolved yesterday at the meeting of the Washington Presbytery, called to take action in settling the trouble in the church, growing out of the desire of the congregation that Rev. Dr. T. DeWitt Talmage occupy the pulpit at the morning as well as the evening services. An agreement between the officials of the church and Mr. Allen was read, by which the latter now accepts the full salary for the contract term, expiring Oct. 1, 1896, and immediately retires from the church.

Kentucky's Election Muddle.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Feb. 4.—Politicians are looking for lively times here during the week, as Senator Ogilvie (Dem.) has arrived, and Beckman (Dem.), who was elected Saturday in Nelson county to succeed Wilson, deceased, is also here. This makes the assembly again a tie on joint ballot, and it is thought the Republicans will report and act favorably on the contests of Dunlap, from Lexington, and Werner, unseating two Democrats, and thus elect Congressman Hunter to the senatorship, to succeed Blackburn.

Orfa's Shocking Record.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—The Daily News this morning gives alleged trustworthy details of the massacres at Orfa on Dec. 26, and also on Oct. 28, according to which 3500 persons were killed—1500 having perished in the great Gregorian church. Syrians and Catholics were spared. The wells of the city were filled with dead bodies. Foreigners were protected by a strong guard placed about the American premises.

Brighter Outlook For Stranded Steamer.

LONG BRANCH, Feb. 4. — About 11 o'clock last night the wrecking tugs made another effort to get the St. Paul out of her bed of sand, and before work was stopped the big steamship was dragged nearly 200 feet to seaward. The effort made yesterday morning resulted in the moving of the St. Paul about 30 feet and the shifting of her position about 1½ degrees. She is now about 500 feet further seaward than she was about a week ago.

Cherokee Judge Murdered.

FORT SMITH, Ark., Feb. 4.—On Lee's Creek, in the Cherokee Nation, 25 miles north of here, unknown parties broke into the residence of Judge Lasley, a prominent Cherokee, murdered him and a young man named McGlass, and seriously wounded Lasley's son. Mrs. Lasley escaped by jumping from a window. The murderers robbed the house and fled.

HARRISON OUT OF RACE

His Strong Letter Declining the Presidential Nomination.

Will Not Let His Name Go Before Convention.

He Never Has Had a Desire to Return to the White House.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 4.—Last evening Captain John K. Gowdy, chairman of the Republican state central committee, called by invitation at the residence of General Harrison, when the ex-president handed him the following letter:

To Hon. John K. Gowdy—In view of the resolutions passed by the state central committee at their recent meeting and of the fact that delegates to the Republican national convention are soon to be chosen in this state, I have concluded that some statement from me as to my wishes and purposes should now be made to my Indiana friends.

Hitherto I have declined to speak to the public upon this matter, but scores of friends with whom I have talked, and many scores more to whom I have written, will recognize in this expression the substance of what I have said to them. To every man who has proposed to promote my nomination, I have said "No." There has never been an hour since I left the White House that I have felt a wish to return to it.

My Indiana friends have been most devoted and faithful, and I am their grateful debtor. The Republican party have twice in national convention given me its endorsement, and that is enough. I think the voters of our party are now entitled to have a new name. For the sentiment, great or small, that has been manifested for my nomination, I am grateful; and of that wide respect and kindness—breaking party lines—which have been shown me in so many ways I am profoundly appreciative.

I cannot consent that my name be presented to or be used in the St. Louis convention, and most kindly ask my friends to accept this as a sincere and final expression on the subject.

BENJAMIN HARRISON.

Conflicting Opinions.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 4.—Senator-elect Foraker, when informed of the positive declination of ex-President Harrison, said: I never thought Harrison was a candidate for the nomination in the ordinary sense of such a candidacy. I am surprised, however, that he seems to debar himself from accepting the nomination, should an emergency arise in which he might be desired by the convention. I think his declination strengthens McKinley's chances, as the states are neighbors and are likely to have the same preferences.

DES MOINES, Feb. 4.—The letter of ex-President Harrison, stating that he will not be a candidate for renomination, is pleasant reading for Mr. Allison's friends. They believe that a large part of Mr. Harrison's following will ultimately come to the Iowa man. They claim that it was the vote of Iowa which turned the tide in the direction of Mr. Harrison in 1888. A number of people interviewed here take this view of the matter.

Righting a Wrong.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The Indian affairs committee of the house have agreed to a clause to be incorporated in the appropriation bill providing that all children of a marriage between a white man and an Indian woman shall have the same rights and privileges to the property and annuities of the tribe to which the mother belongs as other members of the tribe. The reverse of this provision is now the law, and the desire of the committee is to remedy what seems to have been an oversight when the law was framed.

Sanguine Bank Directors.

ROME, N. Y., Feb. 4.—It is learned that the Fort Stanwix National bank, whose cashier committed suicide last week, has been carrying paper to the amount of $60,000 or more of the Jones Packing company of Baltimore, with other paper, which the bank has been unable to realize upon. It is believed that the surplus and undivided profits, amounting to $170,000, will be wiped out. The directors of the bank are quite positive that the depositors will receive dollar for dollar, and the bank continue to do business.

Putnam's Punishment.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The supreme court of the United States yesterday disposed of but few cases. The chief justice announced the affirmance, by a divided court, of the judgment of the district court in New Hampshire sentencing Warren F. Putnam, late president of the Granite State National bank of Exeter, to five years' imprisonment for conversion of the bank funds to his own use.

An Indignant Denial.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—Mr. Bayard said last night relative to a report circulated here that he had authorized President Cleveland to announce his resignation in the event of a vote of censure passing the house of representatives at Washington: "I deny any such report with indignation. I never dreamed of any such thing. It is the utmost stuff and nonsense."

IN MANY places the annual reunion of the High school graduates are the event of the season, being largely attended, enjoyable and profitable. Quincy seems to be differently constituted, athough the reunion this year was a grand social success. The Q. H. S. alumni numbers from five to six hundred and as each graduate attending is allowed an extra ticket, over 1000 are eligible. Upon an economical basis it is said an attendance of at least 150 is necessary to make these gatherings a financial success. For two years the board of director have promptly met all deficiencies, and in view of the social success they have courage to believe that the reunion of 1897 will met their fond expectations. Will not more of the graduates take an interest and thus aid an association which is working to promote the interests of the High school.

Birthday of Quincy's Oldest.

Mrs. Martha P. Hall, one of Quincy's oldest residents, if not the oldest, celebrated her ninetieth birthday on Monday. Mrs. Hall is the mother of the late Enoch Hall of Edwards street and of Mrs. George W. Thayer of Crescent street, West Quincy, with whom she resides. She has been blind for about seven years but goes about the house unaided by guide or cane.

She sat at supper with five of her grand children, Mrs. Enoch Hall and Mr. and Mrs. Thayer, together with some friends. Mrs. Hall was the recipient of many gifts of remembrance among which was a box from South Portland, Me., from Mrs. A. V. Cole, a daughter who was unable to be present, also a bouquet of roses from Mrs. Maria Bowker of Weymouth.

She had many callers during the day and seemed in the best of spirits with a joke now and then. Her many friends wish her many happy returns of the day.

EDUCATIONAL WARFARE.

Manitoba's School Trouble Still the Subject of Grave Discussion.

OTTAWA, Feb. 4.—The Dominion government has at last finished the task of drafting the bill which shall restore separate schools to the Roman Catholics of Manitoba. The Protestant ministers from Ontario fought against anything but a very mild measure. The result of the meetings of the cabinet, however, shows that they have been vanquished. The measure is as sweeping as even Mgr. Langevin, the Roman Catholic archbishop of Manitoba, can desire. The preamble of the bill recites the story of the negotiations between the federal government and the provincial administration of Manitoba, and states that Premier Greenway and the Manitoba ministers have resisted and have stated that they will resist any interference or legislation in the parliament of Canada.

The enacting clauses of the bill are as follows: A Roman Catholic board of education is to be established, which shall see to the carrying out of the provisions of the bill. This board shall take means for ascertaining the standing and efficiency of the seperate schools before they are given any provincial aid. The same inspectors as inspect the public schools are to inspect the seperate schools. The teachers must qualify by passing the same examinations as are necessary in the case of public school teachers.

Should the government of Manitoba carry out its threat to refuse state aid to the Catholic schools, the Dominion parliament is to vote money raised on the school lands held by the Dominion for educational purposes in Manitoba. No separate schools shall be established in any school section except on a petition signed by the heads of at least five Roman Catholic families, which shall number at least 10 children of school age.

Catholic ratepayers must elect whether they will support either public or separate schools. They must support one or the other.

SALVATIONISTS' ADMIRERS.

A Distinguished Gathering Protest Against Recall of Leaders.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—A large meeting to protest against the recall of Commander and Mrs. Ballington Booth of the Salvation Army in the United States was held in Carnegie Music hall last night. Elaborate preparations had been made for the gathering. Chauncey M. Depew acted as chairman, and Mayor Strong made a brief speech.

Mr. Depew read a cablegram from Bromwell Booth, "chief of staff," to the effect that General Booth was now in India, but that the recalling of his son was intended as no discourtesy. Mr. Depew then pointed out that the meeting of protest was attended by every denomination and creed, except those who were most interested. There was not a Salvation Army uniform in the hall.

Mr. Depew then went on to eulogize the work of Commander Booth and his followers in the army, and explained in his felicitous way just why there was such objection to the removal of the present head of the army. Other speakers followed with a similar purpose, and the meeting closed with the adoption of resolutions protesting against the removal of Commander and Mrs. Ballington Booth.

Seeking the Prince's Advice.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—The Chronicle says that it believes that it can answer the question asked by The St. James Gazette: "What is Dunraven waiting for?" The Chronicle answers: He has gone to Sandringham to confer with his commodore, the Prince of Wales, before committing himself to a final step in the controversy. We understand that Lord Dunraven has been at Sandringham for several days, and the wire with London has been active during the whole time. The Prince of Wales has always been deservedly credited with the greatest tact, and now, if ever, that quality will be put to the test.

Concerning Monroe Doctrine.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Minister Carbo of Ecuador has received a cable dispatch from the secretary of state of Ecuador stating that the Central American governments of Guatemala, Nicaragua, Salvador, Honduras and Costa Rica have accepted the invitation to join a convention of American republics, with a view to unifying them. This is the first affirmative action toward the convention which is designated to bring about a common understanding of North, South and Central American countries on the Monroe doctrine.

Russia's Action Condemned.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—Hon. A. J. Balfour spoke at Bristol last night, confining himself mainly to home politics. He declared that the government had done all in its power to prevent the Armenian horrors, and that it had not prevented Russia from intervening. Russia, he said, had not been willing to undertake the duty. Mr. Balfour closed with an eloquent peroration in favor of an alliance between the two great Anglo-Saxon races.

Hazeltine's Heavy Loss.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 4.—The loss by Sunday's conflagration will not exceed $1,500,000, and may possibly be considerably less. Charles F. Hazeltine, the owner of the Hazeltine building, where the fire originated, and also owner of the art galleries bearing his name, will be the heaviest loser. His loss on pictures will reach $300,000, on which there was no insurance. The loss on the building is $200,000.

One of the "Benefits" of Trusts.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 4.—The Wire Nail Manufacturers' association have addressed a circular letter to the jobbing trade, giving notice of another advance in prices of 15 cents per hundred weight. This will change the base rate from 225 to 240 per hundred weight, which is the highest price asked for wire nails in many years. Only a year or so ago the base price was 85 cents.

A Portentous Move.

KINGSTON, Jam., Feb. 4.—The British warship Mohawk was dispatched hastily yesterday from this port to Habana. It is thought by many persons here that the cause of her sudden departure was that there has been a revolt among the Spanish volunteers in the Cuban capital, and that the Mohawk has been sent to protect the lives and property of British subjects.

Oscar Hopes For Harmony.

CHRISTIANIA, Feb. 4.—The storthing was opened yesterday. In his speech from the throne, King Oscar said he hoped that the meeting of the commission on the conditions of the union of Norway and Sweden would lead to an agreement tending to the happiness of both nations.

THE STAR OF HOPE.

"I had lost all hope and gone to my father's to die," said Mrs. MOLIE EVANS, of Mound, Coryell Co., Texas. "I gave birth to a baby a year ago, the 5th of June last," she adds, "and seemed to do very well for 8 or 9 days, and then I began to feel very bad, my feet began to swell, my stomach was all wrong and I seemed to suffer with everything that could be borne. I was in bed 5 months and there was not a day that it seemed I could live. We had the best doctors that our country afforded. I was a skeleton. Every one that saw me thought that I would never get well. I had palpitation and pain in the heart, terrible pain in my right side just under the ribs, terrible headaches all the time; a bearing down sensation; a distressed feeling in my stomach all the time; could hardly eat anything and it looked as if I would starve. All the time I would take such weak trembling spells, and it seemed as if I could not stand it. There were six doctors treating me when I commenced taking your medicine. I had lost all hope and gone to my father's to die. I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and his 'Favorite Prescription' together, and I took them regularly until I felt as if life was worth living again."

"I weigh more than I have weighed for ten years. My friends say that I look better than they ever saw me. The first two bottles did me more good than all the medicine I had taken. My stomach has never hurt me since. I can eat anything I want and as much as I want. If you want to use this in favor of your medicine, I am a living witness to testify to it, and will, to anybody who wants to know further of my case."

OUR NEW COMMISSIONER.

A Supporter of Mr. Adams, who Pays Large Tax Humiliated.

To the Editors of the Ledger:

Surely the people of our old historic Quincy must feel humiliated indeed, to be told, that of 20,000 inhabitants and almost 4,000 voters, that there is not one that has the wisdom or business judgment to perform the duties of this high office. Behold, what manner of office have we made? This old Quincy that in the past has furnished two Presidents, congressmen, and in fact men that were an honor to any position. Are we to understand that this great ability has been confined to one family?

Now, I consider, if the people of this municipality are fit to pay the taxes, there surely ought to be some one capable of spending the money so collected. We have men who have made a success as manufactures, as merchants, as managers of large interests, and have made them so successful that few cities of our size have had as few failures, in the trying times of the last two years. Yet with all this none are fit for Commissioner of Public Works.

Was it for political reasons that our Mayor should go outside the city, so he would not offend Mr. Friend or Mr. Office Seeker? Surely, if the latter, we cannot have a Mayor with back-bone as we thought. We had the idea in electing Mr. Adams that we were getting a strong man. One that would take the offices out of party politics, but once a Democrat always one. Of course he did appoint some of the Republicans to little minor offices. The dogs may have the crumbs that fall from the master's table.

Now I care not who the man may be, that is imported into our city for such an office, we cannot get his best the first year, and he feels he is a bird of passage, here today and gone tomorrow, as it were. He is not acquainted with our conditions, our material or travel, neither can he be in a day or a month, coming from the State roads with the resources of the State behind him is very different from having the paltry sum of eighteen or twenty thousand dollars behind him for 100 miles of street, if it would not be an insult on the name "street" to call our country ways by that name.

I, for one, believe in putting a good sound business man in as commissioner and in all cases a citizen of Quincy. Give him at least fifty thousand dollars a year for the streets and then we can demand good results. But so long as our Council continues their niggardly policy with our streets, so long must we put up with second rate men, or imported men or anything for Commissioner. No first-class man would risk his reputation on such an insufficient amount.

As long as this department is run in the old way, so long will we have paths for side-walks and back country ways for streets. So long will we be ashamed to take a stranger for a drive over our city. Mr. Editor, my thoughts cannot help running back to the last imported Commissioner. How he threw the money away. How he paved Hancock street at Atlantic on top of the frost. When the frost came out the paving descended towards China. Then the next Commissioner covered them up with gravel some two feet. This is the way our money was squandered. When shall we have any business principles put into our highway department.

CHAIRMAN THROWN DOWN.

Democrats Disgusted Because Assessor Orcutt Was Not Reappointed.

Editors of Daily Ledger:

Probably no appointment of Mayor Adams, aside from the Commissioner of Public Works, is more repulsive to the members of his own party than that of Mr. Waterhouse of Wollaston, who displaces Mr. William B. Orcutt. Mr. Orcutt is the chairman of the Democratic City Committee and the members of the committee are said to construe his removal as an effront to the whole body.

It is said that Mayor Adams had no fault to find with Mr. Orcutt, but that his removal was due to a coterie of Wollastonians who were determined on personal grounds to prevent his re-appointment.

The members of the committee declare that Mr. Orcutt was undeserving of such treatment, and in consequence of this and other acts on the part of the administration a more dejected or disgusted body of men can hardly be found.

The Ward One committee has not organized as yet, and it is doubtful if it will, the apathy and indifference being so strong and bitter as to prevent organizing. The whole City Committee worked with a zeal during the last campaign, and considering the obstacles placed in their path by the last administration, the result was gratifying; but they now resent the treatment accorded their representative members.

It is claimed by many that Mayor Adams is not living up to his agreements or declarations, and talk, and even plans of war, open and guerrilla, against His Honor are heard on every hand. Many uncomplimentary things are said against the Mayor by those who were on the inside last fall, and no hesitancy is shown in narrating the intrigues, plans and plottings on the part of the powers in gaining the election, and of the improper things done, that would not, if not for the chagrin at the appointments, ever see the light of day, and some of which it is said, look better at a distance than at close range.

Meanwhile the more sedate and staid members of the committee, men whom the turbulent ones aver, only move when an earthquake or some other dreadful phenomena or disturbance in is their immediate locality, are willing to give the Mayor an opportunity to extricate himself from this embarrassing dilemma, in the hope that his political life will not be ended so abruptly. The doctors prescribing for him now, one of the Committee asserts, are only "commonplace," attached to no school, and would be unable to prescribe for the other members of the family, if the paralysis that now threatens him should become epidemic.

The member further said that if the work of abolishing party lines was begun last year on the other side, the completion of the work would be affected by the Democrats. But the Republican organization is perfect in four wards of the city, while the inertia on the Democratic side is manifest in every ward of the city, and the chances of work in the municipal contest about as disheartening as possible.

MAY BUY ST. THOMAS

IT WOULD MAKE A FINE COALING STATION FOR OUR NEW NAVY.

It Is Only About as Large as Manhattan Island, but Has a Splendid Harbor and Many Tropical Attractions—Denmark Desires to Sell.

The little kingdom of Denmark has three small islands to sell and wants the United States to buy them. These three islands are St. John, St. Croix and St. Thomas, and they constitute the northern tail to the Lesser Antilles group. They do not cut much of a figure on the map and you have to look rather sharply to find them, but naval experts are of the opinion that their possession by this country is an urgent necessity and of first importance.

St. Thomas, the smallest of the three, is the one that would be of the greatest value to us. In the first place, it has one of the finest harbors to be found in all the West Indies, and in the second place, it is of such a natural formation that it has been called the Little Gibraltar. These two advantages make St. Thomas a most admirable location for a naval station. This is something that Uncle Sam hasn't got. In all the sweep of the broad Atlantic coast there is not one port outside of our own country where an American cruiser could be sure of getting her bunkers filled with coal in time of war.

It is not until recent years that we have needed a coaling station, but now that our navy is beginning to assume respectable proportions this necessity has been realized. When the recent war talk was first begun, the lack of a coaling station was at once pointed out by our naval officers. At the same time England's resources in this respect were mentioned and no little uneasiness was felt at Washington. There would certainly be cause for alarm in case of war. There is St. Lucia, where thousands of redcoats are quartered behind the grim guns of an impregnable fortress. At Bermuda the cross of St. George waves over another British fortress. England could collect a big fleet in West Indian waters and with these two places as bases of supplies could sweep our coast, while our naval force could not venture far from home ports.

In many ways St. Thomas is valuable as a strategic point in naval operations. It is directly in the path of several steamship lines to South American countries. It is, in fact, the keystone of the West Indian arch. In its harbor the whole white squadron could swing at anchor with safety. The basin is almost completely landlocked by an island which nearly blocks the entrance to the bay. Rising abruptly up from the shores of the harbor are high hills which could easily be fortified. There is no fort on St. Thomas now, but there are some fine promontories on which a few could be located.

The island itself is of little importance outside of its maritime position. It is only 13 miles long and about 3 miles wide—just about as big as Manhattan island, upon which the city of New York is built. The inhabitants number about 13,000. It was colonized by the Dutch in 1657 and since then has been held at different times by the English, Germans and Danes. In 1671 it was taken possession of by the Danish West Indian company and came regularly under the Danish government in 1754. The other two islands have a similar history.

For several years it has been a well known fact that Denmark was anxious to get rid of her West Indian possessions. There was a time when a big revenue was sent from St. Thomas to Copenhagen, but this was when that port was a general distributing port for all the West Indies. St. Thomas was then a port where almost every ship sailing south stopped. All the other islands sent their products there to be reshipped to the United States and Europe and went there after their imports. For years this has been changed. The commerce that once made the harbor of St. Thomas a lively place has drifted elsewhere, and now only a shadow of her great trade remains. These three islands now cost Denmark about $150,000 annually, and she is far too frugal to keep this up indefinitely. Denmark, with no navy, has no need of a coaling station.

MAP SHOWING THE POSITION OF ST. THOMAS.

The recent rumor that the Danish government was about to offer these islands to the United States for a small sum is probably correct. Twice before have such negotiations been under way, and once they were almost completed. Had it not been for a hurricane in 1867 these islands would probably now belong to the United States. Secretary Seward in that year concluded a treaty with Denmark by which St. John, St. Croix and St. Thomas were to be sold to the United States for the sum of $7,500,000. Just as the treaty was about to be ratified, along came a hurricane and demolished nearly every building on the latter island. The senate thereupon concluded that we did not want an island subject to such boisterous winds and refused to ratify the treaty. Then the scheme fell through.

The situation today is different. Since that year little or no damage has been done by hurricanes in St. Thomas. We need a coaling station there vastly more than we did then, and Denmark's anxiety to sell has been increased. It has been intimated that if we do not buy, Denmark will give the islanders their freedom. If this should happen, the British residents there would at once apply to England for a protectorate, and John Bull would try to gobble up one more vantage point off our seaboard. Germany is anxious to buy the islands, but the Danes hate the Germans and do not want any European power to have their islands.

The islanders themselves are quite willing to come under the protection of Uncle Sam. The question was once put to a vote and the result was a big majority in the affirmative. The population of St. Thomas is very much mixed. The majority of the islanders are negroes, of course, but those in power are English, Spanish, French and Danish. English is the most common language. It is used in the schools, although Danish is taught. The official language is nominally Danish. Merchants and professional men speak two or three languages and many of the natives are equally proficient.

The name of the principal town is really Charlotte Amalia, but it is generally called St. Thomas. It is a good, substantial town and presents a beautiful sight from the sea. The buildings are nearly all solid stone structures of one or two stories. They are not built higher for fear of earthquakes, and they are made of stone because a conflagration once wiped out the town when it was built of wood.

In spite of England's efforts to turn trade away from St. Thomas its fine harbor is still an attraction, and while its commerce has vastly decreased thousands of anchors are dropped there every year. As a commercial coaling depot it is still of great importance. Steamers find it very convenient to fill their bunkers there. The coal is largely brought from England, however, and is sold by an English company which handles over 50,000 tons annually. If we owned St. Thomas, this coal and a great deal more would be brought from the United States and retailed from the government yards to the fleets of all the world. St. Thomas is about five days' sail from New York. If our cruisers could stop there and take on a supply of coal it would be a great advantage.

Aside from its naval importance the island would be found valuable in other ways. It would not take long to restore to St. Thomas part of its commerce. Our manufacturers could use it to great advantage as a distributing point, just as it was used years ago. They could send their goods there and the great fleet of small craft which now exists in West Indian waters would be engaged in carrying the products of our mills and factories to the various islands. The abundant crops of St. Croix and St. John would be returned to us and there would be a handsome profit all around.

With a military station there and direct steamship communication it is likely that St. Thomas would soon find favor as a winter resort, so that big hotels as well as forts might be built there. The climate is all that could be desired. Even in summer it is rarely above 90 degrees and in winter seldom falls below 60 degrees. Placed as it is several hundred feet above the sea the town is a healthy one. The streets are well paved and the drainage is excellent.

The rest of the island is little better than a wilderness. Of the 25 square miles, but little is under cultivation. There are many abandoned sugar plantations which have been idle since slavery was abolished. The land is fertile enough, but the people have so long depended on commerce that agriculture has almost died out. A recent attempt has been made to revive it and perhaps Yankee farmers might find a way to independence and comfort by making for themselves homes in this semitropical country. They will not do it, however, until the stars and stripes float over Charlotte Amalia and whether they shall or not will depend, perhaps, on the events of the next few months.

CYRUS SYLVESTER.

Dine With Their Servants.

One of Eugene Field's Pranks.

When Eugene Field was city editor of the Kansas City Times, he found great amusement in annoying one of the characters employed on the paper. Ferguson was one of the "make ups" on the paper, and in Wyandotte, where he resided, just over the line from Kansas City, he was the leader of a local temperance society. For over a year Field, on coming down to the paper to go to work, would write a personal concerning Ferguson. Generally it ran like this: "Mr. John Ferguson, the well known 'make up' of The Times composing room, appeared for work yesterday evening in his usual beastly state of intoxication." This entertaining bit Field would send down in a bundle of copy, and the others of the composing room would set it up and say nothing.

Poor Ferguson knew that this awful personal was in their midst, and every night would go carefully over every galley for the purpose of locating and killing it. It gave him vast trouble. Every now and then Field would not write his personal about Ferguson, and then the bedeviled Ferguson was worse off than ever. As long as he could not find it it might still be there. It almost drove the poor man off the paper. Now and then it escaped his eagle eye and was printed. On such occasions Ferguson's burdens were beyond the power of even a Christian spirit to bear.

Delay That Wasn't Dangerous.

Once in a while the dry pages of government reports are enlivened by details of sensational incidents. Witness the following from a report of John W. Fleming, United States mine inspector for New Mexico: "I arrived at Cerillos on the evening of the 26th of February, at 11 p. m. On the morning of the 27th I went out to the White Ash Coal mine, about 2½ miles from the town. When I arrived there, I asked the superintendent of the mine, James Duggan, about the condition of the mine, and he informed me that it was never better; that he had been in the mine every day for eight or ten days past, and had taken air measurements and found that the ventilation was better than ever before. Upon my request that he proceed into the mine for its inspection, he stated that he was required to go to the coke ovens of the company at Waldo, about 2½ miles distant, and would return by noontime, and we would go into the mine." At 11 a. m. an explosion of fire damp occurred in the mine which killed 24 men, and showed the inspector that, sometimes, delays are the reverse of dangerous.

A Fond Mother's Ruse.

There is a mother on the north side who has a family of small children. One day she became very much interested in a book, and it seemed as if she must read it, but the children bothered her very much. Finally she thought of a scheme whereby she could get rid of the children, so she took a broom and put a red cloth on it and hung it in the window. She then told the children they must play she had the smallpox, and that they must not dare come near her, for they would catch it. They kept away beautifully all the afternoon, and she finished the book. Some of the neighbors also saw the red flag and asked the children what was the matter, and they said smallpox, and the report was current on that side of town in a very short time. Not only the children, but the neighbors, kept away until they learned of the scheme.—Indianapolis Journal.

Ancestors.

Abraham Hayward, the famous Quarterly reviewer, once thought that he would like to have some ancestors, so he walked straight to a picture dealer's. Selecting a portrait of a cavalier in half armor, with features not quite unlike his own, Mr. Hayward made a bid for it, but deeming the price asked too high, he went his way. A few days later Mr. Hayward went to dine with Lord Houghton, and was astonished to find the picture in the dining room. Seeing that it attracted his guest's attention, Lord Houghton said: "Very good picture that! Came into my hands in a curious way. Portrait of a Milnes of the commonwealth period—an ancestor of mine." "Ah, indeed!" said Mr. Hayward. "He was very near being an ancestor of mine."

Witches In Eggshells.

When Napoleon III was approaching sovereignty, he asked a judicious friend to observe him carefully for a week and to point out to him anything that he did which was not according to the severest code of the manner of a well bred man.

At the end of the week there was only one practice which his friend had noticed. The emperor, after eating a boiled egg, invariably thrust his spoon through it.

Whence this practice has arisen, at one time not uncommon, it is difficult to say. Some date it from a very early period and assume that it was done originally in order to prevent witches sailing in the eggshells.

Russian Distances.

One gets an idea of the magnificent distances of the czar's realm from learning that a Russian general who was in a hurry to get to St. Petersburg from Vladivostok found the time saving route was to go to Yokohama by steamer, thence by another steamer across the Pacific to San Francisco, by rail to New York and by steamer to Europe. The gap between the finished sections of the Transsiberian railroad is so many hundreds of miles in length that the general would have lost time in traversing the wilds of that vast country, where horses furnish all the transport.

Inconsistent.

"Why are you looking so serious, Bobby?" asked the fond father.

"Thinkin about the preacher. He went and told us we should not covet other people's things and then tried to get all the pennies we had."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Where They All Gargle.

A visitor to the French springs at Cauterets, whose sulphur waters are highly recommended for throat difficulties, writes thus:

"I strolled into the Therme and was immediately seized with astonishment at the gargling rooms. The solemn way in which people took their glasses of water and went to gargle was a source of wonder to one who was not accustomed to it. I will draw a veil over the gargling. It is not a beautiful sight, and the best looking woman can hardly look pretty when engaged in it.

"Proficiency in gargling is much admired, and I overheard a group discussing a man who, they said, 'gargled a merveille.' At the table d'hote later I was amused to hear a man ask a good looking girl if she gargled. 'Oh, yes, monsieur,' was the reply. 'Shall we gargle together tomorrow?' he asked, and she seemed quite pleased."—Pearson's Weekly.

Two of a Kind.

A professor was waiting for a train at a railway station, and having nothing better with which to take up his mind began chaffing a half witted fellow who did odd jobs about the place. So says Scottish Nights, from which we borrow the story.

"I say, Jamy," said the professor in a tone intended to reach the ears of the bystanders, "were you ever at college?"

"Indeed," said the witty professor. "And who had the honor to be your schoolmaster?"

"Maister Black."

"Why," said the wit, "he was my schoolmaster too."

"Do tell me!" exclaimed Jamy. "Man, who'd 'a' thought old Black could have turned out two like us?"

Goats In Baggage Cars.

Some years ago the baggage department of the Northern Pacific road issued an order that no goats should be transported in baggage cars. A peculiar incident brought about the general order. A goat had been placed in a baggage car that was bound for the Pacific coast. During the trip the animal had eaten the leather straps that held the brass checks to the trunks. When Portland was reached, the checks were all on the floor of the car, and there was no way of identifying the trunks. It took nearly three months to straighten out the tangle, and the general order was issued.—Minneapolis Times.

Perfumes.

In the collecting of perfumes two processes are employed. In one, the grease process, boxes with glass bottoms are prepared, the bottom being covered with pure grease or suet, and the flowers, gathered fresh every day during the season, are laid on trays in the box, the grease being left to absorb the fragrance. In the oil process the place of grease is taken by cotton batting saturated with oil, the process being substanfially the same. In both cases the vehicle becomes impregnated with the essential oil and odor of flowers.

DOUBTFUL VICTORIES.

Spanish General's Reports Show a Woful Lack of Foundation.

Cubans at New York Pleased Over the Prospect.

Dissensions Among the Spaniards at Cuba May Result In a Serious Division.

HABANA, Feb. 4.—General Marin has had an engagement with a body of the insurgents, which he reports to be the main force under Gomez, and which were put to flight, with a loss of 20 killed. The entire absence of any details of the number of insurgents in the body attacked, leaves some ground for doubt as to whether they were, in truth, Gomez's immediate following.

Pretty much the whole of the combined columns under General Marin, including 1700 cavalry, seems to have been engaged. This force were equipped with a special view to running down and cornering the insurgents when once they should come face to face with them, and great expectations were founded on its supposed ability to do this. But the report of yesterday's engagement, although it indicates that the Spanish attack was made with great dash and vigor, seems to indicate that the insurgents were as successful in evading the Spanish forces as they have been at any time heretofore.

General Marin had information that Gomez had encamped at the plantation of Luz, and prepared for a combined attack by all the columns under his immediate command. Two columns were ordered to take the advance, together with seven squadrons under Colonel Ruiz. Upon coming up with the insurgent vanguard, the Spanish made an impetuous charge, passing over the enemy's second line and falling upon the main force, which were stationed near the plantation of Luz. The insurgents were put to immediate flight, leaving behind them 20 killed, 11 with machetes in their hands. There was apparently no successful pursuit of the insurgents, as they succeeded in carrying off their wounded, the number of which is stated to be unknown. Several prisoners were taken, and the loss of the troops is said to be insignificant.

It is also reported that the columns of General Cornell, operating in combination with those under Generals Linares and Aldecoa, are in pursuit of a numerous band of insurgents, near Artemisa, which are supposed to be Maceo's main force. This band are said to be striving to effect a junction with Gomez, and they seem in a fair way to do so, as there is no apparent check in their advance along the southern coast of Pinar del Rio. The reported disposition of the troops was such as to prevent the advance of Maceo, and was not such as to make any pursuit of him necessary, the plan being to await his coming. It is also reported that the troops have killed a ferocious mulatto, who has led a band of assassins and woman violators, to the terror of a whole district.

Enthusiastic Cubans.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—The news brought to this city yesterday by the Habana steamer was cheering for the friends of Cuban liberty. The letters of the secret agents of the revolutionary party in Habana spoke of a split among the Spanish parties on the island; of jealousies among the military; of starvation in the city, and of a crisis in the commercial situation. E. G. Pierra translated one of the most important letters. Parts of it were as follows:

There is a very decided division between the Conservative and Reformist parties of the Spaniards, and they are pouring hot-shot into each other's ranks through the columns of the press. As a proof of this, I send you the papers of the Conservative party, in which the editorials are written in a particularly bitter strain against their former allies. The Reformist party were in favor of the mild policy of Campos, while the Conservatives believe in fire and bloodshed. The situation is a most critical one, and no one recognizes this fact better than the Spaniards.

The excitement in Habana is increased by the fact that the government does not allow any news to be printed except that given out from the official bureau. Spaniards as well as Cubans know that the better part of the news given out is fabrication.

The correspondent then goes on to detail several engagements, in one of which a whole troop of 300 Spaniards were annihilated. The news given out, however, was of a tremendous Spanish victory. He then goes on to say:

The price of provisions is rising very rapidly, and destitution in Habana is increasing rapidly. A great many families are now dependent for subsistence on what the government gives them—a small amount weekly. There have been times within the past few days when there has not been provisions of any kind to be bought at the public market. Even those having money to spend have been forced to go hungry. Nothing has been received from the surrounding country for a long time.

Another circumstance which aggravates matters is the fact well known to everybody on the island that there is very great discontent known to exist among the military friends of General Pando, whom, they think, was slighted by the government at Madrid in appointing General Weyler to the position formerly filled by General Campos.

It is well known that this part of the Spanish element are far from being willing to cooperate with those who are favorable to Weyler, and that they will do anything they may safely do to make him fail. On the whole everything looks very bad for the Spaniards. Pay no attention to the cable dispatches in regard to the movements of Generals Gomez and Maceo. I know for a certainty that they have been operating with entire freedom, and that they have remained in Habana and Pinar del Rio because they are not in the least afraid of being worsted by the Spaniards.

In another letter it is stated that the commercial situation in Habana is critical. Business is paralyzed, and large commercial houses are dismissing their employes. Business men are anxious that the trouble should be ended one way or the other without loss of time.

Threatening Floods.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Feb. 4.—The Brazos river is still rising at Columbia. It rose 16 feet in 20 hours, and its current is equal that of a mountain stream. Seven vesse belonging to the Columbia Transportation company were swept away. The river i now out of its banks, and is sweeping over the surrounding country. Near Navaso the Brazos and Navasola rivers ha united, and are 12 miles wide. Two mil of Santa Fe railroad track is submerged.

Live Stock Innovation.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Feb. 4.—A. J. Thompson of Toronto has recently purchased 400 head of choice beef cattle at Alvarado, and will ship them direct to England by way of New Orleans. This is the first heavy shipment from Texas to England, and will mark an epoch in the live stock history of this country.

THE NATION'S LAWMAKERS.

Lively Squabb'e Over Appropriations In the House—Action on Finances.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The house spent the entire day yesterday discussing a series of amendments to strike from the District of Columbia appropriation bill eight appropriations, aggregating $34,000, for the maintenance of destitute women and children in various private and sectarian charitable institutions in the district. It was the announced purpose of Mr. Hainer (Rep., Neb.), who led the fight, to place the appropriations in the hands of a board of children's guardians created several years ago. The amendments opened with a wide field of discussion as to the policy of appropriating public money for private and sectarian institutions, and Mr. Roberston (Dem., La.), a member of the appropriations committee, made the direct charge that war on these appropriations had been inaugurated by the A. P. A. This phase of the matter was, however, approached with great caution by those who spoke; the advocates of the amendments placing their opposition on the broad ground of antagonism to appropriating public money for private or sectarian purposes.

The house bond bill with the free coinage substitute was received from the senate without comment and went to the speaker's table.

Mr. Hill (Rep., Conn.) offered in the house a bill amending existing laws so as to permit national banks to issue currency to the par value of bonds deposited. When currency is issued to the banks, the secretary of the treasury is directed to redeem and cancel a corresponding amount of legal tenders. Should no legal tenders be presented for redemption, then the secretary is directed to redeem and cancel notes issued under the Sherman act. To carry out the provisions of this bill the secretary is authorized to issue a 3 per cent gold bond, payable in 20 years, to be sold as occasion requires. The bill also reduces from 1 per cent to ¼ of 1 per cent the tax on national bank circulation.

Loyal to Bayard.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—A number of the morning papers contain comments upon the correspondence which passed between President Cleveland and Secretary Olney and Ambassador Bayard regarding the speeches for which the house of representatives proposes to censure him, and which were given to the press for publication in this morning's papers. The Standard says: A perusal of the correspondence of President Cleveland and Secretary Olney with Mr. Bayard does not increase the admiration for the methods and byways of American politics. There is a painful want of dignity in the manner in which Mr. Bayard's official critics display their resentment. The Daily News says: By publishing the correspondence Mr. Bayard shows that he is as fearless as his ancient namesake, and most persons reading it with candor will be disposed to think that he is almost equally without reproaches. Still, it is advisable that he should not do it again.

Descended From Historic Family.

GALVESTON, Feb. 4.—George Mason, a distinguished lawyer of this city, died at San Antonio yesterday of brights disease. Deceased was 65 years of age, and [illegible] of Virginia. He was a descendant of Governor Mason, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and a son of James M. Mason, United States senator from Virginia, who, with Slidell, was sent by the Confederate government as a special envoy to Great Britain and France at the time of the Civil War. He resided here 40 years, and was one of the ablest lawyers in the south.

Armenians Growing Uneasy.

CUBA MUST BE FREE.

Spanish Flag Cannot Wave In Triumph Over the Island.

Maceo Tells of Advantages Gained by Insurgents.

Detailed "Official" Report of the Fight Between Forces of Maceo and Luque.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—The Evening Star prints a letter sent to the editor by General Antonio Maceo, through its correspondent, who is with the Cuban revolutionary army in Pinar del Rio province. General Maceo denies published reports that his aide, Colonel Bermudez, had been killed, and then characterizes as ridiculous reports of a rupture between himself and General Gomez:

In the first place there can be no such thing as a misunderstanding, or rupture, or whatever you may choose to call it, between General Gomez and myself. He is the commander-in-chief, and as such his orders are as laws to me. I am but lieutenant general of the army, and at all times, in all places, and for all reasons, I am subject to his commands.

Our army is not organized on a rabble basis. The man who talks the loudest is not the commander. But it is organized on the plan of a modern military force, where order and discipline are maintained, and respect for superiors invariably enforced.

But aside from rules of military discipline, there is not a soldier in the Cuban army who would consider for an instant the disputing of the words or commands of Maximo Gomez. The entire army confides implicitly in his patriotism and his military ability. We who have known him and followed him in other wars are too certain of our own comparative weakness to doubt his wisdom and judgment.

The Spaniards, he writes, are humbugging themselves with theories to account for the fact that he and Gomez are separated, and after declining to discuss the reasons for the well-matured moves of the Cuban army, he continues: What have we accomplished by our invasion of the province? A great deal. In the first place we drew the attention of the authorities to this end of the island, and 5000 re-enforcements, under Nunez, Sanchez and my brother, Jose Maceo, were enabled to march from the eastern end of the island to the province of Habana without having a serious engagement. We needed these re-enforcements to make a better showing in the capital province, and we needed a new supply of ammunition, etc., and did not wish to march our forces back to the Cimaga to Sancti Spiritus or Cubitas to obtain it.

Hoodwinking the Spaniards.

Our second advantage has been the calling of the entire Spanish fleet of cruisers, gunboats and coasters to look after the north and south shores of the western end of the island to prevent the landing of expeditions that were supposed to be destined for the vicinity of San Antonio cape. While the fleet, with which we had several "encounters," so to speak, while along the northern coast, was keeping a good watch between Cuba, Florida and Mexico, several good expeditions landed in the Orient from Jamaica, Santo Domingo, and by this time the stores they brought are safely in the hands of our friends in the Sierra Maestra mountains. Our line of communication between this end of the island and the province of Santiago de Cuba is practically perfect, and we have no reason to fear being cut off at any time.

General Maceo says there is no use denying that the insurgents have not arms for all the men anxious to join the army, but adds that a great improvement has taken place in this respect during the last two months, and closes his letter as follows:

"I will not venture, as you ask me, to say how long the war will last. It may be a conflict of months or of years; there is no telling. But this much is certain, that the red and yellow flag of Spain will never wave again in triumph over an enslaved Cuba. Cuba must be free. The long-oppressed people have dedicated anew their lives to the work of emancipation, and the God of heaven will strengthen their arms."

The loss of the troops in killed is placed by the official report at 30 soldiers.

Captain William F. Mannix, the correspondent of The Army and Navy Journal and the Washington Star, has been ordered by the authorities to leave the island. A protest against this action has been sent to Secretary Olney by United States Consul General Williams.

Spanish Victories, of Course.

An official dispatch from Habana gives a detailed account of the engagement between General Luque and the forces of Antonio Maceo. The battle was fiercely contested, and the advantage is claimed to be all on the side of the Spanish as a result.

But it is significant that Maceo's forces, instead of being turned back to the westward, proceeded on their way toward Habana province after the battle.

The following points are gathered from the official report of the engagement. General Luque left the city of Pinar del Rio at 7 o'clock on the morning of Feb. 2 (Sunday), intending to march to Consolacion del Sur in search of an engagement with the main force of the insurgents, who were known to be in that district. General Luque had the advantage of the direction of a skillful guide, who was apparently posted as to the whereabouts of the insurgents and agreed to lead them to the camp occupied by the insurgent leaders—Maceo, Miro, Zayas, Chileno and Sotomayor.

At 8 o'clock in the evening the Spanish columns had arrived at Arroyo de Agua, and here they rested on their arms until midnight of Sunday, when they took up their line of march again, following the direction of the railroad which runs between Consolacion del Sur and Paso Real.

At 8 o'clock Monday morning the Spanish had arrived at the farm of Candelara, on their way to San Diego de Los Banos, but they turned south again towards La Herradure, and continuing their march they met the insurgents about 2 o'clock in the afternoon at the town of Paso Real.

An attack was immediately opened upon the insurgents in the town. They held their position with the greatest tenacity, from the vantage ground of the houses and walls of the streets. From these points it was found difficult to dislodge them, though a fire was directed upon them from all sides.

The Spanish formed for a regular and systematic attack, the vanguard of the columns under Colonel Hernandez charging their position by the left flank, while the center and rear guard of the Spanish, under the direct command of General Luque, forced themselves into the central street of the village and attacked by the right flank, charging with vigor and determination.

Seeing their position thus imperiled, and themselves in danger of having their retreat cut off, the insurgents made a rapid retreat to the extreme western limits of the village, doing some execution during the retreat. Here they formed their lines for a further stand against the attack of the Spaniards.

A volley from the rifles of the troops failed to break the line of the insurgent forces. They were given a second volley, but they still stood their ground, and even in the face of a third volley of rifle bullets they refused to budge an inch and obstinately maintained their formidable line.

The Spanish cavalry were then ordered to charge, and they swept down with great valor on the devoted band led by Lieutenants Herrera and Berenguer. The insurgents were unable to stand this onslaught, and their formation was broken and they were put to flight, 10 of them being killed with cavalry sabers.

They were pursued by the Spanish cavalry outside the limits of the village, but the pursuers were here met by a force of insurgent cavalry, numbering 1000, and the pursuit was checked. The insurgent cavalry made a stand and met the attack of the Spanish, covering the retreat of their friends and stubbornly refusing to give way in face of the Spanish fire until

The Spanish Infantry Came Up.

Meanwhile the Cubans had worked their way ahead, and once more made a vigorous stand against the onslaught of the Spanish troops. The battalion of San Quintin advanced upon them, but it was only after repeated volleys had been fired into them that their position was taken and the village was in possession of the Spanish.

But still the insurgents did not abandon the field, but only gave back before the troops and prepared to make a last stand in a palm grove about three kilometers distant. Here they formed a line of defense again, the center being further advanced than the flanks, and awaited an attack.

The line of the troops was formed by two companies from the battalion of Zabaya and one company of the battalion of Galicia on the left wing, under Colonel Hernandez; a battalion and three companies of the San Quintin regiment, with the colonel in command, but under the immediate orders of General Luque, for the center, and one company of the Soria regiment and two of the Alfonso Trece, under Lieutenant Colonel Yldefonso Frances, on the right wing. The artillery, under Lieutenant Siron, were placed between the center and the right wing, and opened fire upon the enemy at a distance of 600 yards.

The insurgent cavalry did not await the nearer approach of the Spaniards, but dashed down the declivity from the palm grove, and charged full upon the Spaniards' formation with what the official report terms a savage valor. These intrepid horsemen threw themselves upon the points of the bayonets of the Spaniards.

The Spanish infantry, however, stood firm and repulsed the charge with the bayonet. They then, in turn themselves, made a bayonet charge. The insurgent cavalry retreated, but only to form a second line for another charge. The troops were formed into a hollow square to meet this charge. Their artillery opened upon the insurgents at a distance of only 150 yards.

This last charge was also repulsed, many insurgents being wounded with bayonets, and the insurgents thereupon retired. The insurgents took their departure in the direction of Los Palacios, to the eastward or toward Habana province. The Spanish then made an investigation of the insurgents' camp, and found there 62 dead and 130 horses and mules, besides taking numerous saddles, arms and ammunition. The insurgents carried away over 200 wounded.

DINGLEY TARIFF BILL

Displaced by Free Coinage Amendment For Senate to Consider.

Free Silver Substitute Goes Back to the House.

Mr. Uhl Slated by the President to Be Ambassador to Germany.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—The belated tariff bill emerged from the finance committee yesterday and made its appearance in the senate soon after the session opened. Chairman Morrill made the report, stating that a free silver coinage amendment had taken the place of the original bill, and adding, amid laughter, the closing phrase of official procedure of Massachusetts, "And may God save the commonwealth."

Mr. Quay made two attempts to have the bill recommitted to the committee, with instructions to report back separate tariff and free silver bills, but was cut off by parliamentary objections. His resolution for recommitment will come up later under the rules.

A sharp contest occurred at 2 o'clock between the senators favorable to advancing the appropriations bills and those desiring to take up general legislation. The latter element prevailed in two test votes, and the right of way was secured by the resolution of Mr. Dubois (Ida.) to reform the method of considering appropriation bills by distributing them among the several committees. This was strenuously resisted by the friends of the appropriation committee, who contended that the change was revolutionary, and designed to dismantle the committee. The final vote was not reached, but it was evident, from the debate and incidental votes, that a majority favored the change.

The house spent yesterday, as it did Monday, debating a series of amendments offered by Mr. Halner (Rep., Neb.), to strike from the District of Columbia appropriation bill the appropriation for sectarian institutions of charity in the District, and place the money proposed to be appropriated for them at the disposal of the board of children's guardians. Much feeling was engendered, and at times the debate grew quite exciting.

Mr. Dingley, chairman of the ways and means committee, yesterday reported back the senate free coinage substitute for the house bond bill with the recommendation that the house non-concur and insist on its bill. Mr. Crisp, representing the minority, gave notice that the minority would ask the house to concur.

Next Ambassador to Germany.

The president has made his choice for a successor to the late Mr. Runyon, as ambassador to Germany, and there is every reason to believe that Assistant Secretary Uhl of the state department will be named for the post this week, probably today.

EDWIN F. UHL.

Mr. Uhl first came into national prominence with the incoming of the present administration. Previous to that time he had achieved a fine reputation as a lawyer in Michigan, where he had practiced ever since his graduation from the state university at Ann Arbor, and he also was well known in financial circles, being connected with two national banks. In politics he had always been a Democrat, and was at one time mayor of Grand Rapids. Mr. Uhl has been closely attached to Don Dickinson, and it is generally understood that his appointment to his place as first assistant secretary of state was owing to the influential recommendation of Mr. Dickinson.

As first assistant secretary of state, he was frequently called upon to assume the entire burden of the administration of foreign affairs during the absence or disability of the secretary of state, and his name often appears signed to many important papers. After the death of Secretary Gresham, he was acting secretary of state for some weeks, and was brought forward for appointment to fill the vacancy.

Since Secretary Olney's entry into the state department Mr. Uhl's functions have been generally confined to the administration of the affairs of the consular service. Last fall he made a tour of Europe, including the cities in Germany where United States consulates are established, and it is assumed that he was so attracted by the kindly reception accorded him there that he desired to round out his term of service under the state department as ambassador to Germany, a place which he can readily assume, owing to his large private means and experience of the diplomatic policy of the present administration.

Fatherly Solicitude.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—The Prince of Wales has earnestly counselled Lord Dunraven, with reference to any step he may take regarding the report of the New York Yacht club committee, to keep well before his mind the desirability of promoting good and friendly feeling, not only between sportsmen of both sides, but between the peoples of England and America. The prince views the terms of the committee's finding as offering the greatest encouragement in this direction.

The Norfolk County Commissioner evidently are not anxious that Quincy people shall scrutinize their figures this year. For many years the receipts and expenditures have been printed annually in the Quincy PATRIOT. Perhaps Quincy kicked up too much of a breeze at the hearings at the State House last year to suit the Commissioners. They will hear from Quincy again this year.

The programme for the concert by the Ideal Club of Boston, which will be given at Hancock hall tomorrow evening under the auspices of the employes of the Bay State Aluminum Co., is one of the best ever presented by this club and consists of duets for the mandolin and guitars, banjos, and banjos and guitar; and solos on the banjo, humorous selections by Mr. Phelan and selections by the club. The selections to be given consist of all the popular airs as well as those of many well known composers.

IN SEARCH OF HIS WIFE.

Thought He Found Her in Quincy, but is Arrested.

Tuesday a well appearing gentleman, who gave his name as Jones, arrived in Quincy in search of his wife and family, whom he had not seen for eleven years. He located them at 20 Quincy avenue where he called to see them. A little later the police were notified that there was a crazy man at 20 Quincy avenue, and Inspector McKay and Officer Murray responded in a carriage. Upon their arrival they found Mr. Jones seated quietly in a chair looking anything but crazy, and upon being informed of the object of the officers' visit, he said, had his wife requested him to leave he would have done so.

Upon arriving at the station he said that he and his wife lived at Bridgeport, Conn., where he was employed as a painter for Barnum's circus. Eleven years ago he was taken insane and sent to an asylum where he remained until two years ago, and during all these eleven years had not seen his wife or children, whom he finally located in Quincy. His visit here was for the purpose of seeing them. When he called at Quincy avenue he could hardly recognize his wife but upon entering the house he asked to see his daughters.

Mrs. Jones told him to be seated and she would send for them, but instead of doing so, sent for the police.

From what can be learned Mrs. Jones has experienced a change of heart during the past eleven dears and does not love her husband any longer, and has commenced proceedings to secure a divorce.

Upon learning the true facts of the case Mr. Jones was allowed to depart which he did, a sadder but wiser man and poorer by $10, which it cost him to make the trip to Quincy.

Mr. Dallinger of Middlesex introduced in the Senate Tuesday on leave, a bill to compel county commissioners to keep a full and complete record of all their meetings, and also to keep special records of votes where there is any disagreement, as is the custom with the city councils and other bodies.

Mr. Dallinger also filed with the clerk of the senate Tuesday afternoon further bills in relation to the counties of the State. Of these bills one is to extend the provisions of the civil service act to the counties of the State, another is to disqualify paid employes of counties and deputy sheriffs from serving as officers of caucuses, conventions and political committees and a third is to disqualify persons whose appointment is subject to the provisions of the civil service rules from serving in the capacities named above.

Evidently Mr. Dallinger wants one bill passed if the others are rejected. He has, therefore, introduced general bills and special measures.—Boston Advertiser.

CHANGE OF PASTOR.

Minister of Swedish Lutheran Church Resigns—Call Extended.

The Swedish Lutheran Church has elected these officers for the ensuing year:

Secretary,—August Weeden.

Deacons,—Charles F. Carlson, August Weeden, Fritz Swanson, Joseph F. Johnson.

Trustees,—C. F. Carlson, W. R. Lofgren, Andrew Nelson, John Hellquist, Fritz Swanson.

Treasurer,—C. F. Carlson.

Rev. John T. Johnson, who has been the pastor of the church for a little over a year, resigned his pastorate which was accepted. Mr. Johnson will have charge of the church until April when he will go to Sweden for three months, when he will return to America and complete his studies at the Rock Island college.

After the resignation of Mr. Johnson had been accepted, it was voted to extend a call to Rev. C. Shore of Rock Island, Ill., and it is expected that he will accept the call.

Ex-Mayor's Father Dead.

Moses Fairbanks, an ex-Alderman of Boston, and the father of ex-Mayor Fairbanks of Quincy, died in Boston Tuesday at the age of 80 years.

He was born in Dublin, N. H., and coming to Boston as a young man, founded an immense bottling establishment under the firm name of Fairbanks & Beard. He was once interested in the Howard Atheneum, and was a heavy owner in the Wollaston Land Company and the Arlington Heights Land Company. He served as Alderman for several years. Of late he has been exclusively in the real estate business, and carried on his business up to about two months ago. He leaves a widow, two daughters and two sons.

Mr. Fairbanks had been in delicate health for a long time, having had a shock six years ago, but he was able to attend to his business until two months ago. As late as last Sunday he was able to be about the house. Death resulted from heart disease and was sudden.

The funeral will be held on Thursday at 2 P. M., 15 Wellington street, Boston.

Boom in Leather.

A prominent leather man says: "I think we are on the eve of a boom in leather. Indications all point that way. There is more sampling being done. The boom will come after today, when the bond sale is announced. Many banks who have been hoarding money will not get bonds, and the result will be easy money, which will enable shoe people to come into the market. There is unquestionably a shortage of both hides and leather, as everybody has been curtailing enormously. The United States Company has not been wetting hides for over three months, and we will soon be running into this shortage. Leather cannot be made for what it is selling for today.

—An open winter such as we are having this year means a saving of many thousands of dollars to the railroad companies. It is said that the Boston and Maine road have saved $100,000 by not having to run its snow plows this winter.

If we would trace Dyspepsia to its source, it would lead back to our kitchen. In fact, the secret of good health is good cooking. If well cooked, foods are partially digested; if poorly cooked, they are less digestible than in their raw state. If you are a victim of faulty cooking; that is, if you suffer from Dyspepsia, the rational cure must be looked for in an artificially digested food, and a food which will at the same time aid the digestion of other foods. Such a preparation virtually rests the tired digestive organs, thereby restoring them to their natural strength.

The Digestive Cordial, as prepared by the Shakers of Mount Lebanon, is just such a preparation, and a single 10 cent bottle will convince you of its value. If your druggist doesn't keep it, he will be glad to get it through his wholesale house.

Laxol is the best medicine for children. Doctors recommend it in place of Caster Oil.

It must be conceded, says the Brockton Times, that the Reed boom has never looked more hopeful that it does today. The fact is freely admitted by men who have no special love for the Maine statesman.

ON BEACON HILL.

Child Insurance—The New Normal Schools. The Biennial Amendment Resolve.

BOSTON, Feb. 5.—Mr. Mellen yesterday raised a point of order on the resolve in favor of biennial elections, and although overruled by Speaker Meyer, the leader from Worcester created such consternation in the ranks of those in favor of the measure that they were glad to make the concession of recommitting back to the committee on constitutional amendments.

The point was that that reported by the committee this year is not a transcript of the resolve which passed the house of last year, and that it does not agree in its form with the records of 1895; that the resolve of last year provided that it should take effect in 1898, while the present resolve provides that it shall become operative in 1897.

The delay that will ensue as a result of sending it back to the committee has scared the advocates of biennials, and other points of order, it is said, will be raised when it is reported back that will mean its death this year.

Mr. Weymouth of Fitchburg introduced a resolve appropriating for the grading of the grounds and fitting and furnishing of the new state normal schools the sums named: Hyannis, $25,000; Fitchburg, $35,000; Lowell $50,000; North Adams, $25,000; Salem, $43,000.

Mr. Mellen of Worcester introduced a bill providing that no life insurance company shall issue a policy upon the life of any child under five years of age.

Mr. Gauss introduced a bill to create a state children's bureau. It is similar to that which was before last year's legislature, and its purpose is to secure the best possible attention to the dependent and neglected children in the care of the state, more especially to those boarded out in private families.

Mr. Myers has filed two bills with the clerk of the house, one to authorize the purchase and consolidation of street railways, the other to authorize contracts and leases between street railway companies. The object of both bills is to avoid the necessity of so many special acts, and in each case all acts done are to be subject to approval by the railroad commissioners.

The governor submitted to the senate and house a supplemental report of the commissioners appointed to promote uniformity of legislation throughout the several states. The "supplemental report" consists of a printed report of the proceedings of the fifth conference of the state board of commissioners, held at Detroit in August last.

A bill to preserve the Bulfinch front of the state house was introduced by Senator Irwin. The provisions of the bill are substantially the plans of last year, which were to have steel ribs placed inside the structure, the whole expense not to exceed $350,000.

Rupture Threatened.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—The Chronicle announces that the Liberals will challenge the government at the earliest moment in parliament on the abandonment of the Armenians. It is believed, The Chronicle continues, that Mr. Balfour will then make unexpected revelations concerning the action of previous individuals and governments on the Armenian question. The Liberals regard the Venezuelan affair as too important to be raised as a mere side-issue upon the address. Therefore the house will be adjourned after the adoption of the address, so as to secure a full debate on Venezuela.

A Busy Term.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5. — The October term of the supreme court of the United States was concluded yesterday, and the court adjourned until March 2. During the term 217 cases have been disposed of, as against 165 last year. Before adjourning, the court changed the assignment of the sugar bounty cases from the first to the third Monday in March, and also received a motion from the attorney general to advance on the docket the case of the steamer Coquitlan claim, which involves questions of international importance.

Plenty of Bidders.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5. — Although no news is obtainable of a definite nature in regard to the number of bids already received at the treasury department for the new 4 per cent loan, it is certain that the number exceeds the expectations of the officials. It seems to be the general expectation that a great majority of the small bids will be at figures to realize as low a rate as 3 per cent, or $119.3229 per hundred, while the large bids are expected to call for a rate as high as 3 7-16, or $110.2992 per hundred.

Elopers Return.

SALEM, Mass., Feb. 5.—After a journey through Italy, James W. Smith and Mrs. F. L. Higginson, the wife of the Boston banker of that name, who figured in the sensational elopement of a few months ago, have returned. The object of the visit is said to be to arrange preliminaries for a contest of the divorce libel filed in the superior court of Suffolk county by Francis L. Higginson. The elopers, it is said, arrived in New York 10 days ago on an ocean liner, traveling under fictitious names.

Steamer St. Paul Safe.

LONG BRANCH, Feb. 5.—The big steamship St. Paul, which went ashore Jan. 25, was floated yesterday during high tide, and started for New York. At 11:15 she passed Sandy Hook. It was 1:15 when the vessel first showed off the American line piers, and a good hour before she was finally warped into the slip.

Modern Messiah Missing.

SANTA FE, Feb. 5.—Francis C. Schlatter, the healer, has not been heard of for the last two weeks. He was last seen going to the Mogollon mining district, over a mountain trail that most men would not undertake to cross in the winter. It is possible that he has perished in the snow.

AN UNWRITTEN BOOK.

How John Speer Is Printing His Reminiscences of Senator Jim Lane.

A most novel biography will soon be issued in Wichita, Kan. It is already more than half finished, but not a page of manuscript has been written. The author is John Speer, an octogenarian printer, and he has no use for such mediums as pen and ink in his literary labors. When he wanted to make a book that should be a personal history of that picturesque pioneer statesman of Kansas, the late Senator Jim Lane, he went to the case and began putting the story in type. Speer was a lifelong friend of General Lane and depends on his wonderful memory for the facts of which the story of the stirring life of the Kansas patriot is being constructed. He was with Lane in the secret Union league caucus in Baltimore the day before the second nomination of Lincoln.

JOHN SPEER.

His book is to be one of 400 pages, and he has completed nearly 300 pages. He could have written it all out had he chosen, as he is a veteran editor as well as compositor. He has fitted up two cases of type in the library of his son's house. For an imposing stone he uses the bed of an old Washington hand press, the relic of a printing office which he once owned in Lawrence, and which was burned down by the guerrilla Quantrell in one of his raids. On that fatal morning Mr. Speer's office was burned and two of his sons were killed. Mr. Speer works at his case for eight hours a day and sets up on an average 1,000 ems an hour.

Mr. Speer is remarkably well preserved for his years and bids fair to round out the century. His book is full of stories of thrilling adventures and interesting reminiscences of General Lane. He expects to have it ready about March 1. It will not be put on sale, but the edition of 1,000 copies will be distributed among Mr. Speer's friends.

MANY SOLDIERS LOVED HER.

Mother Dame, the Army Nurse, Still Lives at the Age of Eighty-one.

Thousands of Union veterans and not a few who wore the gray will be pained to learn that Miss Harriet P. Dame, who was fondly called "mother" by the whole Eighteenth army corps, is suffering for the second time within a year with a broken leg. Miss Dame is the president of the Ex-Army Nurses' association and one of the few women heroes of the civil war. She is now 81 years old and lives in a neat little cottage in Washington.

Mother Dame went to the front in 1861 from her home in Concord, N. H., and joined the Second New Hampshire regiment. She remained in the field for four years and eight months, probably serving longer than any other woman. She was present at most all of the important battles of that long struggle from Bull Run to Gettysburg, often under fire and many times suffering the same hardships as the soldiers.

She went all through the Virginia campaign, often marching for miles with her regiment. At the battle of Fair Oaks she was ordered to the rear, but she saw her boys suffering in the trenches, and she refused to go. Twice during this battle she escaped death almost miraculously. Once a shell tore through her tent just as she had left it, and another burst above her head as she was cooking some broth, but she was not even wounded. While camped at Yorktown one night she was told to put out her light, as the Confederates were shelling the camp and making her tent the target of their guns. At the second battle of Bull Run she was taken prisoner, but was passed through the lines after doing good service in the Confederate hospitals. She followed the field ambulances wherever they went and proved a ministering angel to the wounded soldiers. How many men owe their lives to her careful nursing will never be known.

She received a vote of thanks from the legislature of her state and $500. With the money she founded a home for the veterans of her regiment, and the pension which she receives from the government she gives to the poor and needy.

Compensations of Blindness.

Signor Ansaldi, a student, blind from birth, graduated recently with high honors from the Florence Institute de Studi Superiori, the school for post-graduate university work. His thesis on "Compensations In the Senses of the Blind" was declared by the examiners to be an important contribution of new material to physiological psychology.

A NEED OF THE CITY.

Not Only Norfolk Downs But Quincy Wants More Protection.

The petition of the residents of Norfolk Downs and Wollaston Park for better fire protection is one that should not be passed over lightly by the City Council. This is one of the most rapid growing sections of our city and as the petition truthfully sets forth, there is a large amount of valuable property there which is actually without adequate fire protection, the nearest apparatus being Wollaston or Atlantic.

With a central fire station located near the Norfolk Downs depot the apparatus would not only be within three minutes run to all parts of this section, but the apparatus at the present central station would not be obliged to respond except in case of conflagration.

Then again Squantum which has long been crying for better fire protection, would have a steamer within two miles, whereas now the steamer and hook and ladder are fives miles away, and the horses that haul these pieces of apparatus are completely fagged out when Atlantic is reached.

Quincy is a growing city, and, although it has been fortunate thus far in the matter of fires, there is no knowing when a serious conflagration may start, and compared with surrounding cities and towns, it is way behind the times in the matter of fire apparatus.

A Commendable Enterprise.

The construction of an electric road connecting Brockton with the Bridgewaters, Raynham and Taunton, will complete a very important link in a chain of electric roads running from New Bedford to Nashua, N. H. Such a journey would be possible, though hardly practical at the present stage of electrical propulsion, but it tends to show the wonderful growth and popularity of electric street railways, and opens up possibilities well nigh unlimited in the near future. And so, while at the present time electric roads are impracticable for long distance traveling, they play a most important part in uniting and knitting together towns which by their natural location, the common aims of the people, the natural and artificial ties that exist between neighboring places, are waiting for just some such method of quick and frequent communication to attain their highest development.

The Press Wants Justice.

In the senate Tuesday a petition was received of the Boston Daily Newspaper association and others for legislation to prevent speculative and groundless suits for libel. The petitioners, practically all the newspapers of Massachusetts, represent that the laws of this State, in relation to suits for libel, and the rulings of the courts in relation thereto, are unjust and oppressive, and they pray for legislation that will tend to prevent speculative and groundless suits, without in any particular enlarging the freedom of the press.

AN IMITATION EARTH

PROJECT TO BUILD A GIGANTIC FACSIMILE GLOBE.

To Be 418 Feet In Diameter at Its Equator and to Revolve on Its Axis Once In 24 Hours—Scheme of the Famous Geographer, Elisee Reclus.

Elisee Reclus, the eminent geographer and scientist, has just given to the world a brand new project which is rather interesting. M. Reclus claims Paris as his home, but just now he is abroad at the urgent request of the French government, for besides being a scientist he is an anarchist of the most pronounced type. It was because of his activity in this latter line that he was sentenced, two years ago, to 20 years' imprisonment. Owing to the fact that M. Reclus was absent at the time of the passing of this sentence he is not now in prison.

His latest scheme shows that science, and not anarchy, is uppermost in his mind. His idea is to have constructed in some great city of the world a gigantic spheroid that shall be an exact imitation of the earth in relative proportions as well as form. This, he says, would be an imposing and permanent object lesson and would give students and spectators as well an accurate idea of the topographical and geodetic features of the planet on which we live.

M. Reclus has worked out the details of his scheme and could supply much of the data necessary to carry it out. He proposes to build a globe which shall be exactly one one-hundred-thousandth as large as the earth. The equatorial diameter would be about 418 feet and the circumference 1,312 feet. It would consist of an outer shell laid over a lightly made framework of iron. The surface would be of plaster of paris, molded and colored so as to indicate elevations and depressions, plains, valleys, mountain ranges, oceans, islands, lakes, rivers, etc.

The outer shell would be put on in 32,104 panels, each of which could be removed at will. The spheroid would be made to revolve on its axis by clock work machinery at the exact rate which the earth revolves once in 24 hours. The effects of light and shadow might be shown by the use of electric light.

Another feature of the scheme is to inclose the mimic earth in an outer envelope or shell of spheroidal form on which could be painted another representation of the surface of the globe. The space between the globe and its covering would be utilized for a series of spiral galleries, which would be reached by elevators. The coils of this great spiral would be 24 in number and would be about 20 feet apart. These galleries would be used by students and spectators, and a complete collection of books, maps and scientific instruments could be kept there to facilitate the minute study of the wonderful globe.

The total height of the structure would be 636 feet, the width of the space between the globe and the envelope 51 feet. The total weight of the globe and the envelope, it is estimated, would be 27,000 tons, and it would have to be supported on a foundation of masonry. The cost of the whole structure would be about $4,000,000. It is M. Reclus' idea to have this sum appropriated by three or four governments in the interests of science, and the location of the globe would probably depend on the willingness or generosity of the various contributors. If New York or Chicago wanted the structure a big sum would have to be subscribed.

This scheme is not the product of an erratic brain, but the conception of a distinguished scientist whose mental achievements have been more than once recognized by the world. Elisee Reclus seems to be a sort of Jekyll-Hyde character. In 1894 he was awarded the grand gold medal by the London Geographical society as a mark of their appreciation for his books on geography. The same year he was outlawed from the land of his birth with four other anarchists, all of whom were in sympathy with the infamous Ravachol, the Parisian bomb thrower.

His first literary achievement was a work which is still used as a textbook by French scholars. His first offense against the French government was in 1848, when he headed a revolt and had to flee the country. He was allowed to return a few years later. He ought to have a warm place in the heart of every American, for it was largely due to his writings during our civil war that Napoleon III was induced to forego his intention of recognizing the Confederacy. He refused a purse of money tendered by our minister to France for this service, although at the time he was in direst poverty.

He accepted the chair of geography in the University of Brussels, but was removed for his anarchistic expressions. He took part in the commune in 1870 and was sentenced to life imprisonment by the Thiers government, but this was changed to banishment after an intercession in his behalf by all the great scientists in Europe. He took part in the Lyons riots in 1882, but escaped to Switzerland. Later he returned to Paris and kept quiet for a time, but was again compelled to leave the country. He has three brothers living, all of whom are more or less celebrated.

Harder Than Diamonds.

When boron is made to act upon carbon under the heat of the electric furnace, two bodies are formed, one of them stable, the other attackable by a mixture of potassic chlorate and acetic acid. The first of these has the formula $B_{06}$ C. M. M. Moissan, in La Nature, says it is obtained by the direct union of boron with carbon in the electric furnace and in other ways which are indicated by the author.

Boride of carbon belongs to the same class of compounds as silicide of carbon (carbide of silicon). Like the latter, it possesses great stability and great hardness. It occurs in brilliant black crystals, having the density of 2.51. Heated to 1,000 degrees C. in oxygen gas, it burns slowly and with more difficulty than the diamond, yielding carbonic acid and a black residue coated with melted boracic acid. The most curious property of this new compound is its excessive hardness. While silicide of carbon scarcely polishes the diamond and does not cut it, facets may be produced on the diamond by using the dust of boride of carbon. The latter is very friable. It can be pounded fine in a mortar, then mixed with oil and used instead of diamond dust for cutting diamonds.

The hardness of this boride is apparently less than that of the diamond, since it grinds more slowly, but the facets are cut with great clearness, and it is the first example of a definite substance capable of cutting the diamond. The compound therefore is harder than silicide of carbon.—Popular Science News.

Do We Eat Too Much?

If you require proof that we do, suppose that we have for breakfast a nice fresh roll which eats like a piece of cake, will we not eat more heartily than if we had to partake of bread two or three days old?

Can it be affirmed that it is absolutely necessary to have several courses for dinner? After the second course we only eat for the sake of eating. There is no doubt that we eat more than enough to satisfy our hunger.

If we compare the quantity of food which satisfies a peasant and that which is considered necessary for a rich man, we shall be inclined to think that they belong to a different species.

A fisherman will be contented with a piece of bread and cheese, but the tourist who goes with him takes a tremendous hamper crammed full. It is not because physiological necessity is more exacting in the one man than in the other, but because the gentleman is accustomed to eat, not according to the dictates of hunger, but until all the courses are exhausted—and in many cases until it is materially impossible to eat more.

The Arab who accompanies the sportsman on an excursion in the desert finds a piece of hard bread and a few dates sufficient for his wants; the sportsman is afraid of dying of hunger if he does not take with him several baskets of provisions, boxes of preserved meat and the like.—London Tit-Bits.

The Mirage.

Lord Raleigh says that the delusion of water appearing in mirages on hot, sandy plains is due to the fact that the undisturbed stratum of air near the earth is highly rarefied. A ray of light falling very obliquely upon this stratum and being totally reflected reaches the eye of an observer just as it would if reflected from water. The phenomenon is, strictly speaking, one of refraction rather than reflection. Now, just as the glass lens forms an image on the screen, so the crystalline lens of the eye forms an image on the retina or sensitive back part of the eye. This retina image is inverted, as all retina images are, and being projected to another strata of rarefied air above has the effect of making the delusion perfect. Raleigh further says that there has been much unnecessary speculation in connection with the theory of inverted retina images, the mystery being that we do not see all things inverted. The truth of the matter is—now look for something you never saw in a book—we do not see the retina image at all; we only feel it. If we could see the image on the eye of some one else, we would certainly see it inverted.

Painful.

She—Then you are willing to die for me?

He—Ach, with pleasure!

She—Well, I don't ask for that, but I am going to put your affection to the test.

He—By all means. What am I to do for you? Shall I capture a lion, or say to the mighty ocean, "Stand still; my love commands it?"

She—No, I don't crave after any such impossibilities. There is only one thing I ask of you.

He—What is it?

She—Never to come here again.—Unsere Gesellschaft.

Two Drummers For Trade.

A Portland merchant has recently had illustrated to him in the persons of two commercial travelers great vicissitudes of fortune. One who called to solicit trade for a certain brand of catchup was at one time one of the leading merchants of Boston, and his residence, when adversity came, sold under the hammer for $73,000. The other, who had a line of cigars, had been twice elected governor of one of the largest of the middle western states.—Portland (Me.) Advertiser.

Our army does more traveling than any other on the globe. When troops are moved in France or Germany, it is only for a short distance, but shifting the position of a regiment in this country sometimes involves thousands of miles of travel.

Man is a bundle of habits; in a word, there is not a quality or function, either of body or mind, which does not feel the influence of this great law of animated nature.—Paley.

TOUCH ME.

Where art thou gone, my sweet?
I call thee, sad and slow.
Why is the time made long for us to meet?
Yearning I go.
Touch me, and I shall know.

I ask the leaves, the flowers,
Whence their new grace and glee;
Who tendeth them against the wind, the showers,
Guideth the bee;
Touch me, and I shall see.

* * * * * * *

Touch me, and I shall know
That sea and land and air
Bring ever my lost love to me, and so,
Live like a prayer,
Certain thou wilt be there.
—E. J. Mills in New York Tribune.

AN ODD EXPERIENCE.

If there are those inclined to doubt the probability of the following story, told to me as the truth by an eminent and trustworthy gentleman of San Francisco, they have yet to learn and comprehend some of the most vital things of life. He said to me:

"A few summers ago my family left town to spend some weeks in the country. I gave the servants a vacation and arranged to stay alone at my house. For a change I had a bed placed in the drawing room, which was in the front of the house on the lower floor. On one side of this room was the vestibule, into which the outer door opened, and on the other an exterior passage, which opened upon the street through a gate, and which ran back alongside the house in the rear of the premises. It was paved with boards, some of which had worn slightly loose. The gate was closed with an ordinary lift latch.

"We had lived in the house a number of years, but I had never slept in that room before. The front of the room was taken up by a bay window, which was furnished on the inside with ordinary slat blinds. My bed was placed at the opposite end of the room against the sliding doors.

"I had arranged to take my meals down town. On the first evening of my solitary occupancy I returned to the house shortly after dinner and read in my improvised bedroom until 10 o'clock. Then I pulled down one of the upper sashes of the window, closed the blinds and went to bed.

"Ordinarily I would fall quickly asleep on retiring, but the novelty of my position and perhaps some business anxieties kept me awake for an hour or two. This worried me and made me nervous. The stillness of the night came on, but still I remained awake. It was while I was lying in this state that I heard the latch of the gate opening into the side passage cautiously raised, then some one step cautiously within, leaving the gate open, and then footfalls proceeding stealthily toward the rear of the house, causing a loose board here and there to squeak.

"I listened with the most eager and strained alertness, for my immediate conclusion was that a burglar, perhaps having observed the departure of the family and assumed that the house had been temporarily deserted, had come to plunder the place. I heard him try and then abandon the securely barred door opening from the rear porch upon the passage.

"A lattice extended from the lower rear porch to the upper. Without moving, I heard the intruder slowly but nimbly scale the lattice and step upon the floor of the upper porch. A hall door and a bedchamber window both opened upon this porch, and I was curious to note which the burglar would attack and began to wonder if they had been locked.

"He chose the window. I heard the sash lock snap under the pressure of his cold chisel. After a pause he stepped into the room and proceeded to ransack it. It was my wife's room, and although I knew that she had provided elsewhere for the safe care of her furs and other more valuable clothes, I reflected that there must have been left a number of things which a burglar might think worthy of attention. I heard him strip a blanket from the bed, spread it upon the floor and proceed to pile upon it the plunder which he found in trunks, chiffoniers, closets and the like. Then he stepped to the open door into the passage and stood listening for a moment.

"These occurrences had a surprising effect upon my nerves. The door between my temporary bedroom and the vestibule was open for ventilation, and I realized that I was almost in physical touch with the man who would not hesitate to kill me should that prove necessary to his safety. I knew that sooner or later he would descend the stairs, at the foot of which was the open door of my room. It would not have been difficult for me to waylay him and make an effort to cripple or kill him in the darkness with one of a dozen of the convenient articles which I remembered were in the room, including a heavy poker, some bronze statuettes, chairs, stools and the like. Ordinarily, as you are aware, I am not a timid man, but I tell you now that an unaccountable fear assailed me and held me prisoner. It requires a good deal of candor to make that admission, but it is necessary to a complete understanding of this remarkable experience.

"After standing in a listening attitude a moment the burglar slowly and cautiously descended the stairs, and, as I expected, left my room alone and proceeded to the dining room. I knew that the solid silverware had been sent away for safe keeping, and so I was not surprised when the burglar, after handling the plated ware which he found and making it tinkle softly and gently, left it, made an unprofitable search of other rooms and returned to the foot of the stairs. This brought him again to my door. He paused on the threshold, listened in silence a moment and then started up stairs. In that moment I suffered such a reasonless agony of terror as cannot be explained on ordinary grounds. I held my breath until I was nearly suffocated, and when the man turned to leave I was cold to the marrow.

"He reascended the stairs, tied up his bundle, passed through the window and closed it, dropped the parcel over the rail, clambered down the lattice and went away as he had come, shutting the gate behind him.

"I felt intensely relieved when he had gone, and a reaction set in that composed my nerves for slumber. Drowsiness was already approaching when I was startled by the soft clicking of the gate latch. It was very unlikely that the same burglar had returned and would have been extraordinary if another had come. And yet try as hard as I might to reason out some other possibility there came the stealthy footsteps of a thief on the boards of the outer passage. I studied this step so intently and analytically that I was certain the intruder was not the same as the first. Then I began to wonder what he would do.

"I was not surprised to hear him try the door of the lower porch and find it strongly barred within, nor greatly to hear him climb the lattice as the other had done. I was curious to know whether he would attack the door or the window after he landed on the porch. By a singular coincidence he chose the window. I heard him try it and imagined that he started upon discovering that the latch had been broken. It was evident that upon entering the room he was surprised and confused to see its disorder. But he drew a sheet from the bed, spread it on the floor and proceeded to ransack the room. Evidently his bewilderment increased, and he must have been discouraged to find so little worth taking.

"He was not long in completing the looting of the room, and then he went to the door and stood a moment in the passage, listening intently. After that he began carefully to descend the stairs. His conduct thenceforward was exactly a repetition of his predecessor's. He passed my door, tinkled the plated silverware in the dining room, left it alone, returned to the vestibule, stood a moment listening at my open door, cautiously retraced his steps up stairs, passed through the window, closed it, dropped his parcel to the ground, clambered down the lattice and passed out, closing the gate behind him.

"It may be supposed that the coincidences amazed me beyond measure. This, more than anything else, seemed to unnerve me all the more. All this time I realized I had been acting the part of a coward. Merely to have lighted the gas in my room would have cleared the house of the second burglar, but I had not the courage to do that.

"My alarm and nervousness became so great that I arose from bed and was just about to strike a match with which to light the gas in the chandelier when I heard the gate latch click for the third time. My match remained unstruck, and I listened with a fascinated intentness to this last invasion. In all particulars it was identical with the second, down to the point when the burglar descended the stairs and passed my open door on his way to the dining room. To light the gas then would have been to place the man in a corner and compel him to fight. I realized not only that it is taking one's life in one's hands to cut off a burglar's retreat before attacking him (as a knowledge of a chance of escape diverts his attention from the necessity for self defense and renders him easier to overcome), but that I was now in a condition in which I lacked both the courage and the strength to make the attempt.

"The position which I now occupied in the room was half way between the bed and the window. As I was so much nearer the window than before, I could hear sounds from without with much more distinctness. While I stood there listening to the third burglar tinkle the plated ware I was startled to hear the gate latch click again and the footfall of a fourth burglar on the board paved passage. As he was climbing the lattice a fifth burglar entered the gate, then a sixth, then others, until burglars in an endless procession were entering my premises and rifling my house on one common and unvarying plan.

"It is useless to say that an intelligent man should not have entertained such an idea for a moment. We know that I might have reasoned that perhaps there had been only one, or, at most, two, burglars after all, and that the fright which they gave me caused me to conjure up the others from a fear deranged imagination. It might be profitable to indulge in a great many other speculations on this subject, but the truth remains that I could not reason at all.

"In simple desperation, perhaps moved by a sort of fascination, I crept to the window in order to observe with idle curiosity the procession of burglars entering the gate. I turned the slats of a lower blind and looked out. Not a soul visible, and yet burglars were still pouring through the gate!

"The explanation came like a shocking revelation. The wind was playing with some loose blind slats immediately above my head as I stood there, and out of that slight and varying sound my imagination had constructed the phantasy from beginning to end. No burglar at all had invaded my house. I amused and teased myself for some time afterward by compelling my attention to leave the rattling slats at intervals and fill my house with burglars."—San Francisco Call.

The Moral Lost.

"You know," said the lady who with sincere ardor desires only the best for the human race, "that a dog will not touch whisky?"

Colonel Kyahter passed his hand over his brow in a troubled way, and said:

Too Poor.

Harry—I cannot offer you wealth, Marie; my brains are all the fortune I possess.

Marie—Oh, Harry, if you are as badly off as that, I am afraid papa will never give his consent.—Scribner's Magazine.

Struck by a Dead Hand.

Said Henry Billings, a retired railroad engineer:

"I was running a night train on the Santa Fe road back in the seventies. This particular night had been stormy and threatening, and the flashes of lightning were frequent and intense. We were running ahead of our schedule in order to make a siding in time to allow an extra to pass us, and were traveling, I suppose, at the rate of about 30 or 35 miles an hour.

"I was sitting with my face close to the forward window of the cab, gazing straight ahead, when in a brilliant blaze of electricity a man's arm and head suddenly burst with great force through the glass and the open hand struck me squarely in the face. I was dazed for an instant by the blow, and held blindly to the side of the cab. My first thought was that some tramp was trying to hold up my train to rob the passengers, and, acting on this idea, I seized my wrench from its place and dealt the head of the intruder a blow with all my might.

"The fireman, thinking I had killed the man, shut off steam and we slowed down and took our lanterns to examine the strange visitor. I could not describe the feeling that crept over me when I climbed upon the engine and looked at the man whom I believed had attacked me. His entire body below the arms was gone. It was easy to understand what had happened. He had been struck by the rapidly moving engine and his body severed as with a knife, the lower half falling to one side and the head and arms flying straight through the cab window."—Atlanta Journal.

Leaves That Are Fifty Feet Long.

In our temperate climate none of the trees has leaves of a size that will even compare favorably with those of the sea island and tropical countries in general. The maple, the oak and the elm leaves are but infinitesimal bits of green when compared with the gigantic sheets of velvety verdure found on some of the trees, shrubs and plants of South and Central America.

The South American tree which has the largest leaf is the Inaja palm, which grows on the banks of the Amazon. The leaves of this giant are often 50 feet in length, but they are very narrow, seldom exceeding 8 to 10 feet. With the Ceylonese cocoanut palm it is different. In that species the leaves are from 20 to 25 feet in length and from 16 to 18 in width. The natives of Ceylon are said to use these leaves in tentmaking, three or four being sufficient to make a shelter for a whole family. An extraordinary specimen of Ceylonese palm leaf now in the British museum, and which must be a freak—because the average length and breadth of the leaves of this variety of trees do not exceed the figures given above—is 36 feet in length and 28 in width, even though it is admitted that it must have shrunk one-fifth in drying.—St. Louis Republic.

LETTER FROM HARPOOT

Graphically Describes the Present Situation In Armenia.

A Cruel, Relentless Mohammedan Crusade.

Turks Seem to Have Special Animosity Against Protestantism.

BOSTON, Feb. 5.—Rev. H. N. Barnum, D.D., was an eye-witness of the Armenian massacres in the section around Harpoot, where he is located as missionary, and is well fitted to discuss the matter. He sends the following letter from the scenes of the massacres, which is published in The Congregationalist today:

In such a disaster as has come upon this country it is impossible to secure accurate information. Even where an attempt is made to secure reports in a village they are sometimes much exaggerated, and in some cases there is an underestimate. The reign of terror is not yet over, and many of the prominent Christians whose lives are spared scarcely venture from their hiding places, and oftentimes do not know what has befallen some of their nearest neighbors.

The desolation is almost universal. Even the Christian villages that have been spared have suffered so much in one way and another that in ordinary times they would be considered to have met with calamity. The reports of deaths in our own field that have reached us amount to some 16,000. We now know that in many cases they have been much exaggerated, but there are large numbers of villages from which we have heard nothing except that there have been plunder and massacre, and we are confident that if we had all the facts our reported aggregate would be less than the reality.

There is another feature of the case of which we are just learning, and that is the death of children. This has not previously been reported. Men, when they found their own death was inevitable, have killed their daughters to save them from a fate worse than death. Even mothers in their flight cast away young children, and some were thrown into streams to save them from the Turks. In some cases families who had secreted themselves strangled their infant children lest their cries should reveal their location.

The forcible conversion to Mohammedanism is perhaps the darkest side of this awful picture. Many men have died as martyrs, Gregorians as well as Protestants. They would not for a moment listen to the proposition to save their lives by changing their faith.

A still larger number, some through the natural fear of death and some out of regard to their families, have professed a conversion to Islam, and have submitted to its rites and are practicing its worship in the confident expectation that relief will come from this pressure. Some of this latter class are among our best brethren, and our hearts are rent and torn by the recital of their distress.

The pressure in the cities is not open and strong, although in the height of the massacre it was severe, but in the villages it still abides, though I believe the government has taken some mild steps to relieve it.

Christian public worship is suspended almost everywhere. Even where the Christians have not changed their faith, and where churches and chapels are not in ruins, they are afraid to meet lest their coming together might invite attack. Very few houses of worship remain uninjured. Where they have not been burned, they have been badly damaged and are unfit for use. Some have been converted into mosques.

Five pastors and four licensed preachers have been killed, another preacher is wounded, a pastor is in prison and most of the remainder are fugitives from their places of labor or are afraid to show themselves in public. There seems to be special animosity against Protestantism.

No Protestantism.

In some places the Turks declare that they will not tolerate Protestantism any longer—that they will recognize hereafter only one Christian community. There has also been a large sacrifice of Gregorian priests. Many places have neither priest nor preacher. In some cases the priests have accepted Mohammedanism.

It is a cruel, relentless Mohammedan crusade, such as one could never have dreamed possible in this age of the world. I have even heard of Moslems catching the blood of Christians in their hands and drinking it as a draught refreshing to their souls. Thus it will be seen that Christianity is under a dense, dark cloud.

The government makes a desperate effort to lay the blame of all this on the Armenians in its official report. I presume that the same charge has been made by the central government for this region, although the Christian population were like frightened sheep, and, in the hope of relieving suspicion and averting disaster, they voluntarily surrendered their arms to the government before the raid.

In all the massacres, the plundering and burning of houses and the firing of soldiers in this vicinity, I have not heard that a single Kurd or Turk was even wounded, or that a Christian offered any resistance. This attitude of the Christians doubtless saved a great many lives.

Nevertheless, the mayor of this city had the effrontery to tell me the other day that the riot in this city was caused by an Armenian firing a gun, and the chief of police at the same time said that the massacre in Malatia began by an Armenian barber cutting the throat of a Kurd whom he was shaving. An Armenian did cut a Kurd's throat, but not until he saw his brother and others cut down at the door of his shop and realized that the Turks and Kurds had begun a massacre in the streets.

In Malatia and Arabkir the Armenians, when driven to their houses and churches, saw that no quarter would be given, so they defended themselves as best they could, but this, doubtless, greatly increased the mortality on their own side as it still more exasperated the Turks.

For months past we have received fewer and fewer American papers and magazines, and those which did come had torn out of them all reference to Turkish politics. Now our papers have stopped altogether, except now and then one that never refers to political matters.

We are, however, extremely glad that our letters reach us for the most part. We are beginning to receive expressions of sympathy from friends in the dear home land—written after the first dispatches in regard to our disaster. These letters so full of loving sympathy and containing the assurance that many prayers are offered for us and for this stricken people have moved our hearts to their very depths, and have drawn out our tears. Our own sufferings have been very slight.

Much disappointment has been felt here that all our buildings were not burned, as it was the manifest determination of even some high in authority to do, in the hope that they would be rid of us altogether. Since the riot a petition has been circulated by Turks, who constrained many Armenians to sign it through fear, asking for our expulsion as disturbers of the peace and as promoters of the revolutionary sentiment among the Armenians, but here we are, and, God helping us, here we shall remain to lay anew the foundations of this work, confident that it is divinely ordained, and that out of these ruins shall arise a temple to the divine honor.

We do not need to ask Christian people to pray for Turkey and for the coming of Christ's kingdom here, a kingdom of joy and peace, for they do that already. All the indications are that the struggle against Christianity is not yet past, and that it is to be a severe one.

Exciting Times.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Feb. 5.—The police commissioners have called a hearing for next Friday, at which all persons having any charges to prefer against any police officers shall have an opportunity to substantiate them. Chief Healey yesterday ordered all the drug stores in the city to be searched for liquor. Druggists on both sides of the river were visited and liquor was found in every place. The druggists claim that they are exempt from the law, as it is necessary for them to use the liquor in compounding their prescriptions, and that no actual sale can be proven against them.

Women In Great Majority.

BOSTON, Feb. 5.—The annual report of the state board of education shows the number of teachers in Massachusetts to be 12,027, of whom 1046 are men and 10,981 women. For the year men have earned $128.55 a month; women $48.33, and while the wages of men have decreased 86 cents a month, those of women have increased 47 cents. For 10 years the men have gained $7.83 a month and women $4.53. The disparity in average ages of women and men is great.

Indignant Husband Sued.

WATERBURY, Conn., Feb. 5.—W. H. Batchelder, proprietor of the Hub dining rooms, with his cashier, Mrs. Amelia Knops, were arrested yesterday on a serious charge. The arrest was made at the instigation of the woman's husband, who preferred charges against Batchelder and Mrs. Knops. Knops was afterward placed under arrest in a suit for slander for $5000, brought by Mrs. Knops and Batchelder.

O'Neil's Stealings.

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 5.—The expert accountant who has been examining the books of defaulting Treasurer John H. O'Neil of the American Hand Sewed Shoe company, has completed his work. The company's officers refuse to state the amount of the embezzlement, except that it exceeds $10,000, the amount of his bond. There were intimations in certain quarters that the figures would reach $50,000.

Pleading For Keegan.

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 5.—A second petition for a new trial of Lawrence C. Keegan, who is serving a life sentence for the murder of Emily Chambers, was filed in the office of the clerk of the appellate court yesterday. The ground on which the new trial is asked for is that of newly discovered evidence, and Keegan's attorneys state that they are very confident of favorable action on their petition.

Police Hard at Work.

BOSTON, Feb. 5.—The developments in the Sophia Grant murder in Charlestown are such as have come from interviews with Mrs. Ida Quinlan, the woman under arrest. The police now believe that within the next 24 hours they will have a complete chain of evidence, but they are noncommittal whether they are weaving this around Mrs. Quinlan or some other party.

Foul Play Feared.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Feb. 5.—The police have begun an investigation into the mysterious absence of an entire family—Frank Rhodick, a worthless character of Fairfield, his wife and 2-months-old child. It is suspected that Rhodick has made away with his wife and child and skipped.

A Friend Indeed.

BOSTON, Feb. 5.—Captain William M. Howes of the schooner Leander V. Beebe, which rescued 70 men from the sinking steamer J. W. Hawkins, has received from New York a valuable pair of opera glasses, also a package said to contain money, from the men he rescued.

Slugged by a Negro.

CONCORD, N. H., Feb. 5.—During a row in a billiard saloon, Frank Frye, colored, laid out James Dudley with a cue, inflicting wounds which made Dudley unconscious. He is at the hospital in a serious condition. Frye surrendered himself to the police.

Davis Won.

BOSTON, Feb. 5.—L. F. S. Davis was yesterday unanimously elected president of the American Protective association at the annual meeting held to choose the state officers for the coming year.

MORGAN WAS ON DECK

Will Probably Secure the Greater Portion of the Bond Loan.

Bids Went Far Over the $600,000,000 Mark.

Success of the Issue Exceeds Even the Greatest Anticipations.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—The whole city is surprised at the startling and instantaneous success of the government's call for a loan. Only $100,000,000 was asked for, but when the bids were opened there was over $600,000,000 of capital represented.

It will take many hours of hard work to straighten out the tangle as to the bids received and the exact price offered. In spite of the care exercised by the committee which opened the bids, many unavoidable errors were made in announcing the bids.

The great feature of the bond bidding was the offer of J. P. Morgan's syndicate, which, as now composed, includes only his own banking house, the Deutsche bank of Berlin and Harvey Fisk & Sons of New York. They proposed to take the entire issue at $110.6877.

Only one other bid of anything like equal amount was received. Mr. Morgan, after figuring on the bids received, said that he estimated that he would be awarded on his bid about 60 per cent of the $100,000,000. He reached this conclusion simply from hearing the various bids read, as he did not think that more than $40,000,000 in bids above that figure had been made.

Scarcely more than one-third of the actual bids received are included in the imperfect lists published. Several thousand bids below the obvious limit of acceptance are omitted.

The immense offerings astounded experts. The bids literally swamped the treasury department, which was so taken by surprise that at 6 o'clock last night, although extra clerks had been hurriedly drafted, the work of tabulating the bids was still in progress, and it was impossible to tell with definiteness how many bids and for what aggregate had been received at figures in advance of the upset price of $110.6877, at which a syndicate composed of J. P. Morgan & Co., Pliny Fisk & Co. and the Deutsch bank of Berlin offered to take the whole loan.

The bids ranged from par up to a single $50 bid at $150. It is impossible, therefore, to say at this time how the awards will be made. Treasury officials regard the loan as a complete success, both as to the popular subscription feature and the prices obtained. Bids came from several thousand individuals and from hundreds of national banks and other banking institutions. Nearly all the leading New York bankers and big insurance companies were represented in the list of bidders, but with few exceptions they were outmaneuvered by the Morgan syndicate.

Owing to the confusion caused by the magnitude of the offerings and the consequent delay in classifying and scheduling the bids, any authoritative statement of the policy that will be pursued cannot be made at this time. As the great bulk of the offerings were made below the Morgan figure, it is believed that the syndicate headed by the great New York banker will be accepted for about $50,000,000, and possibly more. In any event no bid below the syndicate rate of $110.6877 will be accepted, as that rate covers the entire loan. It is understood that Mr. Morgan will procure a part of the gold from abroad, and will not need to deplete the treasury to furnish any part of the gold called for under his bid.

Carlisle Pleased.

There were a vast number of bids for figures fractionally rising $110, but under the Morgan figures and for amounts aggregating sufficient to take up the entire loan. Among them were the offers of the Stewart and McCall syndicates, including the big insurance, banking and trust companies of New York city, which stood ready to take huge blocks of bonds at figures in excess of prices named a week ago as high-mark for long loans. Secretary Carlisle was greatly pleased at the success of the bond offerings. He said no definite statement could be made as yet concerning the awards to successful bidders, nor how far, if at all, he would exercise his option of rejecting any or all bids.

When the department closed Tuesday night about 2600 bids had been received, and at 7:30 o'clock yesterday morning a force of clerks were set to work classifying and scheduling them. The bulk of the work was then thought to be over, at least except for a few bids for large amounts, but the morning mails brought in at least 2000 more bids, which had the effect of greatly disarranging the plans.

The interest manifested in this loan far exceeded that of any other preceding ones, and when the hour for opening the bids arrived, the south corridor of the treasury building, in the vicinity of Mr. Carlisle's office, was crowded with bidders or their representatives and newspaper correspondents.

Among those present were J. Pierpont Morgan, Mr. Graham of the International Trust company of Boston; Mr. Toulmin, vice president of the Hide and Leather bank of Boston; Dr. George W. Hosmer, representing Mr. Pulitzer of the New York World; Mr. Burnett of the Investment Corporation company, New York, and Mr. Chandler of Boston.

When at 11:30 the door of the secretary's office was opened, a rush was made for seats, and in a very short time no available space remained unfilled. So great was the crowd that to afford easier entrance and exit the door was removed from its hinges. Among the last to arrive were Messrs. J. P. Morgan and Pliny Fisk of New York, who found in the crowded room ahead of them numbers of well-known financiers.

The committee to superintend the opening of the bids—consisting of United States Treasurer Morgan, Comptroller Eckels and Mr. Huntington of the loans and currency division—had been at work since early morning, and a few minutes after noon announced that they were ready to proceed. It was an interested crowd that listened to Mr. Eckels as he read the names of the bidders and the amounts subscribed for, and it is probable that more millions were represented in Mr. Eckels' audience than were ever before gathered together in the treasury building.

Three or four of the bids carried with them evidences of their being fictitious, and they were accordingly omitted from the list, but the long list of bids and the substantial amounts desired by many bidders soon made it apparent that the question was not "Would the loan be oversubscribed?" but "How much would it be oversubscribed?"

The first announcement from Mr. Eckels made it known that bond bids approaching the $400,000,000 mark had been made, with enough left to represent another $75,000,000. Then came an announcement that the total was the stupendous figure of $684,269,950, which was subsequently reduced by throwing out three bogus bids of $100,000,000, $16,000,000 and $6,000,000.

It would be impossible with any ordinary telegraphic or typographical facilities to give a complete list of bids, and save as a matter of history, no importance attaches now to any bids below $110.6877. From the list of bidders at and above that figure the successful bidders undoubtedly will come.

The bids were for $100,000,000 30-year 4 per cent United States bonds under the conditions prescribed in the circular issued Jan. 6 last by Secretary Carlisle. The principal condition is that the bonds must be paid for in gold. For the convenience of the purchasers, the bonds may be paid for in installments, as follows: Twenty per cent at the time of the notice of acceptance and 10 per cent at the end of each 15 days thereafter. The present issue of bonds is the fourth since Feb. 1, 1894, all of them having been made ostensibly to maintain the treasury gold reserve.

Word comes from New York that even the "oldest inhabitants" of Wall street express astonishment over this large total, and the great disparity in prices between the average for the new loan and the figures recorded in the previous one. The general opinion is that European financiers cannot fail to be profoundly impressed by the result of the popular loan experiment.

The highest single total of bids is the one presented by the J. P. Morgan (Deutsch bank), Harvey Fisk & Sons (National City bank syndicate), and the next the United States Trust company block. The large percentage of foreign bids is very significant, in view of the previous apprehension felt as to the probable unfavorable effect of the free silver manifestations of the United States upon European sentiment.

During the forenoon the market displayed hesitancy, which was reflected in an irregular movement of prices and moderate volume of business. The official announcements regarding the aggregate bids and average of prices departed actual buoyancy to the market, prices advancing all along the line on the execution of heavy orders. More genuine commission buying occurred than has been noted for some time past, and wholesale coverings of shorts took place.

A New Era.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Chauncey M. Depew, in speaking last night on the bidding on the bonds, said: "This is glorious. It will act like an elixir of life upon the nation. It has shown that the credit of this country is beyond power to tear it down. It is a superb tribute by the people of their faith in their country. It is a tribute to the greatness of the country that foreign banks clamored for the issue, as in the case of the German banks and the other European banks. It shows that the people have established the credit of the country, and will maintain it. They will re-establish confidence with a bound. Things will boom from this out."

PEARL BRYAN'S FATE.

Mysteriously Disappeared and Subsequently Killed and Beheaded.

Young Dental Student Is Charged With Crime.

Believed to Have Had an Accomplice In the Awful Deed.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 6.—A special from Green Castle, Ind., says the family of A. S. Bryan, a leading farmer, living less than two miles from this city, have identified the clothing brought here by detectives from Cincinnati and Newport, Ky., as that of their daughter, Pearl Bryan.

They furnished other information and circumstances which leave no doubt in the minds of the officers who have been here since Tuesday that the body of the woman murdered and beheaded near Fort Thomas, opposite Cincinnati, last Friday night, is their daughter Pearl, aged 23 years, who left home Jan. 28, ostensibly to visit a friend, Miss Jane Fisher, on Central avenue, Indianapolis.

They have made every possible inquiry and find that she did not visit Miss Fisher in Indianapolis, but that she was taken to Cincinnati by Scott Jackson. She took with her a switch of hair which was brought here by the officers and identified. The shoes that were brought by the officers here were bought of Louis & Hays by Pearl Bryan, Nov. 28, 1895, and marks were identified by the dealers. As soon as the officers interviewed Mr. and Mrs. Bryan and other members of their family they sent word to Cincinnati to have Scott Jackson arrested. The mother of Scott Jackson lives here, and the families were intimate and highly respected. The Bryan family also gave information that led the officers to order the arrest of William Wood, the son of Rev. D. M. Wood, at South Bend, Ind.

An Important Capture.

"Arrest and charge with murder of Pearl Bryan one Scott Jackson, student at dental college, about 24 years old, 5ft. 7in. or 8in. high, weighs about 135 pounds, blonde, sandy mustache, light complexion, effeminate in appearance. Arrest, if in Cincinnati, William Wood, friend of Jackson, and charged as accomplice, about 21 years old, 5ft. 11in., light blonde hair, smooth face, rather slender, weight about 165. We go from here to South Bend after Wood, as he left here for that place."

Accordingly at 10:45 Scott Jackson was at the mayor's office under examination by the mayor and chief of police. The culprit was perfectly described in the telegram from the detectives.

The prisoner, Scott Jackson, was clean in appearance and newly dressed. His naturally ruddy face flushed perceptibly under the examination, and his light blue eyes wandered from his questioners in spite of a visible effort to bear up and look them square in the eyes. His voice was reasonably firm, yet it required an effort to keep it in form. He did not exhibit any signs that he felt humiliated by his arrest.

His accounts of his whereabouts last Friday were not satisfactory. He denied guilt, but admitted that he knew Pearl Bryan. He could tell nothing about where she was or where she had been during the past few weeks. As to his whereabouts last Friday night, his roommate, Mr. Taney, was examined first. He said that Jackson was at home Friday night. That was all he could say, as Jackson could go in and out whenever he desired. Jackson said Friday night he was at supper at 7 o'clock and retired at about 10 o'clock. The rest of his story is very vague, though he said he was in his room all night.

The worst point of Jackson's story, the weakest part of it, is that about his conduct on last Saturday. He boarded at 222 West Ninth street, next to Robinson's Opera House. On Saturday he took a valise and left it in Engler's saloon, opposite his boarding-house. This valise he carried with him all over the city that day. The accounting for this valise and why he carried it all day and night puzzled him more than anything else. In fact he prevaricated, and afterward acknowledged that he had lied. The matter will be sifted in court. Meanwhile he is committed without bail.

It has transpired that Scott Jackson was seen with Miss Bryan at Dave Wallingford's saloon at the northeast corner of George and Plum streets, this city, Friday night, between 7 and 8 o'clock, and Jackson borrowed $2 from Wallingford. This man will be a most important, if not the most important, witness against Jackson. The location of Plum and George streets is in the Tenderloin district of the city.

Loyal to England.

OTTAWA, Feb. 6.—A resolution was unanimously adopted by the house of commons yesterday declaring Canada's inalienable loyalty to the British throne, and her willingness, in case of war, to make any sacrifice for the integrity of the empire. Mr. McNeil, who drafted the bill, said the people of the republic believed Canadians would seize the first opportunity of altering their allegiance from England to the United States. It was annoying to Canadians that their feelings should be so misinterpreted and misunderstood.

Robbed and Killed.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 6.—Anna Tate, a housekeeper employed by J. H. Richelderfer, was found dead in bed yesterday. Her employer was found at the same time unconscious, and believed to be dying in his room. Everything in the house was found in disorder and confusion. Burglars had evidently ransacked the place hurriedly, and had departed after breaking open an iron safe in a back room on the street floor and abstracting money and valuables belonging to Mr. Richelderfer.

People Prayed In Streets.

HABANA, Feb. 6.—An earthquake shock of an alarming nature was experienced at Santa Cruz del Sur, province of Puerto Principe. Houses rocked and furniture was thrown about, causing the people of the city and vicinity to run in terror into the streets and fall on their knees in prayer for mercy.

ORGAN RECITAL

With Solos by the Boy Vocalist, Henry Donlan.

There was a large gathering at Christ's church Wednesday evening on the occasion of the organ recital by John Hermann Loud, A. R. C. M., a pupil of Alexander Guilmant, who was assisted by Master Henry Donlan, the boy vocalist.

Mr. Loud rendered a programme of very classical music, calculated to test the powers of the magnificient organ of the church, which was very enjoyable. The solos by Master Donlan were very beautifully rendered and he can be truthfully said to possess a wonderful voice.

The programme included:

| | |
|---|---|
| Toccata in F. | J. S. Bach |
| Priere in G♭ | E. Lemaigre |
| Ite Missa Est. | N. J. Lemmens |
| Angels ever bright and fair. Master Henry Donlan. | Handel |
| a Cantilena in B♭ / b Marche Religieuse, | Alex. Guilmant |
| Andante Cantabile from Symphony No. 4, | C. M. Widor |
| Now the day is over, Master Henry Donlan. | Christopher Marks |
| Grand Choir Dialogue in G. | E. Gigout |

The organ recital at Christ church was enjoyed by a large gathering of people Wednesday evening. Mr. John Hermann Loud of Weymouth presided at the organ and gave a varied programme in his usual masterly style. Mr. Loud has made a study of music abroad under Alexandre Guilmant, receiving honors and much praise for his excellence. Master Henry Dolan sang two selections, and every one was more than pleased with his clear sweet notes.

LEAP YEAR PARTY.

The Young Gentlemen at West Quincy Receive Many Hard Hits.

The young ladies of West Quincy and other sections of the city were out in large numbers with their gentlemen friends Wednesday evening at the leap year party held under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the St. Mary's C. T. A. society at St. Mary's hall, and the party was without doubt one of the most brilliant of the many pretty parties that have been held in this hall.

The ladies were exquisitely gowned in light evening costumes while the gentlemen looked their best in the conventional black evening dress.

The hall was very prettily decorated and on the walls were many suggestive signs which showed that some of the weaknesses the gentlemen had been guilty of during the past four years had not been passed by unnoticed. Among these none were more suggestive than the following:

Gentlemen cannot leave the hall. Only ladies have that privilege."

"Ladies may hold up door posts for the whole evening."

"The supper dance is not necessarily an invitation to supper.

Down stairs near the stairway leading to the upper hall was another still more suggestive card which read as follows:

"Dudes unaccompanied by parents, guardians or physiciaus, are refused admission."

Hanson's orchestra furnished music and a concert preceeded the dance proper, during which the gentlemen were presented to the stately matrons, who occupied a prominent place in the hall. The ladies who fulfilled this honorable position being Mrs. P. T. Fitzgerald, Mrs. John Hart, Mrs. John Kapples and Mrs. James O'Dowd. They were attended by Miss Nellie O'Dowd and Miss Mary Duggan who officiated as maids of honor. The ushers were Miss Gertrude A. Boyd, Miss Abbie Corcoran, Miss Josephine Barry and Miss Katherine Keenan.

At 9 o'clock the grand march was inaugurated being lead by Miss Gertrude A. Boyd and Mr. William Barry, and they were followed by eighty-five couples.

From this time on the dance went on until the early morning hours, and as the ladies prepared to escort their gentlemen friends to their homes perhaps some of them recalled to mind, and profited by the following quaint quotations, which adorned the cover of the dance order: "Be wise tonight, 'tis madness to defer."—Young.

The ladies in charge of the affair were: Miss Mary A. Falvy, floor director; Miss Gertrude A. Boyd, assistant, and the following aids: Miss Josephine Barry, Miss Bridget Crowley, Miss Mary Anderson, Miss Abbie Corcoran, Miss Helen F. Boyd, Miss Katherine Horan, Miss Theresa Sullivan and Miss Katherine Keenan.

TODAY'S COURT.

Mr. Brown, who is the proprietor of the bowling alley under the old court house, testified that on Tuesday night there was a little argument in the part of the room where the frankfurts were served, and he told them to keep quiet or he would put them out. He then stood at the door and stooped down to pick up a ball, when he was struck in the back of the head with a tumbler. It did not cut him as the wound was more in the nature of a bruise.

Michael McGrath testified that Brown had sent him out in the front room to look out for the frankforts and the first thing he knew Brown came running out and said some one had hit him.

Thomas Scannell testified that he was in the room where the alleys were and that Sullivan was at the score board. A glass came by the witness's head and hit Brown. He did not see who threw it.

Sullivan testified that he was keeping score and the first thing he knew he heard Brown exclaim "Oh! Moses!" Witness then looked about and saw the glass near Brown.

The court decided that Sullivan was not guilty, and discharged him.

The Violet Club.

About two hundred couples, consisting mostly of young people joined in the grand march of the first leap year party given in Atlantic this year, by the young ladies of the Violet club last evening. The party was the largest that has ever assembled to any dancing party in Music hall and made a very pleasing picture.

The floor was in charge of Miss Nellie Gerry, floor directress and Miss Mary Cunniff, assistant directress, assisted by the following aids, Miss Mary R. Sullivan, Miss Rose Cunniff, Miss Maggie A. Gerry, Miss Catherine Hayes, Miss Elize Junior and Miss Mary Barry. Sprague's orchestra furnished music and dancing was enjoyed until 1 A. M.

To Be Dedicated.

The new chapel of the Park and Down's Union Society will be dedicated on the afternoon of Feb. 22. An interesting program is being prepared in which all the pastors of Wollaston and Atlantic are expected to take part. George L. Perin, D. D., pastor of the "Every Day Church," Boston, will preach the dedication sermon.

BOSTON, Feb. 6.—Shortly after one o'clock this afternoon the double storm signal, or the hurricane signal was raised on the Post Office building by the weather department.

In New York the wind has reached a velocity of from 75 to 100 miles an hour and is rapidly approaching. Such a velocity means a force of about 30,000 pounds to the square inch.

It is the first time that the Boston bureau has had occasion to put up this signal, and as the people realize the importance of its meaning, the excitement increases.

IN CONGRESS.

The Cuban Question and Prize Fighting Receive Consideration.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—The most caustic utterance heard in the senate since Mr. Tillman's sensational speech was that of Mr. Vest (Mo.) yesterday arraigning Secretary of Agriculture Morton. The keen satire and ridicule directed against the secretary and the allusions to the president made the speech hardly less notable than that which recently startled the senate. Mr. Vest referred derisively to "the colossal intellect dealing with cabbages."

A new phase of the Cuban question was presented by Mr. Morgan's report from the committee on foreign relations recognizing a state of war in Cuba and according both contestants recognition as belligerents.

The house passed a bill to prevent prize or bull fighting in the territories or District of Columbia.

The debate on the senate free coinage substitute for the house bond bill, which will last two or three days, was opened, and the District of Columbia appropriation bill was defeated. The defeat grew out of the war which has been waged for several days against appropriating money in the bill for sectarian charitable institutions. Sixty-one Republicans broke away from the majority, and with the Democrats defeated the bill.

WHOLE FAMILY KILLED.

Richard Kloettke Murdered Six Persons and Committed Suicide.

CHICAGO, Feb. 6.—An entire family, consisting of seven persons, was found dead yesterday as a result of the murderous work and suicide of Richard Kloettke. The dead are: Richard Kloettke, aged 38; Kate, his wife; John, his father, aged 73; Mina, his mother, aged 71; Mina, his daughter, aged 9; Anna, daughter, aged 8; Emma, daughter, aged 7. The discovery was made by a neighbor, who went to the residence to get some work done. The victims were all killed by shots from a revolver, which was found by Kloettke's side. Kloettke had been out of work for some time, had no money and no prospect of getting work.

High on the Beach.

PATCHOGUE, L. I., Feb. 6.—The two-masted steamer Lamington, loaded with fruit, from Valencia, Spain, for New York, came ashore 12 miles east of Fire island. There were 24 persons aboard, including two passengers. Signals of distress were sent up, and were seen by one of the crew of the Blue Point life-saving station. Crews worked all night to place a line aboard the steamer. Then the breeches buoy was made fast. Twenty men have come ashore. Captain Duff and three of his officers remained on board the vessel. The steamer lies 150 yards from the shore at right angles with the beach, and is unusually high up. She cannot be floated until she has been unloaded.

Dunraven Talks on Venezuela.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—Lord Dunraven was the guest last night of the Glasgow University Conservative club. His speech on the occasion contained no allusions to the subject of yachting, but with reference to the Venezuelan question he said that war between England and America would be regarded by everyone as an unmitigated horror. If either country had placed itself in a false or misunderstood position, both were strong and magnanimous enough to withdraw or to make concessions. He was confident, he said, that the result of the strained relations would be a better feeling between the two countries.

Toward Habana.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—A cipher dispatch from Habana to the Rodriguez club of this city says that Maceo and his main army have escaped from the trap which was laid by the Spaniards to hold him in the extreme west of Pinar del Rio until he should be conquered. The dispatch also says: "Maceo and his army passing north of Vinales in the mountains, toward Habana. Rear guard operating south." This indicates that the rear guard has been doing the late fighting in southwestern Pinar del Rio to detract attention from Maceo's movements eastward.

Lady Wilde Dead.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—Lady James Francesca Speranza Wilde, mother of William and Oscar Wilde, is dead. Lady Wilde, who was perhaps the most illustrious Irish woman of the day, had been known for many years as a writer of remarkable power. Miss Elgee married William Wilde in 1851. He was a well-known oculist and aurist, a great traveler and a famous antiquarian and Celtic scholar. Since the death of her husband in 1876 Lady Wilde has lived much of the time in London.

Big Talk.

EL PASO, Tex., Feb. 6.—"No power can stop these fights," said Dan A. Stuart when informed of the passage of the anti-prize fighting bill by the house of representatives. "They are coming off just as they are advertised. So sure as the principals are alive and in condition to get into the ring on the date set for the contests, so sure will they fight, and fight to a finish. If anybody who evinces any sort of doubt as to this, I will lay them 4 to 1 for any part of $50,000."

Sullivan on the Road.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., Feb. 6.—John L. Sullivan, with his wife and manager, left last evening for Fort Worth, Tex., where the ex-champion will rejoin his company, and on the 14th will go to El Paso to attend the fistic carnival. He still has his head swathed in bandages and his face is badly scarred. Otherwise he seems to be in fair condition.

Will Leave Berlin.

BERLIN, Feb. 6.—Prince Frederick Hohenzollern, who resigned the command of the Third army corps because the emperor refused to confirm the decison of the board of honor on the Von Kotze case, intends to quit Berlin and to reside in South Germany. Prince Albert of Saxe-Altenburg will also retire to his estate at Mecklenburg.

Edison Tries the Rays.

ORANGE, N. J., Feb. 6.—Thomas A. Edison has been experimenting with cathode, but without achieving results other than those accomplished by other investigators. He says the possibilities of the new ray are innumerable, and repeats his prophecy that within 50 years electricity will be extracted directly from coal.

Foreclosure on Cordage.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—E. R. Morse, a banker of Boston, has obtalned leave from Justice Lawrence to bring an action against the United States Cordage company for the foreclosure of a mortgage made Jan. 1, 1894, to secure $7,500,000 worth of bonds to the United States Trust company as trustees.

ADVERTISE IN THE LEDGER

AGAINST ANTI-TOXIN.

The Assumption That it is a Remedy Entirely Unsupported.

My attention has been called to the evidently inspired attack made upon Dr. F. S. Davis in your issue of Jan. 29.h because he has not used anti-toxin in his treatment of diphtheria. The impression is given that anti-toxin is the remedy for diphtheria and had it been used in the cases of Dr. Davis the results would have been far different. This is an assumption, entirely unsupported by scientific evidence, and for which ignorance is not a sufficient excuse.

More or less time is always necessary to correct the wrong impressions that are given to the public in regard to new methods of medical treatment. The public is given to understand that these are infallible, the cure-alls that have long been sought. There successive failures teach nothing and their deposition in the cavity of oblivion seems to be entirely forgotten in the uproar that greets the next new comer. Such will be the fate of anti-toxin.

Its use is opposed by the leading men of the old school; nowhere is it more emphatically denounced and condemned than by the most prominent allopathic physicians. The opinion of one competent observer who has seen bad effects from its use is much more valuable than that of a dozen incompetent observers who never see anything.

Allow me to quote from the recently published work on diphtheria by Lennox Browne, F. R. C. S, of London. Mr. Browne is probably the leading authority on diseases of the throat in the old school today. He compared 100 cases treated without anti-toxin with 100 cases treated with anti-toxin, in the same hospital and under the same conditions. In each series of cases, 27 died, making the death rate the same.

He called them Series A (without anti-toxin) and Series B (with anti-toxin.)

In regard to the presence of albumen in the urine he says: "It was found 38 times in Series A (without anti-toxin) and 50 times in Series B (with anti-toxin.) There is no necessity to quote figures illustrating the varying quantity under the two methods, but it may be stated that it was developed in decidedly larger amounts in Series B (with anti-toxin.")

In regard to anuria (suppression of urine) and nephritis (inflammation of the kidney.) he says: "In Series B out of seven cases of anuria, nephritis was proved to exist post-mortem in all the five in which a necropsy was allowed as well as in four other cases, in which death resulted from other causes. In short, in all the nine cases in which a necropsy has been permitted out of the total of 27 deaths, nephrites has been revealed and sometimes in extreme degree.

"Hansemann, in a personal letter to the author, referring to a case of a child who died of nephritis after injections of serum says it seems to him 'quite indubitable that nephritis was the result of the large doses of serum which the child had received,' and he goes on to say that, 'it is known that serum from one animal produces decomposition of the blood of another when introduced into it. This injurious influence may be all the greater, especially as we have no control as to whether the horses are thoroughly sound.'"

It is a pleasant thought that the anti-toxin may come from a diseased horse. Mr. Browne also says "we must draw attention to the fact that more than one instance has been reported of deaths following an injection with more or less suddenness, which have been frankly accepted as due to the treatment and not to the disease," (italics mine) and also "A greater number of children have been found liable to attacks of cyanosis and fainting, with a correspondingly increased demand for strong doses of nervine and alcoholic stimulants. Complete recovery is for the most part to be found to be greatly delayed and an unexpected fatal result at a late period is more frequent." (Italics mine)

Very truly yours,

SAMUEL A. KIMBALL, M. D.

DEBATE ON HARD TIMES.

High School Society Decide They Are Not Under Control of Government.

President Saunders took the chair at the meeting of the Q. H. S. Debating Society on Wednesday, and Secretary Briggs presented his report. It was accepted and adopted.

The debate of last week was concluded. The subject was: "Resolved, That Hard Times Are Not Under the Control of the Government."

The affirmative was taken by Miss Geer and Miss Duffield.

When the debate was opened to the society, Mr. Coe, Miss Joss, Mr. Northcott, Mr. Foley and Mr. Chapman spoke. There was a lively debate on the late "War-scare."

Mr. Wilkins, '97, the critic, offered a report that caused some discussion on the ground of personalities. After debate the report was accepted.

The entertainment followed:

Essay, "Recollections of Childhood," Miss Melzard, '96.

Declamation, Mr. Mitchell, '97.

The board of decision declared themselves in favor of the negative.

ART FROM LIFE.

A Private Presentation of Works of Charles Dana Gibson.

The residence of Mr. Wendell G. Corthell on Grand View avenue, Wollaston, contained an appreciative audience on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings to witness the first private representation of a number of Charles Dana Gibson's most notable illustration from "Life," which were exhibited under the auspices of the Steadfast Ten, King's Daughters, the proceeds to go towards assisting worthy girls through college.

Gibson's illustrations, depicting the deliciously humorous side of fin de sciecle high life, probably were never better staged (if that professional term may be used) than those which were presented under the direction of Mrs. Elbert H. Brock and Miss Mae Arnold Lincoln. The grouping, a most difficult undertaking where a perspective background and flies cannot be used, was so artistically accomplished that it satisfied the most exacting critics.

Cupid (Dorothy Fay) was a delightfully graceful little figure in her flesh-colored costume and extended dove's wing and deserved the applause which was so generously bestowed for her artistic posing.

"Gibson's girls" were strikingly illustrated by Miss Bertha V. Jameson, Miss Marion Sherman, Miss Russell of Quincy, Mrs. Ralph J. Saxe, Mrs. Amos T. Leavitt, Miss Miriam Ripley, Miss Anna Whitman, Mrs. E. H. Sprague, Miss Hatch of Boston, and Mr. Charles Rippey, who personated the heiress in "Puzzle: find the heiress."

On Tuesday evening Mrs. Alma Faunce Smith opened the entertainment with a piano solo "Impromptu in F sharp" from Chopin, and on Wednesday evening Mr. Berton O. Wetmore opened it with a most excellently rendered baritone solo. The other soloists were Mrs. Frank H. Sprague and Mr. Robert B. Porter.

"Gibson's Men" were Mr. Elbert H. Brock, Mr. Everett S. Litchfield, Mr. Charles R. Sherman, Mr. Ralph J. Saxe, Mr. Amos T. Leavitt. Mr. Tyler Brigham and Mr. Robert B. Witham.

Preceding the illustration Mrs. Elbert H. Brock gave an interesting account of Mr. Gibson's life and works.

After the entertainment chocolate was poured and a light lunch was served to the guests. The entertainment will be publicly repeated next week at the Knights of Honor hall.

SPATTERS OF BLOOD.

Mrs. Grant Was Killed by Savage Blows.

Police Feel Certain That They Are on the Right Track.

BOSTON, Feb. 6.—Much mystery still surrounds the Sophia Grant murder case, and with new evidence claimed to have been secured yesterday, the police are more confident than ever before that Mrs. Ida Quinlan, the murdered woman's sister, did the deed in the heat of a quarrel. It is now freely stated that the charge against Mrs. Quinlan will be changed to manslaughter when the hearing is held.

Dr. Wood has reported to the police department in substance that he has found blood upon the dress worn by Mrs. Quinlan on the night of the murder of Mrs. Sophia Grant in Charlestown.

The medical expert of Harvard university has gone further in his findings. He has given the police to understand that the blood was not in blotches on the garment, as it would have been if it had been acquired from simply leaning over the body to make an examination after an assault by some other party, but that both sides of the dress were spattered all over with the crimson life fluid, as would probably result if the blows were struck in the presence of the one clothed in it.

Whoever murdered Mrs. Grant dealt many savage strokes with some instrument, and those strokes must necessarily have sent the blood of the victim flying in all directions. The result, so any physician would testify, would be the spattering of minute particles in the immediate vicinity.

Mrs. Quinlan might explain streaks or large spots of blood if found on her clothing by declaring that they came there accidentally from contamination by the pools about the house, but how will she, or her counsel, undertake to account for the spatterings?

Dr. Wood's preliminary statement concerning his investigations, the whole report of course not having been furnished to the police department as yet, has made a profound sensation. It has made every one connected with the case officially believe that they are at least on the right track.

ON BEACON HILL.

The Hooker Statue—Acetylene Gas—Sixty-Year-Old M. D.'s—The Color Line.

BOSTON, Feb. 6.—Yesterday was the last day under the rules in which new business can be introduced, but as it is only required that bills and petitions shall be filed with the clerk before the close of the day for examination by the committee on rules, new business will continue to make its appearance for several days. In the summary of bills and petitions presented there were many subjects of general interest, including, for example, the taxation of telephone companies, the height of buildings in Boston, several insurance matters, $500,000 more money for the metropolitan park commissioners, etc. The principal hearing was before the committee on state house on the question of reconstructing or rebuilding the Bulfinch front of the state house. Among the bills in the senate was one for compensation for street franchises, and another ousting the existing election commissioners in the city of Boston and appointing a new board by the governor.

Senator Roe introduced a bill relative to discrimination by innholders on account of color or race. The bill provides that "any licensed innholder who makes any distinction, discrimination or restriction on account of color or race, on conviction in any court of competent jurisdiction in the country where the said offense shall have been committed, shall forfeit his innholder's license."

Mr. Mellen introduced a bill requiring the board of gas and electric light companies to investigate the subject of acetylene gas, and consider the advisability of legislation regulating its manufacture and sale.

The committee on constitutional amendments reported back in an amended form the resolves in favor of biennial elections.

A petition was presented for legislation exempting from the provisions of the law regulating the practice of physicians and surgeons physicians of over 60 years of age who have been in practice for 10 or more years in the state.

Mr. Davis offered an order for the appointment of a committee of five to be appointed by the speaker to consider and report to this legislature on the advisability of completing that part of the house chamber left vacant for historical paintings.

The joint committee on state house and military affairs unanimously reported a resolve for $50,000 for a statue to General Joe Hooker.

The state board on docks and terminals made a preliminary report, and asked for another year in which to present its final report.

Messrs. A. E. Pillsbury, John D. Long and William E. Russell have petitioned the general court to place a bust of the late Rev. Samuel F. Smith, D.D., author of "America," in the state house.

Contesting the Will of Lorenzo Armstrong.

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 6.—The contest over the will of the late Lorenzo Armstrong was begun in the superior court yesterday. The contestant is Miss Elizabeth Armstrong of Brooklyn. She is a daughter of the deceased by his second wife, and by the will got only $5000 out of an estate of nearly $500,000. She claims that the will was not the testamentary act of the deceased, and that if it was it was obtained by undue influence, and that her father at the time was of unsound mind and incapable of making a will.

Wasn't Posted.

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 6.—John McCrea, agent for the United Life association of New York city, was arrested yesterday charged with violating the state law which prohibits agents making rebates in premiums. McCrea admits offering a rebate of $30 to C. H. Miller, but says he came from New York only a month ago and was ignorant of the law.

Politics and Money.

HAVERHILL, Mass., Feb. 6.—H. L. Duncan, a local politician, sued to recover $280 from E. H. George of Groveland, which he alleged had been promised him by George for services in behalf of his father, E. B. George, in the latter's campaign for the Republican congressional nomination in the Sixth district last fall. Judge Carter ruled that electioneering was contrary to the best interests of the community, and that a claim for such services was valueless. Judgment was rendered for defendant.

Answers His Critics.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Feb. 6.—The Bay View Temperance union celebrated its 20th anniversary last evening, Mayor Robinson being the principal speaker. He alluded to the criticism that he was proceeding too fast in the matter of enforcing the liquor law, but claimed that no reform was ever started that did not meet with objection. Effective results could not be gained in a single year; certain measures were necessary to keep the licensed places up to the conditions of their permits.

Assessment Recommended.

BOSTON, Feb. 6.—In the supreme court yesterday Auditor Hemenway reported in the case of the insurance commissioner vs. the Commonwealth Mutual Fire Insurance company. An assessment of $250,000 on the policy holders was recommended. Counsel for a policy holder was heard upon the right of recovering insurance on loss by fire between the time of filing of the petition for and the appointment of a receiver. The court deferred action upon the report.

Parents Barred.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Feb. 6.—A special meeting of the school board was held last night to investigate the recent action of the sub-committee on the high school in expelling 11 seniors who nailed their class flag to the school flagpole. Chairman Manning of the sub-committee failed to appear, however, and the meeting adjourned to Friday evening. The parents of the expelled pupils were present and tried ineffectually to address the board.

Figures Reduced.

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 6.—A complete list of the valuable specimens stolen from the Peabody museum by Albert H. Verrill, son of Professor Verrill of Yale university, has been made, and the total value of the articles as estimated by the Yale authorities proves to be far less than the alleged value as previously reported. The total value will reach only $3000. Of the stolen articles $600 worth have been recovered.

To Save Gilbert's Life.

BOSTON, Feb. 6.—A petition for the commutation of the death sentence imposed on Angus Gilbert, the murderer of little Alice Sterling, was filed at the state house yesterday by the prisoner's counsel, Messrs. Doherty and Leach. His excellency will lay the matter before the executive council, and if, in the opinion of that body, the petition is entitled to a hearing, a date for such hearing will be set.

A Reed Delegation.

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 6.—Herbert E. Benton, chairman of the Republican state committee, states that he believes the Connecticut delegation to the national Republican convention will support Reed for president. "They will rally with the greatest enthusiasm for any of the candidates now in the field," said Mr. Benton, "but I think they will be for Reed at the outset."

Guilty of Arson.

WORCESTER, Mass., Feb. 6.—In the superior criminal court here, Benjamin F. Townsend was found guilty of arson in setting fire to the barn of George P. Calhoun at Rutland, Nov. 25, 1895. The conviction was on entirely circumstancial evidence. Sentence will be imposed later. By the fire, George Calhoun, a son of the owner of the property, was burned to death.

Neither Pastor Nor Member.

LOWELL, Mass., Feb. 6.—The 12 lessees of the First Congregational church yesterday notified Rev. G. F. Kenngott, the pastor, that he must keep out of the church. They say he is neither pastor of the church nor member of the society, and will be treated as a trespasser if he tries to enter the church.

Pleaded Guilty.

NAHANT, Mass., Feb. 6.—William H. Hildreth, a delivery clerk for Grocer George E. Poland, was arraigned before Trial Justice Wilson yesterday, charged with embezzling $122 from his employer. He pleaded guilty and was held in $600 for the superior court.

Lawler's Defalcation.

HARTFORD, Feb. 6.—The defalcation of ex-General Manager Lawler of the Philadelphia, Reading and New England railroad was settled by his relatives yesterday. There will be no prosecution. The total sum was slightly in excess of $2900.

New England Briefs.

Rev. Dr. R. A. Beard of Nashua, N. H. has been called to the First Congregational church of Chicago.

The Maine Democratic state committee voted to hold the convention at which to nominate the state ticket, at Portland, June 17.

Nora Haley, employed by the Clifton Manufacturing company of Boston, walked into the elevator well and fell five stories. She died shortly afterward.

There is a deadlock in the Fitchburg (Mass.) city council over a vote for an assessor for three years, and this is likely to continue the remainder of the year.

John F. Hobbs of Princeton, Mass., aged 45, was found dead in his chair. Strangulation was the cause, his head being bent over his breast. There were evidences of intoxication.

On a Mission of Mercy.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—Miss Clara Barton, president of the American Red Cross society, and the rest of her party left Victoria station yesterday en route for Constantinople. The railway company reserved a carriage for the exclusive use of the party, and a cabin was also reserved for them on the channel steamer. In addition to this the steamer ordered its agent in Calais to show the party every possible courtesy.

Hopeful of Home Rule.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—Justin McCarthy has addressed a letter to the secretaries of the Irish party, in which he says that his reasons for giving up the leadership are wholly personal, and due to his failing health and to the necessity for greater attention to his profession, upon which depends his livelihood. He says that he is still full of confidence in the success of home rule.

Power Consumption In Piano Playing.

The amount of power expended in playing on a piano has recently been figured out in a way which, if not altogether accurate, is at least interesting. Commenting on the statement made that "it requires more force to sound a note gently on this instrument than it does to lift the lid of a kettle," The American Art Journal says that this is "easy to verify if one takes a small handful of coins and piles them on a key of the piano. When a sufficient quantity is piled on to make a note sound, they may be weighed and the figures will be found to be true. If the pianist is playing fortissimo, a much greater force is needed. At times a force of six pounds is thrown upon a single key to produce a solitary effect. With chords the force is generally spread over the various notes sounded simultaneously, though a greater output of force is undoubtedly expended. This is what gives pianists the wonderful strength in their fingers that is often commented on.

"A story used to be told of Paderewski that he could crack a pane of French plate glass half an inch thick merely by placing one hand upon it as if upon a keyboard and striking it sharply with his middle finger. Chopin's last study in C minor has a passage which takes two minutes and five seconds to play. The total pressure brought to bear on this, it is estimated, is equal to three full tons. The average 'tonnage' of an hour's piano playing of Chopin's music varies from 14 to 84 tons.

The Magicians of India.

The magicians of India are a clever lot. For a rupee (30 cents) they will furnish quite an entertainment. One beats a drum and acts as interlocutor, while there is generally a small boy or girl as assistant. A clever trick is performed by placing the small boy or girl in a basket, covering the opening. After ramming a sword in the basket from the top and all sides, until one imagines the youngster done to death, the basket is opened and he is still there intact. No preparations are made beforehand, and these cunning tricks are done on the ground but five or ten feet away. In the same way a small bush is made to grow under merely a cloth covering. Considering that the magician has no accessories, it is really wonderful.

The last part of the magician's programme was no trick by any means. A cocoanut was handed to me for inspection. It seemed sound and solid. After a great deal of drumming and hooting to produce an excitement the cocoanut was thrown into the air 20 feet. With a loud yell the magician sprang under it, when it descended and the cocoanut burst to pieces on his head. The blow staggered him at first, but a few approving pats on the back by his comrades and a drink of whisky soon straightened him out. Nautch girls, accompanied by one or two musicians, are frequently seen dancing in the street, but their performance is very slow and uninteresting. —Outing.

The Real Mistress of Balmoral.

The ruler of Balmoral castle is not the queen, but the housekeeper, a Mrs. Mussens, a typical personage of her class, gowned always in rustling black silk, lace trimmed apron and white cap. She and the queen are said to be excellent friends, and many a gossip have they had together when affairs of state have been laid aside.

Mrs. Mussens also stands high in the favor of the little Battenbergs, who are sure to seek her out as soon as they have landed at the castle, for she fairly idolizes the little ones and keeps many a treasure in her apartments with which to regale them.

To the world at large Mrs. Mussens is a holy terror. Her word is law, and she enforces it at the point of the bayonet or the broomstick. It is said that once the queen wanted a certain maid, to whom she had taken a fancy, detailed to the care of her own room, but the housekeeper remonstrated, telling her majesty it was quite out of order and she really must not spoil the servants by undue notice. The queen was wise enough not to insist, and "dear Mrs. Mussens" won the day.—Strand Magazine.

Boiler Scale.

A very novel method of getting rid of scale in a boiler is credited by a Boston paper to an engineer in that city. The scale came from the use of well water. The feed pipe enters the front of the boiler just about the water line, and has slots cut in it about an eighth of an inch wide, instead of the ordinary spraying method of distributing the water, and surrounding the feed pipes is a larger pipe, about 6 inches in diameter and cut away at the top; the feed water enters the boiler and discharges through the slots in the feed pipe, depositing all the foreign matter in the water into this catch pipe instead of into the boiler—the success of the plan depending upon having a high temperature of feed at about the boiling point, when the solids held in suspension or solution in water will be deposited.

Named by Bayard Taylor.

Mont Clair, in Montgomery county, was named by Bayard Taylor during the course of a spring day ramble in 1847. Taylor's association with the place should be sufficient to incite a desire to spell the name as he spelled it. The railroad company spells it "Mont Clare," which spelling originally must have been a blind guess by somebody who perhaps thought that if it wasn't correct it was near enough to pass.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Spoiled His Fun.

"Who is that sour looking man?" said one pretty girl to another at the church festival. "He doesn't seem to be enjoying himself a bit."

"He isn't. He's the man who makes jokes about church fair oyster stews, and I had them give him more oysters in his than he could eat."—Washington Star.

The skeleton in many a household is the peculiar weakness of the wife and mother, or of the wife who ought to be a mother and is not. Happiness is destroyed by the presence of the secret sickness that may lurk like a grinning death among the most luxurious homes. The most terrible thing about this condition of affairs is that it is entirely needless. There is no reason in the world why every woman in the world should not be strong and healthful and capable of fulfilling her whole duty as a wife and mother. Many women go on month after month, and year after year, becoming weaker and weaker, because of a very natural hesitancy they feel in consulting a physician. They know that if they go to a doctor for treatment, the first thing he will insist on will be "examination" and "local treatment." This must of course be distasteful to every modest woman. They are generally as unnecessary as they are abhorrent. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures positively, perfectly, permanently, all varieties of "female weakness" and disease. It is designed to do this one thing, and it does it. It is the only medicine now before the public for woman's peculiar ailments, adapted to her delicate organization by a regularly graduated physician—an experienced and skilled specialist in these maladies. It cannot do harm in any condition of the system. Its sales exceed the combined sales of all other medicines for women.

Every woman will be healthier and happier for following the friendly, practical counsel contained in Dr. Pierce's great universal doctor book: "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser." It is the most comprehensive medical work in one volume in the English language. It contains 1008 pages, fully illustrated. 680,000 copies have been sold at $1.50 each bound in cloth. The profits are now used in printing half-a-million free copies bound in strong manilla paper covers. To get one you have only to send 21 one-cent stamps (to pay cost of mailing only), to World's Dispensary Medical Association, No 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y. ### The Moon.

In the opinion of Professor Asaph Hall, as recently expressed, the problem of the physical constitution of the moon is one that yet remains to be solved. Of the "craters," scattered all over her surface, the volcanic theory of formation fails, he thinks, to be satisfactory. Another notion to which he refers is that, ages ago, the moon was surrounded by swarms of "moonlets," which eventually were precipitated upon the moon's surface, forming the craters now seen. Thus, the Mare Imbrium was created by the impact of a huge moonlet, 90 miles in diameter, which, in striking, was raised to such a high temperature as to melt its substance. An immense hole or crater being formed where it struck, the molten material of the moonlet spread in every direction for a vast distance, partly filling up other craters; fragments flew to distances of a thousand miles, scoring out deep furrows, one of the latter, as now seen, being 187 miles long, 10 to 25 miles broad, and with a depth of 11,000 feet.

Sir Henry Ponsonby.

The London Globe tells a story illustrating the happy way in which the late Sir Henry Ponsonby parried indiscreet questions. "Is it true," asked a German journalist, who was being shown over the Indian room at Osborne, "that Princess —— is to be married to Prince ——?" Sir Henry eyed the correspondent curiously, and, with a quiet smile replied, "I have not seen the engagement announced." "But," urged the Teuton, "I have heard it on excellent authority." "In that case," replied Sir Henry, with crushing civility, "you have no need of further information on the subject."

Pleasing For Englishmen—and Others.

How much brighter and more gay the English who have eaten "biftecks" in Paris will be for the knowledge that since 1866 they have contributed toward the consumption of 389,975 horses, 10,548 donkeys and 946 mules. The consumption of these luxuries has grown steadily but surely, and it seems that they now figure in the production of sausages, which will surprise no one, and also in salad oils, which will surprise many.—Galignani Messenger.

An Acquired Gift.

"I'm a victim of kleptomania, your honor," pleaded the prisoner. "I can't help stealing."

"Indeed," said the justice with interest, "I've heard of such cases. Is your kleptomania a natural or acquired gift?"

"Acquired, your honor," replied the prisoner thoughtlessly.

"I thought so. Ten dollars and costs. Call the next case."—Chicago Post.

Not the Blood.

"If I am killed," exclaimed the bird tragically, "my blood will be upon your head."

But the woman laughed scornfully.

"I should say not," she rejoined.

She was willing to admit that the fowl's wings and tail feathers would be upon her head, but it was perfectly absurd to talk about blood.—Detroit Tribune.

Bamboo pens have been used in India over 1,000 years. They are made like the ordinary quill pen, and for a few hours' writing are said to be very serviceable.

HOUSES OF GLASS.

Some people I know have curious ways.
They will censure most all of mankind.
They'll hunt for the flaws in their neighbors next door,
To their own they seem rather blind.
There's many a man gone wrong in this world
Through troubles abroad or at home.
So don't push them down with a kick or a frown,
But give them a chance to atone.

You've all heard the story 'bout houses of glass,
So often you've picked up your stone.
Before you have shattered that cottage next door,
Why, just take a look at your own.

I read a small piece in the paper today
Which caused me to ponder and think—
How a poor boy had fallen a victim to crime
While enslaved by that dread demon, drink.
"Ten years you must serve," said the judge on the bench.
His poor mother cried, with a moan,
"Don't sentence my boy, my hope and my joy'
But give him a chance to atone."
—Walter Fletcher in New York Herald.

A TIN CUP VERDICT.

The sun was low toward the western peaks when old Jones and his nephew halted their teams for the night. Old Jones and his relative were freighters, and the crack of their long, shot filled mule whips and the creak of their heavy wagons had been heard in half of the camps of Colorado.

The four wagons tonight were swung into the segment of a circle, and the mules were cast loose from the straps in which through the day they pulled. At this relief these grateful slaves stood about and attested their joy in the loud cries peculiar to their kind, but which are so unfortunate in their lack of harmony. To stop this the nephew went about giving them their vesper feed. This he placed in morrals or nosebags, which he hung to their hungry heads. Old Jones built a little fire and began the compilation of an intricate but savory dish known to those happy ones who have the recipe as "freighter's stew."

Supper over, the two freighters sat about in the lurking shadows made by the fire's blink and glimmer, smoking their pipes. All at once there was a commotion in the band of mules. Those patient folk, who had scrambled and pulled all day over a rough mountain trail with wagons loaded on the principle of 1,200 pounds to a mule, and who now in the proprieties of mule life should be at peace with the world, were charging about and snorting in a very alarming way.

"Injuns!" said old Jones, shoving back into the gloom. "Injuns for $1,000! There ain't no animal on earth, bar Injuns, ever makes mules take on that away."

The nephew thought so too. Old Jones and the nephew did not fear attack. There were no Injuns about that were not described as friendly.

What they did fear was that the mules might be stampeded. Stampeding stock is a great aboriginal industry. The Indian will sneak up, flap a blanket, stampede your cattle or mules and then claim $1 a head for finding them for you. Thus do these wise sons of nature fill their coffers and exact a revenue from those who cross their lands.

Jones' nephew took a winchester from a wagon and began to work his cautious, silent way toward the mules. These last were still snorting and shying as if prey to wild alarm. The nephew disappeared in the darkness. Old Jones placed his hand over his pipe bowl so its fiery eye could not be seen and peered after him into the gloom.

"Bang! Bang! Bang!" It was the winchester speaking. It told the Indian policy of the border, and a very sufficient policy it is too. Old Jones at the sound heaved a sigh, but never moved. After a little the nephew came in to the fire. He seemed alert, hopeful and unrelenting as to the winchester Indian policy.

"Did you stretch one?" said old Jones.

"I think most likely I did," said the nephew in a sanguine way. "We can tell in the morning, shore."

The mules were now quiet. Firearms had no terror for them. They could stand the odor of gunpowder, but of Indians—bah! No mule of taste could stand it a second. After another half hour old Jones and his nephew kicked out the embers of their fire and went to sleep.

Old Jones and his nephew had visitors in the morning. The whole Ute tribe and their agent came to the freighters' camp. The members of the Jones family at once seized their winchesters and alacriously prepared for war. The Utes ran about, jumping and yelling and demanding vengeance. Old Jones and his nephew stood silent and grim behind their wagons and showed their iron teeth. The agent insisted on peace. Would the Jones who had killed the Ute the night before give himself up? He would be guaranteed from harm, but the Utes insisted on his arrest. They, the Indians, would attack the wagons if the criminal did not surrender. So spoke the agent, a nervous little incompetent, as many an Indian agent is.

"Give up nothing," said old Jones derisively. "You tell them Utes if they want anything round yere to waltz in and get it."

The Utes howled and danced still harder and higher at this, and the agent talked more earnestly than ever. He threatened the Joneses with the power of the government. This was too much. They would fight the whole Ute tribe, but they were afraid of Uncle Sam. After a brief parley the nephew stepped out and gave himself up to the agent. He would have displayed more sense if he had remained behind his wagon and died in the smoke of his winchester.

The agent, the nephew and the Utes did not go a mile toward the agency before the Indians took the nephew, and tying him to a pine tree spent several blissful hours in torturing him to death. The agent was powerless to interfere.

Jones, the elder, knew the truth the evening of the same day. He turned a little pale under the 30 years of tan which browned his face, but said nothing. As well as he could he managed to hitch up his teams and went ahead. His course was slow. Where the going was easy the nephew's team—eight mules—could follow the others and get along all right. Where it was rough old Jones halted them and after driving his own team over came back for them.

Two months later the old man unloaded his freight at a camp in the Gunnison country. He told the story of his nephew's death and charged it to the agent. The populace agreed with him to a man. Old Jones insisted that the agent should likewise suffer death. Public sentiment rushed to the same conclusion. Every man in the Tin Cup district who heard of the matter at once advised Jones to go back and kill the miserable agent or to hire some one who would. Never was public sentiment so uniform in a matter before. It was beautiful.

This struck old Jones, who had strong commercial instincts, as a good thing. He inquired for some one who would undertake the enterprise. He did not think it should cost much.

"It is dead easy to do," he said. "Just ride calmly up to the agency and beef him and then ride away. That oughtn't to cost no fortune." And he was "willin to give a hoss and outfit and $500."

"I'll go you," said a bad looking gentleman called Curly Bill.

Curly Bill was certainly a very bad man, as any one might see by examining his six shooter. He had filed away the sight, as superfluous to one so sure and keen, and had taken out the trigger, trusting to explode his interesting weapon by the simple process of letting the hammer fall from his thumb. These changes in the ground plan of a Colt's 44 always speak a bad man the wide west over, and such was Curly Bill, the personage who wanted to hire out to kill the agent.

Preliminaries were arranged, and the horse and outfit were turned over, in company with $200 of the $500, and Curly Bill rode away on his long pull for the Ute agency.

Six weeks and their happenings were added to history, and so far nothing floated back from Curly Bill. One afternoon he rode again into camp in the Gunnison country. The public and old Jones crowded about for news. Curly Bill entered a saloon. The public and old Jones followed in and at his request took a drink with him. At last old Jones put the question:

"Did you get him, Curly?"

"No," said Curly Bill.

"Why not?"

"Well," said Curly Bill, with an amiable drawl, "I'll tell you what's the matter. You see, the cuss offered me $1,000 to come back and down you."

There was a profound silence. Old Jones seemed thoughtful and cast down, and the public waited. At last old Jones put another pertinent inquiry.

"Well, whatever do you allow you'll do about it?"

"Whatever'll you do about it?" said Curly Bill. "Will you raise him?"

"S'pose I don't raise him?" said old Jones. "S'pose I don't even call him?" And an ugly glare began to shine in his watery, gray eyes, albeit his voice was low and his face calm.

"Well," said Curly Bill, with vast nonchalance, "in that event I reckon I'll have to go him."

The public took a deep breath at this announcement, and old Jones seemed plunged in thought again. At last he found his voice.

"I'll think this yere matter over, Bill, and I reckon on fixing up something so you won't complain none of me. You be yere, and I'll come back in an hour."

Then old Jones proceeded straight to his wagons, got his winchester, and coming in the back door of the saloon wherein Curly Bill was refreshing himself after the campaign blew that celebrated head off without a word.

Old Jones gave himself up to the citizens' committee and demanded a trial. It was had at once. Every man in camp knew of the killing and its entire history. They all approved it too. It was esteemed, however, not a proper thing to allow the plot to kill the agent to go abroad to the world. The account might in unskillful mouths become garbled and hurt the camp's reputation. So when old Jones was acquitted, which denouement was rapid in its coming, the verdict read thus:

Strict Compliance Exacted.

The laugh is on a Milo (Me.) farmer. He prides himself on regularity in feeding his live stock, especially his pig. The other day he found he would be obliged to be away at the usual hour, so he told his wife to be careful and feed the pig just on the stroke of 12. This advice was repeated several times before he started, and, as he drove off, his parting admonition was, "Remember the pig." His business took him to a neighboring town, and he had been there but a short time when a telegram was handed to him. Fearing the worst, he opened it and read, "Shall I feed the pig on local or standard time?" and the message was "collect."—Boston Herald.

DUMPED INTO A RIVER.

Men Working on a Bridge Engulfed by a Raging Torrent.

Eleven Out of Twenty Reported to Be Drowned.

Carried Down Pequabuck River and Lost in the Darkness.

BRISTOL, Conn., Feb. 7.—A most appalling disaster occurred here shortly after 9 o'clock last night, in which 20 workmen were precipitated into Pequabuck river from the East Bristol bridge, and 11 of them are probably drowned.

Yesterday afternoon the structure was found to be shaky, and the 4:42 train on the New England road had a narrow escape from wreck as it crossed on the way to Hartford.

For some time the bridge had been looked upon with suspicion, and at the present time a new bridge was in process of erection, and was almost completed. It was close alongside the bridge which was carried away.

The fierce storm which swept over the state played havoc with New England bridges, and the swollen waters of the Pequabuck river threatened to carry the bridge away. At 5 o'clock a special wrecking train with 40 men left East Hartford and were put to work on the new bridge which the company is building over the river, and which is almost completed. It was intended to put the new bridge in shape at once so that trains could cross the river. The old bridge was declared unsafe about 4 o'clock, and since then no trains have crossed the river.

Twenty workmen were put to work on each bridge. About 9 o'clock one of the foremen, John Barry, called the 20 men on the old structure toward the center to assist in tearing up the ties, which were wanted for the other bridge. The weight of the men was too great for the bridge, and without hardly a moment's warning it collapsed, precipitating 16 or 17 of the men into the raging waters of the river. Three or four were caught by falling timbers and seriously injured. Three managed to cling to fragments of the bridge and were rescued by a number of their comrades, who rushed over from the new bridge as soon as they realized the extent of the disaster.

Beyond Reach of Aid.

The tottering condition of the remaining portions of the old bridge rendered the work of reaching the men impossible, and had a boat been available, nothing could have held it against the mad rush of the waters. The unfortunate men in the water attempted to seize sticks and portions of the abutments which had been broken loose, but not more than five or six were successful. The others were carried down stream, and were quickly lost to sight in the darkness.

Two men were able to swim ashore, but fell exhausted as soon as they reached land. John Barry, the foreman in charge of the old bridge, was extricated from the mass of wreckage and debris which collected where the bridge gave way, and was found to have been badly wounded. He and the other rescued men were taken to farmhouses nearby and cared for. The foreman was unable to give the names of the men who were on the bridge with him at the time.

As soon as the railroad officials were notified of the collapse a special train was sent out from East Hartford with two surgeons and another gang of wreckers. A gang of 20 men rigged impromptu rafts and scows, and began a search for the bodies. Others were sent down both sides of the river to see if anyone had been fortunate enough to reach the shore. At a late hour no more bodies were found, and it was the general opinion that the men had no chance of reaching the shore alive.

At midnight 11 persons were still among the missing. All are members of the construction gangs from Hartford and East Hartford, and were residents of those points.

The men were taking up iron rails on the old bridge when the accident happened, and were passing them across to the new structure.

A gang was working on each end, and by some misunderstanding, it is supposed all of them were called to the center of the structure. Their weight, with the extraordinary rush of the current, is supposed to have directly caused the fall of the bridge.

Pequabuck river empties into Plainville pond, three miles below the bridge where the fatal accident occurred. It is expected that many of the bodies will be found there.

It is expected that the new bridge will be ready for travel in 48 hours. All trains are stalled on the New England road by many washouts west of Plainville.

ON BEACON HILL.

Pensions For War Prisoners—Big Batch of Bills on Labor.

BOSTON, Feb. 7.—There was not a great deal going on in the committee rooms, but there was another deluge of bills and petitions in both branches of the legislature.

Petitions were presented for legislation for the better protection of the public health in the valleys of the Concord and Sudbury rivers; also for an act taking from the board of aldermen of Boston the right to license theatrical and other exhibitions and confer it upon the board of police.

Mr. Corbett presented a bill providing that whenever the death of a person shall be caused by such wrongful act or neglect as would, if death had not ensued, have entitled the party injured to maintain an action of damages, the person or firm which would have been liable to such an action may be proceeded against by the administrator or executor of the deceased for the benefit of the relatives of said deceased.

Among the bills in the house were those relating to the interest of labor—that the chairman of the state board of arbitration shall hold office only six months, and after that only in case his retention is requested by the capital representatives on the board; that women and minors shall not be employed in manufacturing establishments over 60 hours a week; prohibiting the placing of self-acting mules or other traversing machinery in such a location that it shall run within 12 inches of a post or roof support; that in certain cases where manufacturers are charged with running overtime, the evidence of the members of the district police shall be conclusive evidence and prima facie evidence of a violation of law; for suitable systems of ventilation in manufacturing establishments; prohibiting women and minors from working at night in printing establishments, also a bill relative to overtime work in factories.

Mr. Russell presented a resolve addressed to the representatives of the state in congress and in favor of the bill now before congress providing pensions for sailors and soldiers confined in Confederate prisons.

The judiciary committee reported against the bill which provided a penalty for the violation of the act of 1888 which permits the recovery of 18 per cent interest only in cases of small loans.

Leave to withdraw was reported on the petition that a part of Abington be annexed to Brockton.

Lowell's Church Row.

LOWELL, Mass., Feb. 7.—In reply to the notice given by the lessees of the First Congregational church to Rev. G. F. Kenngott, warning him to keep out, the board of deacons sent a letter to the lessees yesterday asserting that Mr. Kenngott is the duly installed pastor of the church, and they will resist every effort made to prevent him from performing his pastoral duties. This means that Mr. Kenngott will try to preach next Sunday, although the lessees have engaged another man. It is said that the lessees have threatened to arrest Mr. Kenngott for trespassing if he disregards their notice. The trouble bids fair to get into the courts.

She resided at the corner of K and East Second streets for several years, and had long been confined to her bed. It's a genuine case of leprosy. The board of health has so declared it, and consulting physicians have agreed in this diagnosis of the case.

Fishing Vessel Lost.

ROCKLAND, Me., Feb. 7.—The fishing schooner Alice Raymond, bound from this port for Gloucester, Mass., went ashore off Rugged island in a snowstorm, and became a total loss. The Arnett Incident.

TALK OF FAVORITISM.

Morgan's Name Dragged Into Rumors About the Bond Sale.

President Greatly Interested In Its Success.

Did His Utmost to Enlist Interest In the Great Financial Undertaking.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—There is an ugly feeling among a number of the bidders for the 4 per cent bonds. There are stories of favoritism afloat which are so serious as to warrant the most careful statement.

The midnight circular of Secretary Carlisle said that "sealed proposals will be received at the office of the secretary of the treasury at Washington until 12 o'clock noon on Wednesday, Feb. 5, 1896." When the gentlemen representing the great financial interests of New York and other cities appeared at the department to witness the opening in public of the bids for bonds in the manner prescribed by law and custom they were astounded at discovering that the committee appointed for the purpose had been at work for hours, if not all night, putting in tabulated form the offers which had been received up to and including Wednesday.

No public explanation was offered for this departure from the regular proceedings. But the reason given unofficially was that there had been such an overwhelming number of offers as to make it absolutely necessary for an early opening in order to expedite matters.

When it is admitted that the bids were opened before "12 o'clock on Wednesday," when the evidence is presented to the eyes of all present that the bids which they had come to see opened had already been transcribed in supposed privacy, there is revealed a tremendous possibility for scandal. In such circumstances the only safety of the administration lies in the character of those officials concerned in the extraordinary proceeding.

This being said, that which follows and which is current gossip becomes interesting, if not significant. J. P. Morgan came to Washington Tuesday night in his private car, arriving at 8:30 on the limited train. He had every opportunity, so far as time is concerned, to get all the information he desired, and a hint in advance in such a transaction would be of priceless value.

The question asked by the disappointed ones is: Why was the Morgan combination able to shade its bid to the fraction sufficient to beat all the other heavy bidders? Was there a leak in the treasury, and where, and if there was no leak, why did the government depart from its precedents in beginning the determination of an award hours before the appointed time, and in violation of the announcement implied in the secretary's circular?

The President's Views.

"Seldom have I taken so much interest in anything as in the success of this bond issue," said President Cleveland yesterday. "Both Secretary Carlisle and myself have had it very much at heart."

In response to a reference to the syndicate contract of last year, the president remarked that he had no reason to question the wisdom of that arrangement under the conditions then existing. "That contract," he added, "helped us out at a time when 48 hours' delay might have produced serious results.

"I sympathize, nevertheless, with objections made to that form of placing a loan. The difference between the price obtained from the syndicate and the price currently quoted can be twisted into an argument which will appeal to people who do not stop to calculate the actual cost to the syndicate of floating the loan at that time.

"My preference would have been to have had this loan much more popular than appears on its face, but we have done the best we could. The people who hoard small savings of gold, or the equivalents of gold, are unaccustomed to transacting business on the basis on which these bonds had to be issued; they are unused to premiums or to the formality of making bids.

"If we could have sold them a 3 per cent gold bond at par, I think it would have brought out a good deal of this gold, but the only bonds the law allows us to issue have to be sold considerably above par in order to yield a reasonable rate of net interest.

"As I said, I wish it could have been obviously still more of a popular loan, but from such information as comes to me from various private sources I am convinced that more small holdings of gold will come into the treasury by the present arrangement than appear on the surface.

"The small country banks, for instance, which are buying bonds for their customers, have made their bids through their New York and Boston correspondents, and this gives the loan the appearance of having been taken up by the big financial institutions at the money centers, while as a matter of fact not a little of it will ultimately come from the small investors."

Although the president was too modest to publish the part he had taken personally in making this loan a success, in justice to him it should be said, since it can be done on excellent authority, that since the bonds were offered for general subscription a month ago he has been untiring in his efforts to enlist interest in the undertaking.

He has sat up late each night writing autographic letters to such of his friends in different parts of the country as could be induced to take hold and work for the success of this loan, and it is beyond question that the generous response has been due in no small measure to his individual work and that of Secretary Carlisle along the same line.

Jackson Confesses.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 7.—Scott Jackson, accused of the murder of Pearl Bryan, has confessed his guilt. He implicates Alonzo M. Walling, who has also confessed to a personal knowledge of the murder. Walling tries to lay the blame on Jackson. Jackson, on the contrary, while he admits his own guilt, takes pains to implicate Walling.

QUINCY BREVITIES.

Notes from Quincy Point, Wollaston Atlantic, South and West Quincy.

A beautiful day after the storm.

A high wind but hardly a hurricane Thursday.

B. W. Ward, the evangelist, will speak at the Calvary Baptist church Sunday.

There is considerable sickness at West Quincy, although fortunately the sickness is not of a serious nature.

The High school is in luck to have a pleasant night for its annual prize speaking, after a stormy week.

Rev. C. W. Wilder and Rev. A. W. L. Nelson of Jamaica Plain will exchange pulpits on Sunday morning.

The John Boyle O'Reilley club held a dance at St. Mary's hall Thursday evening for the benefit of Andrew Doody.

The Gleaners, King's Daughters, will meet with Mrs. S. P. Moorehouse, Winthrop avenue, Monday, Feb. 10, at 2.30 P. M.

The Water Commissioners met Thursday evening and organized with W. G. A. Pattee as chairman and C. T. Baker as secretary.

The high wind was the cause of the fire alarm wires becoming grounded Thursday afternoon and thus causing the blows struck on the circuits.

The board of assessors held their first meeting this morning and qualified for the office, after which John Curtis was elected secretary of the board.

Commissioner Knowlton was about Thursday afternoon and night looking out for the large rainfall. Aside from floods there was but little damage.

There is a bill in the Legislature providing that damages cannot be recovered from a town because of injuries received on highways resulting from ice or snow.

The heavy rains Thursday caused a large pond to form in front of Hose 3 house which overflowed the sidewalks, making passing for pedestrians anything but pleasant.

The monthly business meeting of the Epworth League of Wollaston which was to have been held at the house of Mrs. Stiles, on Thursday evening, was postponed on account of the storm.

George W. Lovell, who died in North Weymouth this week, was a well-known citizen, being an ice dealer of the town as was his father before him. He was 32 years of age and leaves a widow.

The Ladies' Benevolent Society of the Wollaston Congregational church, will hold their regular monthly sociable in the church vestry, Thursday evening, Feb. 13. It will take the form of "A Belated Picnic."

Newbury avenue in front of Teal pond is flooded to a depth of 18 inches in the middle of the street, which will necessitate much inconvenience to the school children who will be obliged to go far out of their way in order to get to school.

The Whatsoever Ten, King's Daughters of Wollaston will hold a sale at the residence of Mrs. Amos T. Leavitt, Lincoln avenue, on next Tuesday afternoon and evening. The proceeds will go towards caring for the worthy people of this city.

Again Thursday night it was illustrated that the Washington street culvert over Town brook is too small to carry off a rush of water. The low lands bordering the brook were overflowed and Cherry avenue remained under water until this noon.

The Junior League of Wollaston is to give a cantata and entertainment at the Methodist Episcopal church on Thursday evening, Feb. 13. It is entitled "Grandmother's Garden with Sunflower Chorus." They will be assisted by Class No. 8 of the Sunday school, and Misses Hazel Hewins and Elizabeth Pipping of Dedham.

The Hurricane.

The hurricane which had been working up the coast from the southern sea-board, broke with terrific force over this section of the country on Thursday afternoon. The storm started in a mild sort of a way but by three o'clock a West India hurricane was raging. At that time the wind at Wollaston had attained a velocity of 40 miles an hour and 53 on Blue Hill. For four hours the gale blew with unabated fury, when suddenly it ceased and disappeared as quietly as it came.

Trial List, Civil Session.

4442—Hayes, executrix vs. Beahn-Tr.

—A proposed bill in the Legislature would prohibit any alderman or councilman of any city from directly or indirectly recommending for employment any person to a corporation or individual, already enjoying, or seeking to acquire, any public grant, privilege or franchise from the city in which such alderman, etc., holds office; a violation of the act subjects the offender to a fine of not less than $25 nor more than $100.

☞ Taylor's Anti-Headache Powders are just as harmless as water. Yet, look how powerful water is in putting out fire. Our powders cure Headache and Neuralgia in the same manner exactly. It is safe to say that these powders will cure all cases, because they never failed yet. Why not buy Taylor's and be sure about it? Get them of Leonard J. Pastor, Ph. G., 27 School street.

—Postmaster General Wilson has issued an order to establish a house letter box system of distributing and collecting mails. Experiments will be first made in Boston, Springfield and Portland. The boxes will be placed outside the door or gate, and an indicator on it shows whether there is any mail in it or not.

—The postmistress of Georgetown, Ind., has held her position for fifteen years, but a recent visit of the inspector revealed the fact that there were seventeen unopened sacks of mail from one to seven years old. She probably hadn't had time to read the letters yet. That was a big task for a woman sixty years old.

—Another innovation in the manufacture of shoes in Brockton has just been put into practical operation. It is the introduction of ooze calf for tops. The material resembles cloth so much that it cannot be detected, unless by close examination, and when made up it gives the shoe every appearance of a natty cloth top shoe.

To Pay for Franchises.

The Citizens' Association of Boston has petitioned the Legislature for legislation authorizing cities and towns to receive compensation and to impose terms and conditions for the enjoyment of street franchises and privileges. The bill with the petition provides that any person or corporation hereafter, desiring the franchise, right or privilege to lay tracks, lay pipes, erect poles, etc., in, over or under any street or public place in any of the cities or towns of the State shall present a petition, with specifications and plans, to the city council of said city or selectmen of a town.

After hearing and favorable report on the petition the mayor or selectmen may lease the said rights or privileges to the petitioner or to some other responsible person or corporation, if he can do so more advantageously than to the petitioner, for such rent and terms (not to exceed 20 years) and upon such conditions as a due regard for the city or town's interest demands. The rent reserved by the city or town shall be payable annually or oftener and may consist of a share of the gross receipts. There shall be public competition for the rights and franchises if the mayor so wills.

Any person or corporation receiving from the mayor or selectmen the offer of a lease under the provisions of the act, whereby a payment of rent goes to the city or town, or any ten citizens of any city or town which has granted a lease without requiring adequate compensation, may within one month from such offer or from acceptance of such grant, appeal to the railroad commissioners or the gas commissioners, as the grant relates to street railways or otherwise, who shall give notice and hearing. The commissioners shall, after due consideration, confirm the grant or change the rent named therein. The decision of the commissioners is final.

MILTON.

Rev. M. A. Daugherty who has filled the pulpit of the Congregational church so acceptably for the past few weeks, will preach next Sunday. His preaching is liked very much and many of the parish would like to have him supply the pulpit permanently.

While Mrs. Michael Mullen was riding Thursday morning her carriage collided with James Thomas' milk wagon. Mrs. Mullen was thrown out and considerably bruised, and her horse ran some distance before he was stopped. The carriage was damaged but little.

The annual reunion of the Milton High school will be held tonight at the Town Hall.

The warrant committee meet next Monday evening to consider the articles in the warrant for the annual town meeting.

Governor Greenhalge has reappointed Mr. Edward Brooks a member of the board of trustees of the Perkins Institute for the Blind.

Curtis-Crane.

A quiet but charming home wedding took place Wednesday night, Feb. 5, at the residence of Mr. B. F. Crane, 43 Franklin street, Quincy, when his lovely and accomplished daughter, Alice Ludden, was united in marriage unto Mr. Samuel Curtis of Boston.

Rev. F. B. Mott of Dorchester officiated in his usual happy and impressive manner and the happy couple departed amid showers of rice and hearty congratulations. Thus representatives of two of Quincy's oldest families are again united. The great grandfathers of the young couple having been near relatives.

BAYARD LOVES ENGLAND.

Englishmen Apparently Have the Same Feeling For Bayard.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—At the annual dinner of the St. John's foundation school last night, the guests included members of the clergy, diplomats, members of parliament and other public men. Ambassador Bayard presided.

In proposing a toast to the queen, Mr. Bayard was greeted with tumultuous applause. Above his seat were draped the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes, with their folds interlaced. Mr. Bayard made a feeling reference to the death of Prince Battenberg.

Mr. Bayard, when proposing the toast to the St. John's school, said: "I am not a citizen of this country, but I am a friend of it. The hearts of the lovers of England were lately stirred to consider the sources of her strength, and the common patriotic idea naturally turned to her great armies and navies and the stout hearts and earnest consciousness of her people."

Mr. Bayard ventured to remind them of the noiseless but ever potential forces which, by making England strong, should make his own country strong. He proceeded to eulogize the work of the clergy as the class which furnished a large share of the distinguished men of the country, a noted example being Nelson.

Canon Duckworth proposed Mr. Bayard's health, and said: "England rejoices in America's prosperity, and we welcome Mr. Bayard as the proxy of the great people whose interests were indissolubly bound up with our own."

The toast was honored standing and with three cheers, the band playing meanwhile "Yankee Doodle."

Mr. Bayard, in responding, said that he felt that when he crossed the Atlantic it was merely a change of faces and not of the hearts. He had spent his life in America, and he came from a people who had drawn nothing but American air and doctrine for 2½ centuries. He came here and found and breathed the same air. "If any difference exists," says Mr. Bayard, "it is an artificial one. Just let the human heart speak, man to man, and you will find all differences can be arranged."

Dam Gave Way.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Feb. 7.—The dam at Pocahontas lake broke last night, and the lower part of this city was inundated. All day the melting snow had swollen the streams and poured into the lake. It was held in check by the frailest and flimsiest of wooden dams. The water rose to the top. Meanwhile the water, rushing through the flume and from the sewers, had filled the Whippany river to the brim, and the water ran over. Crowds of people flocked down to see the spreading waters. Suddenly a section of the dam, 18 feet wide, went down. A wall of water, six feet high, swept into the valley, quickly followed by thousands of tons of ice. Many heroic rescues were made, but no lives are reported lost, although about 25 people are missing.

Chamberlain's Faith.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—Cecil Rhodes, the retiring premier of Cape Colony, had a two hours' interview with Joseph Chamberlain. No official statement of the interview was issued, but the prevailing impression was that Mr. Rhodes' statement was very full and was accepted by Mr. Chamberlain as complete. The interview has served to clear the ground for a decision on the part of the government with regard to the future of the Chartered South African company. It is believed that some announcement may be expected shortly.

Manitoba Legislature Meets.

WINNIPEG, Feb. 7.—The new Manitoba legislature was opened yesterday by Lieutenant Governor Patterson. The governor in his opening speech said that the result of the elections left no room for doubt that the attitude of his government on education was in accordance with the wishes of a very large majority of the people of the province, and that a copy of the order in council embodying the views and the policy of his government upon that question would shortly be laid before the legislature.

Changes In Platform.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—The National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial union, which has been in session here three days, adjourned yesterday. The "sub-treasury plan," to which the alliance has been committed for a number of years, and the demand for an increase of the circulating medium to $50 per capita, were eliminated from the platform. Resolutions were adopted opposing the refunding of the Pacific railroad debt, and agreeing to meet next year at Dallas.

Fire and Flood.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Feb. 7.—Bound Brook, situated about 30 miles from New York city, is on fire. The wires are down, but word has just reached here that between 20 and 25 houses have been destroyed by the flames. The Presbyterian church, 200 years old, is also on fire. The courier who brought word of the disaster from Bound Brook said that one report had it that a number of persons had been drowned by the sudden rush of waters in the Raritan river.

Are They Filibusters?

BALTIMORE, Feb. 7.—A mysterious schooner, with about 30 men aboard, left here early yesterday morning under circumstances which seem to indicate another filibustering expedition to Cuba. The schooner is described as being much larger than those which ordinarily ply upon Chesapeake bay, and the men who boarded her are said to have been well dressed and of a foreign appearance.

General Gibbon Dead.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 7.—General John Gibbon, the famous Indian fighter, died at his home in this city last night at the age of 68. His death was caused by pneumonia, which attacked him just as he was about to start for Milwaukee to attend a reunion of the Loyal Legion. He was on the retired list of the United States army, with the rank of brigadier general.

Bad For "Bat."

ALBANY, Feb. 7.—The lawyers representing "Bat" Shea, under sentence for troubles in connection with the Troy elections, whose case of appeal was yesterday denied by the court of appeals, are out of the city, and the next step of Shea and his friends is not known here. The only possible chance lies in an appeal to the United States supreme court.

Firebug Sentenced.

WORCESTER, Mass., Feb. 7.—Benjamin F. Townsend, convicted of arson in burning the barn of George P. Calhoun in Rutland, was yesterday sentenced by Judge Sherman, under the minimum and maximum law, to not less than five nor more than 10 years in state prison.

WILLIAM G. RUSSELL.

One of Boston's Leading Lawyers Answers the Summons of Death.

BOSTON, Feb. 7.—William G. Russell, who was considered the leader of the Suffolk county bar, died at 5:30 p. m., yesterday, at his residence, 178 Beacon street, at the age of 74 years. He was conscious to the last.

WILLIAM G. RUSSELL.

Mr. Russell had been feeble of late, and his death was the result, immediately, of an affection of the heart. His end was peaceful and free from pain.

Would Oust Boers.

PRETORIA, Feb. 7.—The trial of the members of the reform committee has begun here. They are charged with inciting to rebellion and with high treason. The mining commissioner deposed that the men held the town with the avowed intention of opposing the government of the Transvaal, and asserted that members of the reform committee had said within his hearing: "The country will soon be ours from Cape Town to the Zambesi." A printer testified to receiving from the reform committee a proclamation to the effect that Dr. Jameson was expected in Johannesburg; that disturbances might ensue, and that therefore a provisional government was necessary. This proclamation had been put in type, but was never printed. John H. Hammond, the American mining engineer charged with the leadership of the late uprising in Johannesburg, has been liberated on bail.

Latest From Cuba.

HABANA, Feb. 7.—Lieutenant Colonel Tejeriezo has had a skirmish between Manzanillo and Media Luna and killed three insurgents and took one prisoner. The troops lost Major Comas Vergara and four soldiers wounded. The bands of Pancho Perez, Matagas and Emilio Aragon attacked a force of 40 civil guards who were protecting a company of telephone linemen. The insurgents sustained a numerous loss, while the civil guards were compelled to retreat with a loss of two killed and five wounded. General Godoy later overtook the same band at Yuca, Santa Clara, but they dispersed when attacked by the troops, leaving four killed and carrying away many wounded.

Senator Frye Honored.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—The election of Senator Frye as president pro tem was the first business after the assembling of the senate today. There was no opposition and no rollcall. The Republican caucus to consider the other elective officers of the senate will be held this afternoon, if an adjournment for it can be secured.

Sentence In a "Boodle" Case.

SALEM, Mass., Feb. 7.—George O. Tilton of Haverhill was sentenced to 15 months in the house of correction yesterday on the charge of conspiracy while an alderman of that city to accept a bribe in a liquor license case.

AGAINST ANTI-TOXIN.

The Assumption That it is a Remedy Entirely Unsupported.

CONCLUDED FROM YESTERDAY.

To the Editors of the Ledger.

In conclusion Dr. Browne says: "When drawing attention at a meeting of Clinical society last December to increased liability to the most grave complications of diphtheria (Italics mine) "viz: Anuria, nephritis and cardiac failure under the use of serum (anti-toxin) we took occasion to express a hope that further experience might prove that the disadvantages of serum would be more than outweighed by its benefits. We deeply regret to be obliged to record facts which if confirmed—and they are easily capable of being checked by parallel observation of others who may elect to make use of the opportunities which we have embraced—cannot fail to carry a contrary conviction." (Italics mine.)

"The question is indeed enforced on us as demanding an early reply, whether we are justified in continuing to pursue a treatment, the efficacy of which in December, 1894, seemed in the opinion of the Clinical Society of London to be assured! but in which there is such a marked increase in some of the recognized complications of diphtheria and the occurrence of several new ones of undesirable if not actually fatal significance. (italics mine)

"The foregoing statements as to the effects of serum treatment will, we trust, have made it clear that the injection of anti-toxin serum into a patient attacked by diphtheria is not altogether free from an added danger, (italics mine) notwithstanding the amount of active principle administered can be measured only by millionths."

In regard to the use of anti-toxin as a preventive he says that reports of cases are not wanting in which noxious and even fatal results have followed the use of the serum as a prophylactic, (preventive) and that he does not feel justified in recommending anti-toxin for this purpose.

These are the conclusions reached by the eminent specialist in throat diseases, Mr. Browne. No one but an ignoramus would find fault with him if he declined to use anti toxin. Then why should Dr. Davis be censured? It should also be borne in mind that a physician may go through several epidemics of contagious diseases without losing a patient while other physicians are losing them, and in the next epidemic lose several in quick succession.

Epidemics vary as much as individuals. The cases that I saw with Dr. Davis were very malignant, but everything was done for them that could be, and anti-toxin would have been worse than useless. Its intelligent advocates admit its uselessness in septic cases. I am very glad of an opportunity to speak of the high esteem in which Dr. Davis is held by his colleagues and of the enviable reputation which he enjoys among them for his success in treating both acute and chronic diseases.

He has lived in Quincy about sixteen years, his record there speaks for itself, and it seems incredible that such an unwarrantable and cowardly attack should be made upon him unless it were prompted by malice or envy.

Very truly yours,
SAMUEL A. KIMBALL, M. D.
124 Commonwealth avenue, Boston.

The heavy rain Thursday afternoon and evening undermined the street railway tracks on Washington street, between Temple street and the residence of Geo. O. Langley, and the tracks settled so bad that it was impossible to run cars over them, and the passengers had to walk from the corner to Mr. Langley's residence. A gang of men was put to work and the line was rebuilt before the late trains were due.

UNJUST TAXATION.

Massachusetts Tax Laws Need Amendment.

GOVERNOR AND SPEAKER AGREE.

The Massachusetts Anti-Double Taxation League Begins Afresh.

A fact that cannot be ignored is that the laws of Massachusetts relating to taxation need to be amended. This fact has been affirmed in forcible language by the speaker of the house of representatives and by the governor.

The Massachusetts Anti-Double Taxation League is organized for the purpose of reforming the law in certain particulars and these particulars coincide exactly with the remarks of both the speaker and the governor.

HON. WILLIAM B. DURANT.

The league did very good public service last year in preventing the passage of bad legislation. It has organized this year under the same platform, but with a few new officers, and it is understood that its purpose is to be aggressive rather than defensive.

The proposed repeal of the beneficent law of 1881, which relieved real estate from the burden of double taxation, was effectually killed. It is not to be anticipated that any new effort will be made in this direction. With this bugbear disposed of, the League presses forward its main contention that all forms of double taxation should be abolished.

The most flagrant form of double taxation now legal is the taxation of shares of corporations organized under the laws of other states. These shares are no more property than are shares of Massachusetts corporations. Either one is only an evidence of property somewhere protected and presumably there taxed. It would be just as sensible to tax the holder of a deed of a house or lot, although the house or lot had already been taxed, as to tax the holder of a share of corporate property which has been taxed.

Officers of the League.

The League has elected for its president Hon. William B. Durant of Cambridge. Mr. Durant has achieved an enviable reputation, both in the house and senate, and takes hold of this taxation question because he believes in the platform, and because he believes that the prosperity of the Commonwealth will be greatly promoted by the success of its efforts. Mr. Durant will be aided in the work he has undertaken by many distinguished citizens. The list of vice presidents of the League includes Charles Francis Adams, William W. Crapo, Edmund H. Bennett and Nathan Matthews, Jr. The treasurer is Mr. Horatio G. Curtis, president of the Old Boston National bank, and among the very formidable list of directors appear the names of Alanson W. Beard, George G. Crocker, Jonathan A. Lane, William Minot, Edward Atkinson, Alexander S. Porter, Robert O. Fuller, Richard H. Dana, Henry Lee, Alonzo H. Evans, William S. Green of Fall River, Rodney Wallace of Fitchburg, James S. Grinnell of Greenfield, William Whiting of Holyoke, Charles E. Adams of Lowell, E. S. Converse and Judge Pettengill of Malden, J. R. Leeson, Alden Speare and J. H. Nichols of Newton, A. C. Houghton of North Adams, William J. Dale, Jr., of North Andover, Oscar Edwards of Northampton, William R. Plunkett and Judge Tucker of Pittsfield, Colonel Hallowell of Medford, Colonel Bullock of Worcester, John Cummings of Woburn and Samuel J. Elder of Winchester. With such a backing Mr. Durant ought surely to succeed.

The Two Petitions.

Two petitions will be presented, both signed by a great number of distinguished and prominent citizens. The first of these relates to the double taxation of shares of foreign corporations and reads as follows:

"The undersigned petitioners, citizens of the Commonwealth, respectfully represent that the present system of taxation of personal property situated and taxable outside the Commonwealth, including shares of corporations organized under the laws of other States, is unjust in principle, ineffective in practice, and detrimental to the best interests of the Commonwealth, and, therefore, they respectfully petition that section 4, chapter 11 of the Public Statutes may be so amended that personal property situated and subject to taxation outside the Commonwealth, and shares of corporations which are organized under the laws of other States, and the property of which is taxable within or without the Commonwealth, may be exempt from taxation."

The other refers to the taxation of municipal bonds as follows:

"The undersigned petitioners, citizens of the Commonwealth, respectfully represent that under section 4, chap. 11 of the Public statutes, all public stocks and securities of the Commonwealth, including the obligations of the counties, cities, towns, school districts and fire districts thereof, are subject to taxation; that the effect of this law is both to increase the rate of interest on such obligations, and to restrict the market in which they can be negotiated; that the United States government and most of the States of the Union have recognized the justice and economy of exempting such public stocks and securities from taxation; that a very small amount of revenue is obtained by the taxation of these necessary instuctions of government. While every taxpayer is burdened in a measure by the extra interest which must be paid and the restricted market which must be endured, the districts, towns, cities, counties, and the State receive no adequate return.

"We, therefore, respectfully petition that such legislation be enacted as will exempt from taxation the notes, bonds and other obligations of the State, or of any county, city, town, or district, in this Commonwealth, which may be lawfully issued after the first day of May, in the year eighteen hundred and ninety-six."

It is anticipated that these petitions will be signed by more than 5000 citizens.

FRAME HOTEL BUILDING.

Commodious and Well Arranged For Its Purpose—Costs $4,500 to Build.

[Copyright, 1895, by George Palliser.]

One of the first requirements of a new place is a hotel and general stopping place for the community, and ofttimes a man who has enough business foresight to embark in an enterprise of this kind lays up for himself the foundation of a good living and very often a fortune. All new settlements are generally the outcome of push and energy, and in nearly all cases need just such a building, especially so where there is to be a large amount of building done and a number of artisans employed in the undertaking.

A house of this class as a starter is a move in the right direction and a great help, as it furnishes a home and a lodging place for those engaged in the undertaking.

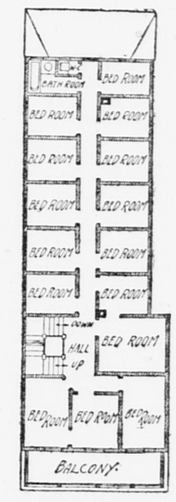

The design here shown was built under just such an emergency and has been a success from the start. Such a building should be erected in a convenient location, where it will not be a nuisance to any other part of the property. Sometimes near a railroad station or on a trolley line is the best.

Plan.—A small frame hotel building. Front, 24 feet 9 inches; depth, 50 feet 6 inches. Suited for erection on a 25 foot lot. Height of stories: Cellar, 7 feet; first story, 10 feet 6 inches; second story, 9 feet; third story, 8 feet 6 inches. All in the clear frame is heavy and well timbered; sides and rear covered with novelty siding; front sheathed and with clapboard and shingle finish, as shown, the whole being underlaid with heavy sheathing felt; roofs of tin. Cellar walls of stone; floor cemented; walls of hard finish. The floors are of yellow pine; interior finish of white pine, painted; piped for gas, plumbed complete, and with all connections to street for sewer and water. Built with fences and delivered ready for use. There are 31 bedrooms, in size 7 feet 6 inches by 8 feet 6 inches; larger ones, 7 feet 6 inches by 12 feet 6 inches each room.

Cost to build, finished as above, $4,500.

Full working plans and specifications furnished for 2 per cent on cost named by applying to George Palliser, 32 Park place, New York.

Study of the Front Door.

Nothing brings to mind as forcibly the comfort and convenience of a home as to stand outside a well finished oak Dutch front door, and to see the upper half opened to your rap, rap, rap by the knocker thereon. The first glimpse caught through the opening is like a look into paradise, softening and mellowing out as the lower half opens and admits you into the sacred realms of the hospitable hall and home. The study of the front door while waiting is often a training time to the mind of what to expect or see after entering, and many a thought for good or bad of the occupants may be dispelled by the thought the study of the door leads up to.

Bedroom Wall Papers.

A bedroom never ought to contain anything to fatigue the eye by its complexity. An invalid lying helpless in bed, practically condemned to puzzle out the intricate patterns of the wall paper or the hangings of the windows, mentally goes through a series of studies that lead into channels of thought by reason of the surroundings which are not conducive to health giving or recuperation. It is best to use simple wall papers of set designs in flowers and favorite well known foliage, as well as simple curtains, so the mind will at once be set at rest and the repose so needful be attained.

—It is shown by the official statistics that in a given 1000 of the people of Massachusetts there are now more individuals possessed of moderate and fair-sized estates than ever before, and that the average size of such estates is more than double what it was 60 years ago. This is relatively true as to the whole country. In spite of all the loose talk about the rich growing richer and the poor growing poorer, the fact is that the poor are accumulating property faster, in proportion and in the aggregate, than the rich.

The Graphic's Bark.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—The Graphic says this morning: If the French mean business in their dispute with Brazil the American jingoes will have another chance for a war scare. Probably they will take it, because they are aware that France is less likely than we to stomach a bullying. We have yet to learn that it is possible to overdo an expressed anxiety for peace. It begins by making us the laughing stock of the world, and sometimes ends by making war inevitable.

A Self Made Man.

—Life.

The Melon Didn't Count.

The memoirs of General Marbot upon the first French empire relate that, on the occasion of a very formal distribution of rewards made by Napoleon before Ratisbon, an old grenadier came forward and demanded somewhat sharply, to the astonishment of all, a cross of the Legion of Honor.

"But what have you done?" said Napoleon.

"Why, sire," said the soldier, "it was I who, in the desert of Yafa, when it was terribly hot and you were parched with thirst, brought you a watermelon."

"Thank you," said Napoleon, "but a watermelon for a general is not worth a cross of the Legion of Honor."

The grenadier flew into a violent rage. "Well, then," he shouted, "I suppose that the seven wounds that I got at Arcola and at Lodi and at Austerlitz and at Friedland go for nothing, eh? My 11 campaigns in Italy, in Egypt, in Austria, in Prussia, and in Poland you don't count I suppose?"

"Tut, tut, tut!" exclaimed the emperor. "How you do get excited when you come to the essential point of the whole matter! I make you now a chevalier of the Legion of Honor for you wounds and your campaigns, but don't tell me any more about your watermelon!"

John's Demise.

Mr. L., a good natured German, was the prosperous proprietor of a considerable clothing business in a country town. He had in his employ one John S., whom he had advanced from cashboy to head clerk and who had for many years been an attache of the store. Since his promotion John had several times asked for a raise in his salary, and each time his request had been granted. One morning John again appeared at the old merchant's desk with another request for an increase of $10 per month. "Vy, Shon," said Mr. L., "I dink I bays you pooty vell alretty. Vat for I bays you any more?" "Well," replied John confidently, "I am your principal help here. I have worked you up to a large trade. I know every detail of the business, and indeed I think you could not get along without me." "Is dot so!" exclaimed the German. "Mein Gott, Shon, vot vood I do suppose you vas to die?" "Well," hesitated John, "I suppose you would have to get along without me then." The old man took several whiffs from his big pipe and said nothing. At last he gravely remarked, "Vell, Shon, I guess you petter gonsider yourself dead."—Business Journal.

—The work on the new Charles River Park track in Boston is being pushed with a rapidity and spirit that speaks for its early completion. When that point is reached, Boston will undoubtedly be the wealthiest city in the country in the matter of race tracks, for she will have no less than four of them, but of this number the Charles River Park track must take precedence owing to its construction on the most scientific plan, there not being a single experiment in the entire construction.

GREAT PRISON RECORD

Held by John Mahony, Better Known as "Jack Sheppard."

Would Steal Whole Cartloads of Merchandise.

Now Under Arrest For Having Burglars' Tools In His Possession.

BOSTON, Feb. 7.—"Jack Sheppard," who was arrested in New York, Wednesday, for having burglars' tools in his possession, is very well known in this city and vicinity, having been arrested here several times, and having served a couple of sentences in the Charlestown state prison, to say nothing about several terms that he served in the house of correction.

JOHN MAHONY.

According to Chief Inspector Watts, this famous "crook" has served 27 years of his life in prison. He is about 50 years old.

Sheppard has a record seldom equaled by any criminal. His right name is John Mahony, but for years he has been known to the detectives throughout the country only as "Jack Sheppard." He gained this soubriquet on account of his facility for breaking jail.

ONE OF MAHONY'S ESCAPES.

He has been in over 30 state prisons, and has made his escape from seven. When but a boy he escaped from the Tombs in New York, and years afterward he pried off a door in the New York police headquarters and got away.

Some of his most clever thefts have been committed by his assuming the guise of a clerk, wearing a linen duster and carrying a pen back of his ear. He would tell a driver of some big truck that there was a mistake about one invoice and make the driver accompany him into a building. He would give the driver the shake, and meanwhile Jack's accomplice would drive off the vehicle and its contents.

His first record in this city began as far back as March, 1866, when he was arrested in Boston for stealing a truckload of broadcloth, valued at $5000. For that offense he served five years in the state prison.

After serving his time in this city he went to New York, and shortly afterward was arrested there for a robbery. He made himself famous at that time by escaping from New York police headquarters.

In September, 1875, he received a three-years' sentence to the Eastern penitentiary, and after finishing that sentence came to Boston and began operations again.

In April, 1879, he stole a whole truck load of goods, and took the property, with the assistance of a well-known thief named Connelly, to a place in Cambridge where he stored them over night. The goods were traced there by the police, and in making the arrest of Sheppard, Inspector McCausland, who is still attached to headquarters, came near losing his life.

Connelly at the time escaped and was never arrested, as he died a short time afterward. Sheppard was convicted and received another five-year sentence to the Charlestown institution.

After his release in Boston he went to Philadelphia, was caught there doing a similar job and got a sentence of three years.

On Feb. 19, 1887, he was arrested in New York for the Boston officers, being wanted by Inspector Watts, now chief inspector, for breaking and entering the tailoring establishment of H. S. Levi on the night of Feb. 10, that year, and stealing more than $700 worth of clothing. He was brought back to Boston, and he and an accomplice named Grear were convicted in the superior court.

When it came to being sentenced, Sheppard made a touching speech from the dock, and instead of getting a sentence of 25 years as an habitual criminal, as he might, Judge Dewey took pity on him, and gave him but two years in the house of correction at South Boston.

Since serving his time in that institution he has been arrested on several occasions in other cities, but he has steered clear of Boston.

While serving a five-year term in Charlestown Mahony wrote a long and interesting account of his career, and told in detail the causes which led him into evil ways. This article was written in 1870, when Mahony was but 26 years old, but he had already had a long experience in crime.

It seems that Mahony was born bad. As a schoolboy he was a habitual truant and a terror to his teachers. The son of a teacher of a French boarding school on Long Island gave him his first lessons in iniquity and taught him to chew tobacco.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 9. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—Christ's warnings.—Math. vii, 21-27. (A memory meeting suggested.)

Two things are necessary to our best encouragement and development in Christian character. We must be instructed in the Christian life and encouraged by the blessedness and happiness of fidelity to God, and, furthermore, we must be stimulated by being faithfully warned against the evil consequences sure to follow if we do not faithfully serve the Lord.

Christ was faithful in warning His people as well as holding out inducements in the way of the precious promises of God. It is a noticeable fact that the warnings of Christ and of God's word are not emphasized today as they used to be and as they undoubtedly should be. If Christ thought it important and necessary to use warnings in presenting the truth of God, His disciples should not lightly disregard it, for "the servant is not greater than his lord."

1. Christ warns us against hypocrisy. "Not every one that sayeth unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven." To those who falsely professed His name, He said He would say on the day of judgment: "I never knew you. Depart from Me." The utter worthlessness and weakness of hypocrisy in religion are apparent to all. Christ knows that we are not sincere. We cannot deceive Him, nor can we deceive God. Nor do we usually deceive men. Sooner or later they will know if we are true or false, and instead of our profession benefiting us, it will injure us. Christ's warning against hypocrisy should stimulate us to sincerity. If Christianity is worth imitating, it is worth possessing. The real thing is always of greater and surer value than the counterfeit.

2. Christ warns us against being hearers of His word only. It is not the one, He says, that heareth the word of God, but the one that doeth it that shall enter into the kingdom of heaven. Christ likened the one who heard, but did not do, to a man who built a house upon the sand, which was speedily and easily destroyed in the midst of the storm that came upon it. But him that both heard and did His sayings He likened to a man who built his house upon a rock, which withstood all the storms that came upon it. He clearly points out the consequences resulting from not doing His will, but He leaves it for us to decide what we will do. Let us imitate the wise man who built his house upon the rock. Let us both hear and do, thus obeying the injunction of James to be doers and not hearers only.

Bible Readings.—II Chron. xix, 10; Ps. xix, 9-11; Isa. iii, 11; Ezek. iii, 17-19; Math. xviii, 6, 7; xxiii, 29-33; xxv, 1-13, 31-46; Luke vi, 22-26; xi, 42-44; xvii, 1-4; John iii, 18-20; Col. i, 28, 29; I Thess. v, 14; Heb. xi, 7; Jas. i, 22-27.

The World For Christ.

If you want to conquer the world for Christ, learn something about the method of campaign. Study missions more diligently and intelligently than you would study mathematics. Give your hours to it. Count your best as an unworthy gift to lay on the missionary altar. Share your knowledge among Endeavorers and other church members, circulate missionary literature, brighten up the missionary services of your society and congregation. Give as you would give into the pierced hand of Jesus himself. Go, if He will let you go. By any means, by all means, preach the gospel.—Golden Rule.

There's Something In This.

An Australian society has circulated a card with a list of questions covering almost everything that young Christians could attempt. In order to ascertain just what work is most suited to the individual member, each is requested to put a cross against the work that he would like to undertake. The first card is followed by another, on which the receiver is requested to enter a record of work done. Both lookout and nominating committees would find such a list helpful.—Exchange.

Leakage Stopped by Endeavorers.

A prominent member of the United Methodist Free church of England, Rev. E. Abbott of Birmingham, declared in a recent address that his denomination had lost 80,000 members in ten years by leakages, a number equal to the whole present membership of the denomination, but he said that Christian Endeavor was stopping the leakage.

Work For All.

There is no work for each laborer in the great harvest field, but the Lord of the harvest must send forth where and how He pleases. May we be much in the counsel of the Lord that we may be instructed successfully to work for Him. —Mrs. Pennefather.

The Hardest Task.

I do believe the common man's task is the hardest. The hero has the hero's aspiration that lifts him to his labor. All great duties are easier than the little ones, though they cost far more blood and agony.—Phillips Brooks.

Roses—To Come.

I dreamed I had a plot of ground,
Once when I chanced asleep to drop,
And that a green hedge fenced it round,
Cloudy with roses at the top.

I saw a hundred mornings rise—
So far a little dream may reach—
And spring, with summer in her eyes,
Making the chiefest charm of each.

A thousand vines were climbing o'er
The hedge, I thought, but as I tried
To pull them down for evermore
The flowers dropped off the other side!

Waking, I said, "These things are signs
Sent to instruct us that 'tis ours
Duly to keep and dress our vines—
Waiting in patience for the flowers."

And when the angel feared of all
Across my hearth its shadows spread,
"The rose that climbed my garden wall
Has bloomed the other side," I said.
—Alice Cary.

BODIES OF SIX VICTIMS

Recovered From the Pequabuck River by Searching Parties,

Five Men Still Remain Unaccounted For.

Survivors Differ as to Number of Men on the Ill-Fated Bridge.

BRISTOL, Conn., Feb. 8.—Thousands yesterday visited the scene of Thursday night's disaster at the New England railroad bridge over the Pequabuck river, and many complaints were made that the great crowds interfered with the work of searching for the dead bodies. Six bodies have thus far been recovered, and still a number of men are missing.

It will probably be two or three days before it is known just how many went down with the ill-fated bridge, as the wrecking train which was dispatched from Hartford early Thursday evening to hasten the work of completing the new iron bridge picked up employes of the road by threes and fours at nearly all the stations between Hartford and the scene of the wreck. Five Italians who lived at East Hartford are still unaccounted for, although several of the men who were rescued do not believe that they all went down with the wreck.

Foreman Barry, who was rescued from a mass of timbers and wreckage, is internally injured and is conscious only part of the time. The other three men injured are doing well.

Who Is to Blame?

Reports regarding the responsibility for the accident differ, and an investigation by the railroad officials is in progress. Superintendent Dewey came down from Boston yesterday, and with Division Superintendent Fennell and Coroner Taintor inspected the wrecked bridge. Trains are now running regularly.

The Italian, Ricci, whose body was recovered yesterday, lived at East Hartford in a boxcar with eight companions, all of whom are believed to have been working on both bridges. Of the eight, only three are accounted for, but there is a chance that they were saved. The bodies of the six men were sent to their homes yesterday afternoon, and will be buried Monday.

Owing to the confusion and darkness at the scene of the wreck, no two men were found who told the same story, and nearly all differed as to the number of men on the old bridge.

William Edwards, a boy about 15 years old, has been missing from his home here since Thurday night, and as he was seen about the New England railroad bridges, it is thought that possibly he was on the old bridge when it collapsed.

The New England road had considerable trouble all day, as water covered the tracks in many places. Two hundred feet of the road was washed out between Mill Plain and Sodom, and another washout between Plainville and New Britain delayed trains. Snowplows were used at many points to keep the water from extinguishing the fires. The floods in this town and vicinity caused thousands of dollars' damage. The water is now subsiding.

ON BEACON HILL.

Bills and Petitions Flowing In, Notwithstanding "Time Is Up."

BOSTON, Feb. 8.—Up to and including yesterday, 750 new matters have been introduced in the house, and about 150 more petitions without bills are in the office of the clerk, of which probably not less than 125 will be introduced in the house. It is probable that 100 more matters will be introduced under suspension of the 12th joint rule. In 1894, 1196 were introduced, and in 1895 about 1200.

The number of new matters introduced in 1894 and 1895, as given above, included matters in the senate, and the figures are given in the address of Speaker Meyer at the close of the 1895 session.

New business still continues to flow in and there is plenty more to come next week, for although last Wednesday was the limit, a great part of the stuff that was filed that day has not yet seen the light.

Among the important things sought in yesterday's bills and petitions are the abolition of bucket shops; the establishment of a traffic commissioner for the city of Boston to be appointed by the governor and to have a salary of $10,000, paid by the street railway companies; the taking away from the Boston board of aldermen all control of the Franklin fund as trustees and placing the same in the hands of the governor and mayor; the abolition of the Boston street commission; a deal of political tinkering, and many other schemes.

There was little of consequence going on in the committee rooms. The committee on liquor law had a hearing on the petition for the sale of liquor at summer resorts during the season. It is an old subject, and one which has been threshed repeatedly. The remonstrants will be heard next Friday.

The advocates of biennial elections are still pursued by Mr. Mellen. Yesterday he introduced an order requesting the committee on rules to report a rule in conformity with article 9 of the amendments to the constitution. Mr. Mellen latter explained what impelled him to take the step, saying that he contended that the general court has authority to make its own rules as to every matter but one, and that one, he declared, the constitution itself makes a parliamentary rule, and that case is found in article 9 of the amendments to the constitution, in which there is provided a formula for the general court in the matter of changing the constitution. Mr. Mellen's order was laid over until Monday, when the biennial resolves will be debated in the house and the members will have a chance to let go their eloquence.

Pounded With a Bottle.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 8.—Julia O'Neil, aged 53, was probably fatally wounded at her home at 55 Cedar street, last night, by her son John. The weapon used was a beer bottle. O'Neil returned home last night fighting drunk. What passed between him and his mother is not known. About 10:30 o'clock his sister Mary returned from a visit. In the kitchen she found her mother lying on the floor insensible, her face and person covered with blood, which had flown from several lacerated wounds on her forehead. About 11 o'clock the son returned home and was placed under arrest. He fought savagely, and was landed in station 4 hatless and coatless. In the house was found a beer bottle smeared with blood and bits of flesh. O'Neil spent the night tearing about his cell. He was too drunk to comprehend the gravity of the charge against him.

Claims Self-Defense.

BANGOR, Me., Feb. 8.—During a drunken row in the home of Valet Muchud, Old Town, last night, Charles H. Dolliff of Old Town shot and instantly killed Joseph Alberts of Caribou. Just what caused the fight is hard to say, as witnesses will say nothing about it. The murderer made no attempt to escape, and was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Lancaster. Dolliff only said when arrested: "I did it in self-defense, and will tell all about it when the proper time comes."

No Mishaps Reported.

BOSTON, Feb. 8.—Masters of incoming transatlantic liners tell thrilling tales of experiences during Thursday's gale, but all report little serious damage, due, apparently, to the fact that they had timely warnings by moderate gales for several days preceding, and low readings of the barometer. Coastwise steamer officers report passing many craft during the blow, but all seemed to be weathering it finely, no vessel in distress being reported.

Cracked a Safe.

NEWTON, Mass., Feb. 8.—At an early hour yesterday morning the local office of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company was burglarized, and $1700 in cash and checks stolen. It was one of the most daring and successful robberies ever perpetrated in this city, and the police have little or no clew to the guilty parties.

Narrow Escapes.

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 8.—It has been ascertained that all the barges in tow of the tug Scully, which broke loose during Thursday's fierce gale, are safe and that no lives were lost. The men on the barges had a fearful experience, and several times gave up all hope of ever reaching a safe anchorage.

Crooked Contractors.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 8.—The grand jury yesterday returned indictments against Messrs. Abbott, Hallwood, Townsend and Adams on account of alleged corruption as contractors in the construction of a sewer. City Civil Engineer Kinnear was also indicted in the same connection. About $42,000 had been overdrawn or improperly accounted for in this sewer work.

Convicted of Arson.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—Louis Gordon, the shirt manufacturer who was convicted of arson for setting fire to his factory at 21 Walker street, was yesterday sentenced to six years and 10 months in prison.

ATTITUDE OF ENGLAND

And What She Claims as Her Rights In the Transvaal's Relations.

Uitlanders Are Deprived of Rights by Boers.

Secretary Chamberlain Suggests Remedies For the Existing Difficulties.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—Secretary Chamberlain's dispatch to Sir Hercules Robinson, governor of Cape Colony, which was transmitted Feb. 4, was gazetted last evening, and proves rather interesting reading.

It reviews the history of events in the Transvaal since 1891, and points out that the mining interests, the mainstay of the country, are mainly in the hands of the Uitlanders, who are debarred by legislation from the rights of citizenship, and states that the whole direction of affairs and the right of taxation remain a monopoly in the hands of a decreasing minority of the population engaged in agriculture, whilst the majority, who raised the revenue from £75,000 to £2,000,000, are denied any voice in the government of the Transvaal and are unable to obtain redress for the formidable grievances hampering and injuring them incessantly.

Mr. Chamberlain emphasizes the pacific and above-board character of the Uitlander agitation, and recalls that the Uitlanders' positions were rejected by the volksraad amid scornful laughter, one member of that body challenging the Uitlanders to take up arms and fight.

The massing of the Bechuanaland police at Mafeking did not cause anxiety, as it was understood to be merely a rendezvous prior to disbanding. When it was suggested on Dec. 29 that the Chartered company's police might intervene at Johannesburg it appeared incredible; but Mr. Chamberlain wired a warning to Governor Robinson instructing him to warn Cecil Rhodes, the premier of Cape Colony, of the consequences. Unfortunately, Dr. Jameson had already entered the Transvaal.

The document then reviews the subsequent events until Governor Robinson returned to Cape Town, mentioning that President Kruger refused Governor Robinson definite assurance that reforms would be granted the Uitlanders, owing to the suspicion that there was a widespread conspiracy to overthrow the constitution—which Mr. Chamberlain did not regard as an adequate reason.

Where England Comes In.

He then proceeds to state the position of Great Britain and her claims toward the Transvaal, saying: "Since the convention of 1884 Great Britain has recognized the Transvaal as independent internally, but its external relations are subject to the control of Great Britain. There is no reason to anticipate that a foreign state will dispute our rights, but it is necessary to state clearly that the government intends to maintain them in their entirety. Internally, Great Britain is justified in the interests of South Africa as a whole, and for the peace and stability of the Transvaal, to tender friendly counsels regarding the newcomers, mainly British subjects."

The dispatch then deals at length with the grievances of the Rand, and expresses Mr. Chamberlain's belief that difficulty of naturalization and the franchise could be met by granting the franchise after five years' residence and the removal of the objectionable features of the oath of allegiance, which still would effectually deprive the person of his status as a British subject.

Mr. Chamberlain then suggests the consideration of the other grievances, taxation, education and monopolies, and especially the exclusion of Uitlanders from the police, and proposes that the Rand be accorded modified local autonomy, including control of its own taxation, subject to the payment to the government of annum, sliding tribute, based on the fluctuations of the mining industry, such legislation to be subject to the veto of the president and executive.

Mr. Chamberlain further suggests that the Rand also be given a superior law court, and that the Randers be not entitled to a voice in the volksraad executive or in the president's election, thus relieving the burghers of their haunting fear that the newcomers would utilize the franchise to upset their form of government.

The dispatch concludes: "These suggestions are not offered in degradation of the president's authority, but as a sincere and friendly contribution of her majesty's government to the settlement of a question which continues to threaten the quietude of the republic and the welfare and progress of South Africa."

As the settlement involves so many details which are easier settled by a personal conference, Mr. Chamberlain suggests to President Kruger that, if it is convenient and agreeable to him, he should come to England.

A Marvel of Science.

MONTREAL, Feb. 8.—The experiments with cathode photography, applied to surgery, are being carried on at McGill university with great success. Professor Cox experimented yesterday on a patient of Dr. Cunning, who had been shot in the left leg about Christmas. The bullet could not be located, and the man suffered intense pain. The wound had closed up. The leg was photographed, and though it took 45 minutes, the bullet was found.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 8. — Minister Terrell has arranged to nominate Miss Clara Barton and her colleagues to distribute the relief fund in her possession to the Armenians in accordance with the sultan's agreement, which, however, precludes any Armenians or newspaper correspondents from the nomination.

WESTLAND DISCHARGED.

Judge Humphrey Refused to Hold Him for the Grand Jury.

The long drawn out case of Clan McGregor against William Westland, for embezzlement, was disposed of this morning by the defendant being discharged, for want of probable cause.

When the case was called Mr. McAnarney, counsel for the defence, argued that the complaint was defective, as the complaint was not set forth according to law.

Mr. Shultz, counsel for the government, contended that it was simply for the lower court to decide probable cause and that there had been an embezzlement of fifty cents proven.

The court said that he must be reasonably satisfied that the offence had been committed, and what has been proved does not come within the scope that the grand jury could receive.

The form was not correct, as the date was not alleged, and under the statue it must be within six months. There was no prima facia evidence that there had been an embezzlement during any period of six months during which Westland was treasurer, and to change the form of complaint would not change the matter any, as it would be necessary to start anew, which considering the many continuances he did not think would amount to anything.

Killed on Railroad.

Benjamin A. Brooks a blacksmith residing at 36 School street, was instantly killed by the cars at South Quincy last night by the outward train due in Quincy at 10.40.

It seems that Brooks was laying on the inward track just north of the freight depot, and as the train approached, the engineer saw him and whistled. This evidently aroused him, for he got onto his feet, only to fall over onto the outward track and before the engineer of the outward train could stop his train, the cars had passed over him, cutting him in half and killing him instantly.

The unfortunate man was a blacksmith by trade, but had been unemployed for some weeks past. He was a son of John Brook formerly of Braintree.

It is supposed that he came from Boston on one of the earlier trains and started up the track toward his home, but laid down in a dangerous place. He was about 34 years of age and unmarried.

15 Truants Cost $234.25.

Aaron R. Morse, superintendent of the Norfolk, Bristol and Plymouth Union Truant School at Walpole, has filed his last quarterly report. At the present time there are 47 truants at the school, and their board bill for the quarter amounted to $827.96, of which sum Bristol county pays $522.64, Norfolk county $234.25, and Plymouth county $71.07. Bristol county had 30 truants, 17 of whom are credited to New Bedford, 10 to Fall River, 2 to Fair Haven and 1 to North Attleboro. Norfolk county has 15 truants, of which number Brooklyne furnishes 5, Weymouth 2 and Quincy, Norwood, Holbrook, Stoughton and Cohasset 1 each. Plymouth county has 5 truants, 4 of whom hail from Brockton and 1 from Abington. — Whitman Times.

PRIZE SPEAKING.

Miss Mary M. Joss, '97, Wins the First Honors.

Four of Seven Prizes Awarded to the Class of '97.

Forty Dollars in Prizes Also Given for Essays and Translations.

Eight hundred or more friends of the Quincy High school and of its pupils assembled in the large study hall of the new building last evening, to be entertained with some very creditable declamations.

It was the fourth annual prize speaking contest of the pupils of the school for $75 in books offered in seven prizes by Wendell G. Corthell, Esq.

The past success of these contests was fully maintained, both in proficiency of elocution and financially. The net proceeds of the first three were $155 24, and the "Prize Speaking Fund," now on deposit in the Quincy Savings Bank will probably be increased to $225.

The programme in full follows, the order of speaking having been assigned by lot. It will be seen that the class of '96 had three representatives, the class of '97, seven; class of '98, three, and the class of 99, three.

The programme was as follows:

1. Music—"Praise ye the Father," Gounod
   By the School.
2. "A Legend of Bregenz," A. A. Proctor
   Bertha F. Hayden, '97.
3. "Toussaint L'Ouverture," Wendell Phillips
   Mary M. Joss, '97.
4. Selection from "Evangeline," Longfellow
   Beatrice H. Rothwell, '96.
5. "The Bell of Zanora," N. R. Rose
   Nettie Sweeney, '96.
6. How Cushing Destroyed the Albemarle," Anon.
   Gertrude Walker, '97.
7. The Destruction or Pompeii," Bulwer Lytton
   Raymond P. Delano, '98.
8. Music—(a) "Wanderer's Farewell," Arranged by Irving Emerson
   (b) "Yachting Glee," Wm. Culbertson
   By the School.
   Assisted by Mr. Kolb, '99, and Mr. Mitchell, '99.
9. "The Rescue," W. H. H. Murray
   Fannie E. Beckwith, '98.
10. "Description of Webster's Speech in Reply to Hayne," C. W. March
    Donald MacKenzie, '97.
11. "Plea for the Old South Church," Wendell Phillips
    Edward C. Hewitson, '98.
12. Selection from "No Thoroughfare," Charles Dickens
    Maude Cummings, '96
13. "The Ride of Great-Grandmother Lee," E. B. Rexford
    Elsa Scharnagel, '97.
14. Music—Trio, "Meadow Song," J. Wiegand
    Miss Burke, '97, Miss White, '97, and Miss Bates, '98.
15. "The Last Speech," Robert Emmet
    Curtis Nichols, '97.
16. "Herve Riel," Robert Browning
    Rachel E. Johnssn, '97.
17. "The Man Who Rode to Conemaugh," J. E. Bowen
    Ethel E. Douglas, '99.
18. "All's Well," Celia Thaxter
    Norma C. Lowe, '99.
19. Music—"On Dancing Waves," J. Wiegand
    Mr. B. Fitzgerald, piano,
    Mr. J. Fitzgerald, First Violin,
    Mr. E. Marnock, Second Violin.
20. Award of Prizes.
21. Music—"The Miller," G. A. MacFarren
    By the School.

A word first for the music. As one lady remarked: "When the boys sing it is always good. Well the boys did sing and it was good, strong in chorus and in parts and in excellent time. It was under the direction of Mrs. L. C. Smith, the efficient director of music in our public school. The accompanists were Miss Helen E. Bemis, '97; and Miss Edith Chapman, '97. The vocal trio, and the instrumental number interspersed were pleasing variations from the speaking.

Comments on the individual efforts of the contestants is hardly necessary, as the judges in their awards decide upon the merits. Little if any exception will be taken to the award of the first prize, however, it may be with the others. Miss Joss rendition of that old prize winner—"Toussaint L'Ouverture" has had few superior. It was very close to 100 per cent. in sympathy, distinction, pronunciation and gesture.

The Prize Winners.

The judges of the declamations were Mayor Adams, Mrs. C. Theodore Hardwick and James F. Harlow, Esq. They retired at the close of No. 18 on the programme but it was half an hour later before they were ready to report. At their request, Mr. Frederic Allison Tupper, the head master, announced the awards as follows:

First prize, $20 worth of books,—Miss Mary M. Joss, '97.

Second prize, $15 worth of books,—Curtis Nichols, '97.

Third prize, $10 worth of books,—Miss Maude Cummings, '96.

Seventh prize, $5 in books,—Donald Mackenzie, '97.

While waiting for the decision of the judges of declamation, Mrs. Albert F. Schenkelberger, for the judges of essays and translations, awarded in her pleasing manner the prizes offered by Joseph M. Sheahan, M. D. The prizes for essays were $5 in books in each class, and for translations, $4 each. The successful ones were:

Rogers was thrown violently to the ground. He was taken up unconscious and carried to the police station and later to the City Hospital. Inquiry at the hospital this noon found him doing as well as could be expected, and it was thought his injuries were little more than a general shaking up.

The Proper Time

When the most benefit is to be derived from a good medicine, is early in the year. This is the season when the tired body, weakened organs and nervous system yearn for a building-up medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla. Many wait for the open spring weather, and, in fact, delay giving attention to their physical condition so long that a long siege of sickness is inevitable. To rid the system of the impurities accumulated during the winter season, to purify the blood and to invigorate the whole system, there is nothing equal to Hood's Sarsaparilla. Don't put it off, but take Hood's Sarsaparilla now. It will do you good. Read the testimonials published in behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla, all from reliable, grateful people. They tell the story.

THE ROENTGEN PROCESS

Capable of Performing Wonders Bordering on the Miraculous.

BERLIN, Feb. 8.—It seems as if nearly every other word heard in public and read in the press just now is "Roentgen." A central laboratory is just now forming in Frankfort for the purpose of propagating Professor Roentgen's discovery on an extensive scale.

PROFESSOR ROENTGEN.

Here are some of the latest results of experiments with the new contrivance: It is now made possible to photograph both sides of a medal simultaneously, and to locate needles in and the degeneration of bones and joints.

It no longer requires a connoisseur to detect a false diamond. The Roentgen process can show beyond dispute the difference between all genuine precious stones and imitations. This includes pearls, which are the easiest of all to imitate.

Most astounding of all is the fact that by the new discovery even the muscular development of live serpents may be minutely traced. The time of exposure ranges from three to five minutes.

Blaming Each Other.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 8.—Scott Jackson and Alonzo Walling, the suspects in the Pearl Bryan murder case, who were roommates while attending the Ohio dental college, are confessing against each other. They were examined separately and together. When they are face to face with their separate confessions, they call each other liars and exhibit murderous feelings. The lawyers did not see their clients until last night, when a stop was put to confessions or interviews. Jackson says: "Walling once told me that at one time he seduced May Smith. He said he had performed an abortion on her, and it had been successful, and that the Smith girl went to Louisville and the thing was hushed up. When Wood told me his trouble with Pearl Bryan, I suggested Walling. Walling said he would perform the abortion on Miss Bryan. Now I cannot tell you the rest."

Catron Bill Signed.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—The Catron bill, to prevent prize fighting in the District of Columbia and territories, was signed by the president yesterday afternoon. The bill did not reach the White House until after 4 o'clock, and the usual routine was departed from and the measure taken at once to Mr. Cleveland, who, after examining its provisions, promptly attached his signature, so that from the date of signature prize fighting is a felony on all soil over which the federal government has exclusive jurisdiction. Prompt measures will be taken to see that it is not violated.

Death of William English.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 8. — William H. English died at his rooms in the Hotel English yesterday at 12:35 p. m. Mr. English had been sick with la grippe for three weeks. Several days ago rheumatism set in, and the heart action became bad. For the past three days the patient had lapses of unconsciousness, and since Thursday night he was able only at long intervals to recognize those about his bedside. The interment will occur tomorrow afternoon.

Given Up For Lost.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 8.—The British steame Laurestina, Captain Gavin, which sailed from this port Dec. 6 for Sligo, Ire., has been officially posted at Lloyds as missing. Nothing has been heard from the vessel or her crew since she left the Capes two months ago. The Laurestina had 20 or 25 men in her crew. Her cargo consisted of 100,000 bushels of corn, valued at $34,000. The vessel was owned by Robinson & Sons of North Shields, Eng.

After Ducks.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—President Cleveland left the city at midnight last night on the lighthouse tender Maple for Quantico for a day's ducking. He was accompanied by E. C. Benedict. The trip was to have been kept a secret, and was only known to a few. The party are expected back tonight. Mrs. Cleveland gave a box party at the Lafayette Square theater, and the president awaited her return before leaving.

Rhodes Vindicated.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—The Times says: We are enabled to make the important announcement that arrangements concerning the affairs of the Chartered South African company have been provisionally settled. Cecil Rhodes will return at once and take up his residence in Rhodesia Further details of the settlement are unobtainable at present.

Father to Blame.

HERRICK, Ia., Feb. 8.—Joe Merrifield, the 12-year-old of Frank Merrifield, shot his 7-year-old brother with a rifle yesterday and then killed himself, blowing the entire top of his head away. The father had neglected the family until they were almost starved.

Murphy Coming Back.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 8.—Governor Budd issued a warrant yesterday on a requisition from Governor Greenhalge of Massachusetts for the arrest of Clarence Murphy, the Salem Savings bank embezzler, who was recently captured in this city.

Illusions Dispelled.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 8.—The press censor has instructed the newspapers not to publish anything tending to encourage the illusion that the government is meditating reforms of a liberal character in its administrative regime.

Progress In China.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 8.—The Chinese government has signed a contract with Colonel Jefferds, representing an Anglo-American syndicate, for the construction of a railroad from Hankow to Pekin.

Tomorrow at the Calvary Baptist church there is to be a special and rare day of religious services. There will be preaching morning, afternoon and evening by Rev. B. W. Ward of Boston. No one who can hear him tomorrow should fail to do so. A cordial welcome to all who can come.

A writer from San Francisco, Cal., says: "Mrs. Joseph Walker of 428-7th street who has just returned from an extended pleasure trip through the Eastern States, was tendered a very jolly surprise party at her residence on Friday evening, Jan. 24th, by the club of forty, composed of married ladies, of which she is past president. The evening was spent in singing, recitations and dancing. Music was furnished by Carter's orchestra, which was stationed in the hall. At midnight a bountious supper was served in the spacious dining room in French courses by Lundy, in the course of which Mrs. Pratt on behalf of the club presented Mrs. Walker with a beautiful piano lamp. After supper dancing was resumed until the small hours of the morning, when the band played "Home Sweet Home," and the guests departed each declaring they had spent a very enjoyable evening. The present president of the society is Mrs. C. Pratt, who has relatives in Quincy."

A PUBLIC PROTEST.

Donald Mackenzie Dissatisfied with Awards at Prize Speaking.

The following communications have been received and are published by request:

To the Editors of the Ledger:

I take the earliest opportunity to enter a protest, in behalf of one of the speakers in last night's High School prize speaking contest. There is such a palpable miscarriage of justice, that I think it is the duty of parents whose children have been unfairly dealt with, to insist on a re-hearing, before competent adjudicators. As guardian of Donald MacKenzie, I give notice that he will not accept the prize awarded to him in the speaking contest. If I fail in obtaining justice, I may, as a public protest, withdraw my son from further attendance at the Quincy High school. DONALD MACKENZIE.

13 Robertson Street, West Quincy.

DEAR MR EDITOR:—As I have recently taught in Quincy, I take an interest in her schools. I have taken elocution lessons under one of the best masters and claim to have some knowledge of declamation. I am bound to say that last night's awards in the Quincy High school prize speaking was manifestly unjust. In the interest of public teaching there should be a re-hearing of the contest before unbiased, competent judges. ANNIE MACKENZIE.

DR. DAVIS AND ANTI-TOXIN.

In your issue of the 29th ult., there appeared the following sub editorial,—"Another death from diphtheria among the patients of our only physician who refuses to use anti-toxin, should seem to justify the Board of Health in taking summary measures. The public are becoming indignant over the the loss of some charming young children."

Perhaps you are aware that the above article is likely to seriously impair the professional reputation of Dr. Davis; that it charges him with criminal negligence, and gross ignorance, because he refused to adopt a course of treatment which he believes would be harmful to his patients, and accept the "fad" that is endorsed by your Board of Health.

My dear sir, The art of healing is based upon law, and not upon fads, and Dr. Davis would have been derelict in his duties toward those entrusted to his care had he abandoned the methods which his experience and conviction prescribed.

You seem to think the "Board of Health would be justified" in taking summary measures, if Dr. Davis persists in his refusal to use Anti-toxin. By what right, moral or legal, has the Board of Health to forcibly enter the sanctity of one's home and to dictate the methods of treatment to be employed? Is it, or is it not, true, that we are living "in the land of the free?" Is the Board of Health, even, without respect to qualification or education in such matters, to constitute a kind of medical paternalism on the supposition that the citizens of Quincy are incapable of selecting their own physicians?

Dr. Davis' experience during the present epidemic has been a peculiarly sad one—but it is one likely to happen to any physician. Epidemics vary greatly in their severity, and one physician may be so unfortunate as to have several malignant cases, while his more fortunate neighbors escape. This has been the experience of some of the ablest physicians in the country. The cases I saw with Dr. Davis were malignant—he very cases in which the advocates of anti-toxin say it is useless—and with him I encountered the first death from diphtheria I have had in 15 years, either in private or consultation practice.

You make the unwarrantable assertion that "the leading physicians of the country are universally in favor of the remedy" anti-toxin, and your honorable Board of Health "will figure conspicuously in the annals of history," for their sagacity in settling off-hand the question which has puzzled the medical world, by saying, "that the best of results may be expected to follow, provided the remedy is used in the early stages of the disease."

I beg to submit some medical excerpts, from which you can draw your own inferences as to this much vaunted specific:

The Medical Press and Circular says: "It was first alleged that if the serum (anti-toxin) was employed sufficiently early, say the second day. The disease would be checked and the child saved. Koerte tells us he killed all his cases by his early treatment."

Dr. Woodward of Tunkhannock, Pa. mentions the sad death of a boy, who, while suffering from a slight sore throat was given anti-toxin. It produced enormous swelling of the throat and death occurred in 24 hours from strangulation.

Dr. Bleyen of Brooklyn, reports several sudden deaths, after injections of anti-toxin.

Dr. Hanseman, assistant to Prof. Virchou says: "The curative properties of anti-toxin are not established, and children have contracted diphtheria after the operation." He cited several cases in which children treated with anti-toxin at the commencement of the decease died. In speaking of statistics he declares that "much more favorable results were obtained before the use of anti-toxin."

In a recent number of the Medical Brief I find the following: "The universal verdict concerning anti-toxin seems to be that the treatment is worse than the disease. Serious after-effects are being reported from Berlin, Frankfort, New York and elsewhere."

Drs. Maizard & Bouchard, two former warm advocates of anti-toxin in diphtheria report the death of a six year old child due to the injection of anti-toxin.—The Bulletin Medical.

Bertha M. Valentine, 17 years old, and daughter of Samuel Valentine of Williamsburg, N. Y., died on Friday, March 29, 1895, ten minutes after she received an injection of anti-toxin. The death was reported to Coroner Creamer, by Dr. J. M. Clayland as caused by anti-toxin.—A. Jour. Health Loc.

A physician injected anti-toxin into a healthy young infant as a prophylactic (preventive) The child was feverish and fretful but with no throat trouble, and he died in 48 hours.—Dr. Thomas H. Manley, 115 W. 49th street, N. Y.

"The total deaths from diphtheria in St. Louis during August, 1895, was thirty-six. During the same month of 1894 there were sixteen."—Amer. Med. Jour.

"On every side come up reports of deaths under anti-toxin, where recovery was reasonably expected. And in no small number of instances death has taken place with such astonishing suddenness after an injection of anti-toxin, that there can be no doubt of the poisoned serum having been the direct cause."—William H. Cook, A. M. M. D., Chicago, in Medical Brief.

Dr. G. Variot, a medical man of European renown, and the visiting physician to one of the hospitals of Paris, says: It is strange, if this article (anti-toxin) is really anti-toxin that it ceases to be of use in the very cases where it is most needed."

Dr. Furst in Berliner Klink for March, speaks emphatically, upon the injurious effects of anti-toxin and says: "The draw-backs to its employment are its uselessness in diphtheria of the bronchi, or croupous diphtheria, and in the secondary septic infections which constitute the chief danger of diphtheria and also in its unfortunate after effects, such as purpura, albuminuria, halmonhayic nephritis and other evidences of systematic poisoning. Similar observations have been made by many physicians.

"In Germany the profession is divided as to its merits. The more scientific element claiming that it is not only therapentically inert but actively injurious"—Med. Brief.

And again the same authority states: "It has not been conclusively shown in a single instance that recovery could be attributed to its use. Many physicians when questioned, acknowledged that they had not sufficient courage to depend solely upon the serum, but have used it in conjunction with other old tried remedies."—A correspondent of the New York Medical Record, says of the treatment in the London Hospitals — "The physician in charge at one of the largest of the seven hospitals devoted exclusively to infectious diseases, said, that in common with the other institutions—save one that is neutral—the anti-toxin is now regarded as a complete failure and on the whole rather harmful to patients

"In the Montreal City Hospital anti-toxin has been discarded owing to bad results." — Med. Brief. "At a recent meeting of the Medical society of Vienna, Prof. Drasche presented a most unfavorable report as to the effects of anti-toxin in thirty cases, he had had under his observation. He found that the injections of anti-toxin effected the kidneys, and this observation was corroborated by those of other doctors. In the presence of that fact it could no longer be believed that the injection had no injurious effects." London Medical Times, Feb. 16, 1895.

Past Assistant Surgeon F. J. B. Cordeiro, U. S. N., in a report to the Surgeon General of the Navy, concludes that proof is lacking of the value of anti-toxin in the treatment of diphtheria, and adopts the opinion of Kassowitz—which I will not quote for want of space.

Dr. Mendel in Berliner Klin. No Chanscher believes the serum has a destructive effect upon the red blood corpuscles—if necessary I could give many pages on the subject in the same direction.

In conclusion let me say that the attack upon Dr. Davis, a most conscientious and skilful physician, was all the more cruel because one of those "charming young children" was his only child.

Do you not think, that in the hour of bitter grief, he would have gladly employed any remedy, that offered reasonable hope, to save his beloved boy? Could he have done more for the other precious lives he was unable to save? It is during such ordeals that methods of treatment must be based upon principles, ingrained as rational truths.

Dr. Davis' heart is heavy, from the loss of his loved one, but his sorrow is made the keener, by these terrible accusations, which are unjust and untrue. However, the "truth will prevail," and ere long this latest therapautic fad will be relegated to the tomb where lie its kindred delusions, Brown-Sequard's Elixir of Life and Koch's consumption cure.

I have the honor to be, Dear Sir,
Yours very truly,
RUFUS L. THURSTON, M. D.

The Hamilton, Commonwealth avenue and Clarendon street.
Boston, Feb. 5, 1896.

P. S.—Perhaps it is unnecessary for me to say, that the absurd rumor in Quincy, that Mrs. Davis received anti-toxin during her illness, is absolutely untrue.

Keith's New Theatre, Boston.

Hewelt's Marionettes will provide a fund of amusement for the young folks who attend the matinees at Keith's next week. It is the most ingenious contrivance yet invented in that line, a perfect minature theatre. Lillie Western, the most accomplished lady instrumentalist in the world, is to appear, and perform on a dozen different articles.

Milton Aborn's Operetta company will produce a "pocket edition" of "The Mikado," which will mean the best solos, duets and quartet selections from the favorite Gilbert and Sullivan opera, with the choruses left out. Another of Mr. Keith's imported European novelties will be seen for the first time in this country. It is a daring trapeze act by three women and a man above the heads of the audience. The balance of the programme will consist of the usual list of high class attractions.

Gail Hamilton for War.

That famous political writer, Gail Hamilton has recovered sufficiently from her recent illness as to be able to write her first article on public matters since the day she was stricken almost to death in the Blaine mansion at Washington. That article she has sent to the Boston Journal, to be used in their next Sunday issue. It is reported that the article is full of fire and snap, in Gail Hamilton's familiar vigorous style, and that it urges the country to extreme radical measures with England. If so, it will certainly attract widest attention, for the writer is one of the sharpest and most alert in the country.

—A man is a great bundle of tools. He is born into this life without the knowledge of how to use them. Education is the process of learning their use, and dangers

—There is some complaint at Nantasket beach of Boston refuse and garbage being washed in from the sea. We opine, from what we have seen, there is full as much refuse carried down in the summer, by the excursion boats and trains.—Mansfield News.

The Social Realm.

The past week has been a busy one socially. Monday evening the Nonpareil Social club had an entertainment at West Quincy. Tuesday evening Mr. and Mrs. E. Frank Mitchell gave a card party and the Steadfast Ten King's Daughters had an art exhibition at Mr. Wendell G. Corthell's Wollaston, on Tuesday and Wednesday evening. On Wednesday evening there was also a leap year dance at West Quincy, a leap year dance by the Violet club at Atlantic, a dance by the Universalist Choral society at Faxon hall and an organ recital at Christ's church. Thursday evening was so stormy entertainments were put off. Friday evening was the prize speaking contest of the Quincy High school, the annual reunion of the Milton High school at Milton and a dancing school at Norfolk Downs. Thayer Academy gives a play at Long's hall this evening. Mrs. Charles L. Coe and Mrs. C. R. Safford of Atlantic have had card parties, so take it all in all Quincy has been pretty lively.

Easy

To buy, easy to take and easy in effect, are characteristics peculiar to Hood's Pills. They are small, tasteless, and purely vegetable. They act gently but thoroughly and satisfactorily. They do not irritate or inflame the intestines, but leave them in natural, healthy condition. 25 cents.

Thayer Academy.

We have received with much pleasure this week the nineteenth annual catalogue of the Thayer Academy through the courtesy of its scholarly and honored head, J. B. Sewall, A. M. A comparison of its pages with the preceding catalogue of '94-'95, shows the personnel of masters and instructors to be the same except the change in the musical instructor. The present number of pupils is 93, last year it was 75, showing a gain of eighteen pupils. This increase was made by the entering class last fall. This class numbers 34, just twice as many as the year before. Some space in the catalogue is given to the presentation of departments and methods of instruction. The cut of the laboratory and gymnasium building shows every good point in its exterior. This building has all the up to date appliances, is under trained supervision and justly takes high rank with others of its kind.

Braintree, Randolph, Holbrook and Quincy may well felicitate themelves upon the golden inheritance which is their children's, the opportunity to gain a virtuous and noble education amid surroundings so beautiful and charming.

1,557 Bottles in Three Days.

The sales of True's Pin Worm Elixir, manufactured by Dr. J. F. True & Co., Auburn, Me., for the first three days of 1896 amounted to 1,557 bottles. The manufacture of this old, standard family remedy was begun nearly a half century ago and the demand for it has steadily increased until in 1895 there were sold nearly 40,000 bottles. These figures speak volumes for the efficacy of the Elixir in curing the diseases of children, and of the faith that the mothers of America have in it.

The Indian medicine man cures by charms and incantations. He frightens away the "evil spirit" who causes the sickness. He does all sorts of things that civilized people would call idiotic and barbaric, but the civilized folks are not so very much ahead after all. They do just as foolish things as does the medicine man. They go along carelessly, and allow the little sickness to grow into the big sickness. They allow constipation to grow into indigestion, heartburn, dizziness, headache, insomnia, and a hundred other distressing conditions. They do this frequently because they do not know the cause of their trouble. It is a pretty safe rule to look for the source of 9-10ths of human sickness in this one simple and appallingly prevalent trouble. Another foolish thing that smart people do is to take some alleged remedy for constipation and keep on taking it, day after day, month after month and year after year. Perhaps it is better to take the medicine than not to take it at all, but of course if they stop taking it, their trouble will come back. This last statement is true of every other medicine prepared for this purpose except Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. One "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, and two a mild catharic. They are gentle and efficient in their action, permanent in their results. You don't become a slave to their use, as with other pills.

A VALENTINE PARTY.

Some Novel Ideas That Will Prove Entertaining.

If you are going to have a valentine party, here are a few hints which may enliven the evening: You can go in for decorations as deeply as you choose and find plenty of appropriate symbols that will suggest the sentiment of the holiday. A flying Cupid with bandaged eyes may be suspended from the chandelier.

Roses of deep red, love's own color, may be distributed around as freely as you choose or as your purse will allow. Drape the mantel with smilax, caught up with red ribbons tied in true lovers' knots. Pasteboard hearts pierced by gilt arrows can be bought or manufactured at home, and form most attractive decorations. A pair or two of turtle doves should not be forgotten, for they add much to the general effect.

In pairing off your guests for the evening you can manage to have a lot of fun. One method which is sure to put every one in good humor and break down all the barriers of formality is as follows:

Hang a sheet in a doorway between two rooms. With charcoal or ink draw a grotesque face on one side and cut holes for eyes. Let the ladies go into the room behind the curtain while the gentlemen remain in the other. Then let the ladies each stand behind the face on the curtain and look through the apertures. The men are then allowed each a chance of guessing who is the owner of the eyes which are peering through at them. The guessers whisper the name to the unknown fair one, and if it is right, she retires and he has found his partner for the game of hearts which follows. If not, the lady winks saucily, and he must try his luck another time. Underneath the face you may write something like this:

I'm looking at you, love,
With eyes that are true, love.
If you guess these eyes are mine,
I will be your Valentine.

Another novel way of mating your guests is to get as many card valentines as you have guests. Have them in duplicate pairs, and put each in an envelope, one of a pair in an envelope for a gentleman, the other in one for a lady. As the guests arrive hand each an envelope and let them find the person who has the duplicate.

The Valentine Kiss.

In many parts of England and Scotland it is still customary, as it has been for many centuries, for young men and women to regard their valentine the first person of the opposite sex whom their eyes behold on the morning of St. Valentine's day, and they have the right to claim the said valentine with a kiss which he or she is in honor bound to accord without resistance or remonstrance of any kind.

Bids Above Morgan Syndicate Reached $66,788,650.

Leaves a Third of the Whole Issue For Morgan and His Associates.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—Yesterday's New York World contained a cartoon representing J. P. Morgan looking through the envelope containing the Stewart combine bid by the aid of the newly-discovered photography. This is typical of the insinuations of unfairness on the part of treasury officers in handling the bids, now going the rounds of the press.

While unwilling to dignify by denial the absurd charges, Secretary Carlisle authorizes that the fullest publicity be given the proceedings. It became evident last week at the rate that the indorsed packages were coming in that some advance preparations would be necessary to prevent a clog at the last moment, and so a committee of three were chosen—Eckels, Morgan and Huntington—who, with three fully trusted assistants, began, Monday morning, the opening and recording of the bids.

Up to Tuesday night these six men had balloted 3500 bids, but Wednesday morning's mail was of such proportions that a half-dozen more trusted helpers were taken into the secret chamber. No one of the men, including the original committee, left the room, after entering it Wednesday morning, until the bids were made public, and it was at this time that all the big bids came in. The Morgan bid and the Stewart bid came between 11 o'clock and noon, and, almost simultaneously, the Morgan bid was brought to the treasury by a clerk of Harvey Fisk & Sons.

An incident which occurred during the reading of the bids throws some further light upon the alleged inside knowledge: The Stewart bid was 110.075. This cipher, Mr. Eckles, in reading, overlooked, and for a long time read off every such bid as 110.75, which put it ahead of the Morgan bid of 110.68. Representatives of the Morgan syndicate were plainly upset by this, and took a new interest in things when the correction was made. Secretary Carlisle's first knowledge of the Morgan bid, or even that one had been made, was the applause he heard from the next room when the hundred-million offer was read.

The practice of opening bids in advance is not new. In one of the former popular loans bids were tabulated as soon as received, and Secretary Carlisle went to New York to confer with bankers on the Monday before the Thursday upon which the bids were to be opened. He had discovered by this advance opening that only $2,000,000 of the $50,000,000 called for had been subscribed, and timely warning saved the loan from failing.

The method of opening the present bond issue was perfectly square, and criticism of it is the only safety-valve in sight for the pent-up hostility of those disarmed by the handsome success of the loan.

The Morgan Syndicate Share.

Late yesterday afternoon the treasury officials completed the computation of the bids received for the new bond issue, from which it appears that the amount of the bids above that of J. P. Morgan and his associates ($110.6877) was $66,788,650, and that the amount which will be awarded to the syndicate, therefore, will be $33,211,350, or, approximately, one-third of the whole issue.

The number of successful bidders is 781. In arriving at this conclusion, the officials have thrown out a very few bids, obviously fictitious, and a larger number which were irregular in important particulars. Some of those bore no signature, and others did not contain the amount intended to be bid for, while still others omitted the rate.

These last, however, are not supposed to aggregate any considerable sum. The fact that two-thirds of the entire issue are found to have been at rates ranging above $110.6877 is something of a surprise to all who heard the bids announced, but there is no question of the accuracy of the statement, as all of the bids have again been gone over and all errors made in the hurry of the day of the opening have been corrected.

It is the intention of the officials to have the revised list of successful bidders ready for publication this afternoon, and at the same time it is hoped to have ready for mailing all of the letters of acceptances of bids. It is also expected that the amounts bid for at the several rates will be ready to announce.

In Congress.

The appropriations committee of the senate have demonstrated their ability to resist the movement which the younger and newer element of the senate have sought to inaugurate. The committee are one of the powers of the senate, shaping all appropriation bills save one. The proposed change drafted by Mr. Dubois contemplated distributing the large appropriation bills to 11 special committees. The debate has lasted several days, and it was considered certain that the reform would prevail.

The first test came yesterday, and Mr. Allison, chairman of the committee, succeeded in having the reform resolution sent to the committee on rules until next December. The reference was without instructions, and was accepted as a victory for the appropriation committee and the conservative element of the senate.

Mr. Frye (Me.) was chosen by unanimous vote as president pro tem of the senate. It brought out a pleasant exchange of compliments from Republicans, Democrats and Populists. Mr. Frye was sworn in and acted as presiding officer during the day, the vice president being absent. Mr. Blanchard (La.) took occasion during the day to severely arraign Comptroller Bowler for declining to pay sugar bounties and Secretary Morton for not purchasing and distributing seeds.

W. A. Shaw of Washington state is to be secretary of the senate and Hugh L. Grant of North Carolina is to be its sergeant-at-arms. The Republican senators got together in caucus yesterday afternoon and voted on these nominations after a spirited contest and some ardent speeches.

The interest in the debate on free coinage substitute for the bond bill in the house was completely overshadowed by an attempt by Mr. Barrett (Rep., Mass.), who created the first sensation of the house this session by offering a resolution to impeach Ambassador Bayard, to secure the passage of a resolution to censure Mr. Talbert (Dem., S. C.) for "treasonable and seditious utterances," in violation of his oath of allegiance as a member of congress. The proceedings grew out of a question of a personal privilege to which Mr. Talbert arose in connection with newspaper reports of a tilt that occurred between him and Mr. Pearson (Rep., N. C.).

The secretary of the treasury has transmitted to the house of representatives a communication from the commissioner of education submitting an estimate of an appropriation of $45,000 to buy reindeer for Alaska.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Points to a General Increase In Business All Along the Line.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: The wonderful success of the popular loan alters the face of events. January operations become ancient history, as the nation mounts above all doubts and fears to a solid certainty that the people can and will uphold their government. With $568,000,000 bid by 4000 banks or persons, the tremendous strength of the national credit is demonstrated as it has not been before for many years.

The influence of this event upon all manufacturing and all trade cannot be lightly estimated. It notifies foreign nations that the United States has power as well as purposes. It unlocks millions of gold which have been gathered in preparation, brings directly several millions of gold from Europe, and stimulates the anxiety of foreign investors to obtain American securities. With such a revolution in business suddenly effected, the customary records of the past week and month are of less value than usual.

Speculation in wheat has again lifted prices, although western receipts have been 2,800,907 bushels for the week, against 792,971 bushels last year.

Sales of wool have been 4,564,200 pounds, against 5,195,150 last year, and 6,656,715 in 1893, and with reported reduction in clay worsteds and mixtures. The orders for other woolen goods are still unusually delayed.

The cotton mills continue generally active, though talk of decreasing production still continues; print cloths do not rise above 2¾ cents, and some goods tend lower.

Cotton is practically unchanged, receipts continuing to accord with a yield of about 7,000,000 bales for 1895.

Failures for the week have been 323 in the United States, against 281 last year, and 63 in Canada, against 58 last year.

Killed His Children.

WEST CHESTER, Pa., Feb. 8.—The jury in the case of Thomas Elvin of Phœnixville brought in a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree. Elvin killed two of his children on Nov. 15 last by placing arsenic in their coffee. He also drank some of the deadly liquid, and afterward cut his throat, but he did not succeed in killing himself. The murderer's wife had run away from home with another man and this made Elvin despondent. During the trial the woman was an apparently unconcerned spectator of the proceedings.

Killed Daughter's Seducer.

BOONE, Ia., Feb. 8.—Last month Stanhope Royster shot and killed Banker McFarland, for seducing his daughter. A week later the girl killed herself in Omaha. Yesterday Royster was acquitted of the murder, after a week's trial. The jury were out but five minutes. When the verdict was announced men and women arose to their feet and cheered at the top of their voices.

Seven Men on the Florida Went to the Bottom.

Three Sailors on the Alianca Met With a Similar Fate.

SALISBURY BEACH, Mass., Feb. 10.—Yesterday was a day long to be remembered along this stretch of shore, so full of dangers and perils to mariners, and so fearfully memorable for loss of life and the engulfing of vessels.

Early yesterday morning a heavy snowstorm, driven in fierce blasts by an angry northeaster, set in and continued all day long. Such a day as is wont to be greeted by the hardy fishermen with ominous forebodings as to the fate of vessels whose way of destination might bring them near this "graveyard of sailors and their barks."

The heavy wind stirred up a fearful sea. It grew in force and the waves gathered in height until the breakers came rolling and thundering in on shore in great mountain masses of water.

It was shortly after 3 o'clock when reports spread along the beach that the wind and sea had at last seized a prey—a big three-masted schooner—which, after repeated attempts to keep off, had at last been forced ashore.

She had grounded about a mile off the beach, side on, and was, when discovered, at the mercy of both wind and waves. The vessel was made out to be the schooner Florida, coal laden, and bound for Newburyport.

The Plum island life-saving crew reached here last night and attempted to reach the vessel with a line for the breeches buoy. Seven men were seen in the rigging when the Florida came ashore yesterday afternoon.

Big bonfires were built on the beach and attempts made by fishermen to reach the fated schooner. Bombs with lines attached, thrown by lifesaving crew, were not caught by the sailors on the Florida, who were in a benumbed condition. Five of them were on the mizzenmast, one on the mainmast and the other on the bowsprit. During the evening hatches and portions of the Florida's boats came ashore. A portion of the lifesaving crew will patrol the beach on watch for other bodies. Several hundred people saw the wreck go to pieces.

Beyond Lifesavers' Reach.

The lifesavers made a gallant effort at rescue. The hardy fellows pushed their lifeboat out into the towering breakers, and, manning the oars, pulled with zeal to make way, but their effort was futile. The boat was caught in the trough of the sea, was overturned, and their attempt to go to the schooner had to be abandoned.

In the meantime, during all that long wait, almost an eternity to the poor fellows in their perilous place in the rigging, with death awaiting them on all sides, they could be seen. What their feelings were as they saw darkness settling may readily be conjectured.

Lifted by the surging sea and moved by the gale, the vessel had been slowly forced farther toward the shore. Then the lifesavers made an effort to save the imprisoned and imperilled crew. They made her position as best their trained eyes and ears could place her, and fired the lifeline. Experience told them that they had reached her, but that was the only result attained.

Either the men had already succumbed to their fearful sufferings or had become so benumbed with cold that they could do nothing to make the lines fast, and the lifesavers were forced to abandon their efforts to save.

In the meanwhile the seething, foaming and battering sea had been at its work breaking and tearing at the vessel's side. At 10 o'clock she was rapidly becoming a mass of broken planks and splinters, and her masts had gone by the board. Another sea grave had received its victims.

The ship's papers have been washed ashore, and the names of the crew and owners found as follows: Owners, Charles Ryan, Joseph B. Stinson, Ed Mayhew and Henry Miller, all of New York. Crew, all drowned—Arthur Brown, captain; R. McCullock, Albert Williams, Gus Smith, John R. Johnson, Walter Bell, William Wills. There was another man, name unknown.

The Allianca Disaster.

The three masted schooner Allianca, which left New York last Sunday, went ashore on Plum island last night, and was stove to fragments, four of the crew being saved and three drowned. The survivors are foreigners, and particulars are not understood.

The schooner had 400 tons of coal for St. John, N. B., and was commanded by Captain Mellons. She sailed from New York, and reached Edgartown, where she rode out Friday's gale, and made Cape Cod yesterday afternoon. The captain kept off shore in the teeth of a streaky northeast gale, but he soon heard the whistling buoy and sighted Plum island light. Before they realized it the schooner struck, floated and was driven a mile up the beach through the breakers. She struck head on, the spars came out and she went to pieces.

The lost are: Captain Mellons of St. John, N. B., 30 years, unmarried; John Reed, Calais, Me., age 26; Andrew ——, cook, of Spring Hill, N. S., 40 years. The wreckage is being searched for bodies.

POLICE MYSTIFIED

By Circumstances Surrounding the Death of a Man at Haverhill.

HAVERHILL, Mass., Feb. 10.—Thomas A'Herne was found dead in the yard of Dr. Hugh Donahue yesterday noon, lying in a pool of blood with a fractured skull. A'Herne lived in the house of Mrs. Collins, on Locke street, and had entertained a man named O'Brien, Saturday night, in his room. They indulged in liquor, but yesterday morning A'Herne was seen about his room as usual by Mrs. Collins. Half an hour later she saw his body lying beside the fence in the adjoining yard. No disturbance was heard about the house, and there is no sign of any struggle in the hallway or in the snow where he was found. The body was found directly under the window of his room, but not in a position to which he could have jumped, and as his room is on the first floor, it is inconceivable how such a fall could have produced the terrible fracture found in the top of his head, as the skull was driven into the brain, and blood had oozed and clotted in his nose and ears. The people in the house can give no information about the case.

A man who knew A'Herne was chopping wood near by at the time the fatality occurred, and he helped pick up the body when discovered. He could give no information. A'Herne came here from Newburyport, and had been three months out of work and was without money. He was 32 years old, unmarried and had no relative. The police are mystified and are diligently investigating the case.

Mrs. Carroll's Strange Story.

LOWELL, Mass., Feb. 10.—Mrs. Maggie J. Carroll, aged 19, was arrested for alleged larceny of a watch yesterday. She claims her father is Mr. O'Connell of Atlanta, an ex-mayor and prominent resident; that she was sent to a seminary at East Pennacook, N. H., but finding the requirements too irksome, went to St. Joseph's convent at Suncook. She left there and engaged as pastry cook at the Manchester House, Manchester. While there she was married to George Carroll, whom she had known at her birthplace, Stackford Hollow, Canada. They came to this city last summer, where Carroll worked in the mill until taken sick and died a month ago. Mrs. Carroll has worked in the mill since then as a school girl.

Postoffice Wrecked.

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 10.—The safe at the Georgiaville postoffice was blown open early yesterday morning, and the contents, consisting of about $100 in postage stamps and money, were taken. The burglars went to Georgiaville in a buggy. The sound of the explosion awoke Dr. I. S. Cooke, who lives opposite, and he could see the men at work in the office. He telephoned for aid, but before it arrived they had driven toward Woonsocket. The office is a total wreck.

Both Preached.

LOWELL, Mass., Feb. 10.—Rev. G. F. Kenngott preached at the First Congregational church yesterday morning, despite the fact that he had been warned not to enter the church. A committee of the pastor's supporters and one from the lessees agreed that the pastor should preach in the morning and Rev. J. H. Ross, engaged by the lessees, in the evening. It is said that legal action against Mr. Kenngott for trespassing will be taken.

In a Good Cause.

BOSTON, Feb. 10.—Dr. George C. Lorimer has held a conference with Robert T. Paine and Dr. Trueblood of the American Peace society in regard to securing a board of arbitration to settle disputes between England and America. Editor Stead has been consulted, and Dr. Lorimer has received a communication from the English committee which is making a plan of action for both countries.

Italians Quarantined.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Feb. 10.—The discovery of a bad case of smallpox in an Italian boarding house on Green street was announced yesterday. Dr. Coudert, who was called in to see an Italian who was supposed to be suffering from pneumonia, made the discovery. Nine other Italians occupied the infected departments, and after a thorough fumigation they were locked in the building.

Struck on Rye Beach.

HAMPTON, N. H., Feb. 10.—The schooner Stella, coal laden, went ashore below Rye beach last night during the gale, and is a total loss. The crew of seven men were saved.

FOR BREACH O. PROMISE.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—The suit of Birdie Sutherland, a popular ballet girl, against Dudley C. Majoribanks, a lieutenant in the fourth battalion of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, for £20,000 ($100,000) damages for breach of promise of marriage, begun today before Judge Russell and a special jury.

BIRDIE SUTHERLAND.

Sir Edward Clarke represents Miss Sutherland and Henry Asquith defends Mr. Majoribanks, whose offer of £3000 ($15,000) to settle the case was refused. The suit is likely to turn upon the point whether the lieutenant was of full age when the promise of marriage is alleged to have been made. Miss Sutherland, being an infant in the eyes of the law, sues through her father.

Unrecognized by Three Nations.

HONOLULU, Feb. 1.—Jan. 17 having been declared a national holiday by the republic, invitations to take part were sent in the usual way to the diplomatic and consular corps. Favorable replies were received from all but the representatives of the United States, England, Japan and France. Of these representatives the last three stated in their replies to this government that, as their governments had never recognized the provisional government, and as the holiday was given in the celebration of the formation of that government, they did not feel it incumbent to any way participate. Mr. Willis replied, stating that he would lay the matter before Secretary Olney.

A Possible Settlement.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—Early last December congress called for the correspondence that the state department had had in reference to the Waller case, but so far no response has been made by the executive. It is believed that the delay has been caused by a desire of the state department to practically close up the incident before making it a subject of reply, and as it is now expected that the correspondence will be sent in very soon, it is consequently assumed that some satisfactory understanding has been reached with the French government by which the way has been opened for the release of the prisoner.

An Eye on Sluggers.

CHIHUAHUA, Mex., Feb. 10.—Governor Ahulaha of the state of Chihuahua has taken decisive steps toward preventing the proposed pugilistic carnival taking place within the confines of this state. He has issued orders for 1000 troops to proceed to the border and patrol the city of Juarez and adjacent territory during the days on which the fights are scheduled to occur. The governor has also addressed a letter to the principals and managers of the fights, informing them that they will positively not be allowed to trespass upon Mexican soil if any pugilistic encounters are contemplated.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Feb. 10.—Peter L. Atkins took Maud Kelly, aged 23, out driving Saturday night. At 11 o'clock they crossed Wallkill river at Hopkins bridge, and in the darkness Atkins drove off the road into the flooded meadow. The water was nine feet deep, and the two stood on the wagon calling for help. A man named Baupre went to their assistance with a lantern, but when the water reached his hips he was obliged to retire. The two succumbed to the intense cold, and both sank beneath the flood after an hour's suffering.

An Excited Newspaper.

HALIFAX, Feb. 10.—The sergeants of the Berkshire regiment went on a sleigh ride Saturday afternoon. Previous to leaving they drove through the city carrying a number of flags, the largest of which was an American flag. An evening paper, commenting on this famous British regiment carrying the Stars and Stripes in public, says: If American soldiers attempted to carry a British flag in the streets of a city in the United States, there would probably be a riot among the jingoists.

For Patriots Only.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—A national semi-military organization has been formed here by General M. A. Dillon, founder of the Union Veterans' union and the Medal of Honor Legion. The organization is called the Oriental Order of Zouaves, and its principal objects are to cultivate among citizens of all classes and ages a strong spirit of Americanism, with a special view to rigid enforcement of the Monroe doctrine.

From the Jaws of Death.

CEDAR KEYS, Fla., Feb. 10.—Schooner John W. Foster, with a cargo of lumber, was burned 100 miles west of here. The ship and cargo are a total loss. The captain and crew of seven men left the vessel in an open yawl and were afterward capsized. They managed to get on the bottom of the boat, where they remained for 58 hours before being picked up by the Bessie Wish and landed here.

Afraid of Lynchers.

GREENCASTLE, Ind., Feb. 10.—Will Wood, a suspected accomplice in the Pearl Bryan murder and released on $5000 bail, reached here late Friday night and was kept in hiding. Excitement became so intense that friends of his father, presiding elder of the M. E. church of this district, warned him that his son was in danger of being lynched. He and the young man hurriedly left the city.

SWITHIN BROS.,

Real Estate

Having opened a Real Estate office in Durgin & Merrill's Block, we are prepared to show plans and give prices on some of the finest house lots offered for sale in this city in recent years. These lots are embraced in the following tracts of land:

PRESIDENT'S HILL.

This land was formerly the country residence of C. F. Adams. It overlooks the ocean, and the view both seaward and inland is unsurpassed in this vicinity. The grounds are covered with rare and costly shade trees, a very desirable feature of a lot, and the farthest portion of the property is within four minutes' walk of both electric and steam cars. Persons wishing a fine lot in a first-class locality would do well to inspect this property before purchasing.

CRANCH HILL,

Probably better known as Adams' Field, is situated in the heart of the city. The land is high and dry, and the streets through the property are wide and straight. The lots are good size, the prices moderate and terms very reasonable. No better lots for a man of moderate means have ever been offered in this city.

WEST QUINCY.

Land formerly known as the Dell estate on Willard street, borders on Blue Hills reservation; is handy to works, and is less than five minutes' walk to electric cars, West Quincy depot and schools. This property comprises about 80 lots.

HILLSIDE TERRACE.

On Grove street, near quarries and sheds; good lots, low prices; small amount down and small monthly payments. This property comprises about 70 lots.

Also a few lots off Bates avenue.

WOLLASTON.

ELEVEN PER CENT.

Only 96 Deaths in 844 Cases of Diphtheria.

In New South Department of Boston City Hospital.

All Treated with Anti-toxin, and the Showing Remarkable.

The City Hospital club of Boston held its annual dinner at Young's Hotel, Boston, last Wednesday evening.

Dr. J. H. McCollom, the resident physician of the new "South Department" of the Boston City Hospital was one of the speakers, and as this is the ward for infectious diseases, his remarks are peculiarly interesting to Quincy people at this time. A gentleman who was present vouches for the correctness of the report given by the Boston Saturday Evening Gazette, and abstracts are given below:

Since the department was opened on August 31, 1895, 1,139 patients suffering from infectious desease have been admitted. There have been 120 deaths, giving a percentage of 10. There have been 844 cases of diphtheria admitted, with 96 deaths, giving a percentage of 11.

All of these cases have been treated with anti-toxin, and the result is certainly remarkable. The lowest death rate in any of the foreign hospitals, for infectious diseases, has been 18 per cent. which shows that the South Department of the Boston City Hospital has reduced the death rate to a lower percentage than any other hospital in the world, so far as we can learn from published reports.

If we compare this death rate from diphtheria, of 11 per cent., since the introduction of anti-toxin, with that of a death rate in the hospital of 40 per cent., before the introduction of anti-toxin, there can be but one opinion regarding the efficacy of the remedy. The effect of anti-toxin on the operative cases has been very marked. In the report of the Boston City Hospital for the year ending Jan. 31, 1895, before anti-toxin was generally used, there were 86 cases of intubation, with 74 deaths, giving a percentage of 86. In the South department from Aug. 30, 1895, to Feb. 1, 1896, there were 79 intubations, with 36 deaths, giving a percentage of 45, a diminution of nearly one-half.

The change in the appearance of diphtheria wards, since the introduction of the use of anti toxin, has been very marked. In making a visit one cannot help being struck with the bright and cheerful appearance of the children. They seem to be perfectly contented, except those of them who are too ill to realize anything. As a rule, although for the first hour or two after their admission, these children may be a little homesick, they very soon get over this and are perfectly contented. From personal investigation at various times, at nearly every hour of the day and night, I can testify that the nurses are kind to the children, and attentive to their duties.

From a study of the published accounts of the various hospitals for infectious diseases, in different parts of the world, it seems to me that Boston has the best-equipped and best constructed hospital for these diseases of any city in the world.

The South Department is situated on Massachusetts avenue, and occupies nearly the whole square bounded by Harrison avenue, Massachusetts avenue, Albany and Northampton streets.

Young Men's Christian Association.

German class this evening.

Board meeting tomorrow evening.

Owing to the small attendance, occasioned by the storm, Sunday, Rev. C. W. Wilder did not speak on subject advertised, but gave an interesting talk on Bible study.

Thirty boys attended the boys' meeting Saturday morning, and the same number in the gymnasium class.

Last fall the Association as an experiment, divided the Junior department, putting the academy and high school boys in one division and the grammar school boys in another. Saturday evening a supper was given the first division by the Woman's Auxiliary. Twenty boys were present and after the inner boy was satisfied, speeches were in order.

Secretary Colton acted as chairman. Rev. E. N. Hardy gave some helpful suggestions. Mr. Merritt spoke of the physical work. Mr. Nowland told about the Sloyd work calling attention to the proposed summer school. Mr. Atkins praised the educational work which the Association was doing. Edward C. Hewitson described the summer camp, while Wm. Patterson, Jr., gave an account of the annual conferences, and Nathaniel Thayer aroused enthusiasm for the clay modeling class.

The chairman then asked the boys to offer suggestions as to how the Association could be made more helpful. Among the numerous suggestions made were these: "A debating society, a Bible class, an athletic club, a rambling club, a cycle club, base ball nine, bicycle club, orchestra, cross country runs," etc., showing that the boys minds were indeed fertile. Committees were appointed by the boys to take immediate action on two of the suggestions viz, debating society and Bible Study club.

Among those from Quincy who have signed the paper calling upon Congressman Harrison H. Atwood to resign are: Charles H. Porter, Henry H. Faxon, Henry M. Faxon, Andrew Milne, James P. Clare, John B. Reinhalter, George H. Field, Russell A. Sears, Richard G. Chase and Luther S. Anderson.

The Ward One Democratic committee met Friday evening and organized with the choice of the old officers. It is said a thorough canvass of the ward was made prior to meeting in the hope that some one might be found willing to take the offices, but everyone approached declined, and the old board finally consented to hold over.

POSSESSES A SECRET.

Lulu Hollingsworth Knows All About the Pearl Bryan Mystery.

Would Incriminate Herself by Revealing Facts.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 10.—A dispatch from Indianapolis says that the Fort Thomas murder mystery is now nearer a solution than it has been since the headless body of Pearl Bryan was found. Lulu May Hollingsworth, one of Pearl Bryan's girl friends, has been boarding at 1, Henry street, and knows a good deal about the tragedy.

Miss Hollingsworth's knowledge of the case was brought to light yesterday through a letter written by Marshal E. Starr of Greencastle. The man who wrote the letter is H. E. Ratcliff, a traveling salesman from Baltimore. He advised Marshal Starr to investigate the matter, and the marshal arrived at Indianapolis yesterday afternoon. Detective Wilson was detailed to assist the marshal. They called on Miss Hollingsworth. She was not inclined to be communicative at first. They then decided to take her to the police headquarters and have her questioned by Superintendent Colbert.

While her story is not complete in detail it shows that she knows a good deal about the death of Miss Bryan. Miss Hollingsworth says that on the afternoon of Jan. 28 she was at the Union station and met Miss Bryan. She had visited in Greencastle, and had become acquainted with Miss Bryan there. After the usual greetings were over, Miss Bryan told her that she was in deep trouble. She explained its nature, and said Jackson was responsible for her condition. She said it would never do for her people to hear of her disgrace, and she was going to Cincinnati to have an abortion performed. She asked Miss Hollingsworth the nature of drugs used in such cases, and Miss Hollingsworth told her what she had heard was good.

At this point in her story, Miss Hollingsworth wavered. She said that certain drugs had been purchased in Indianapolis, and that four drug stores were visited. She would not tell the names of the drugs, but said that whisky formed a large part of the mixture. She said the stuff purchased cost 45 cents. She admitted that the stuff was purchased by a woman. Miss Hollingsworth said she was acquainted with Jackson and Wood, but had never met Walling. The same evening Miss Bryan took a train for Cincinnati. She saw Wood after that. He visited Indianapolis the following Friday, and Miss Hollingsworth was at the depot. Both of them being acquainted with Miss Bryan, they talked about her trouble. Wood was on his way to South Bend, Ind., and left in a short time.

Interesting Statements.

Miss Hollingsworth's manner of telling her story convinced the officers that she was holding something back. She was subjected to a most rigid examination, and on several occasions she lost her temper. She said she had not heard of the murder until two days ago. She had no idea that it would turn out so bad, and said: "I am positive that Pearl was not murdered."

"Well, how do you know?"

"I know," replied the girl, "but I do not propose to tell."

"Why not?"

"Simply because I do not intend to incriminate myself. There was an occurrence between Jackson, Pearl and myself that, were I to tell of it, would clear up the mystery surrounding her death."

"Why don't you tell it and set the minds of her folks at rest?"

"For this reason. It would incriminate me. However, I do not propose to see these boys hanged, and when the last hope is gone I will tell what I know in order to save their necks. They did not kill Pearl."

"How do you know they did not kill her?"

"Because she died by her own hand. I have a theory. Pearl took the medicine herself. She was in Jackson's room at the time. It had a different effect from what was expected, and she grew so bad that Jackson saw she was going to die. He knew that it would never do to have her die in the house, so he secured a hack, and, assisted by Walling, took her across the river. She may have died on the way, or may have been dead before they got her out of the room, and their object in taking her there was to hide the crime. When near Fort Thomas they cut off her head and disposed of it to avoid identification. See if it don't come out that way."

Later Miss Hollingsworth told the police that she bought for Pearl Bryan three kinds of drugs at Indianapolis, and was instructed to buy another drug after she reached Cincinnati, but to be careful of it, as it was deadly poison and would kill her if not used correctly. Miss Hollingsworth says that Pearl Bryan then said to her: "I will go to Cincinnati and take the stuff, and if it kills me I will be near Jackson, and he will have to swing for it."

Miss Hollingsworth further says that Pearl was very bitter toward Jackson, who, she claimed, was responsible for her condition.

Detectives From Three Cities

have been busily hunting the missing links in the chain of circumstances by which the story of the murder of Pearl Bryan is to be shaped into perfect evidence.

All search for the head has been fruitless, though made by hundreds of volunteers, along with detectives. A very material addition to the dumb witnesses of the deed was discovered about 6:30 o'clock last night. Two detectives found the girl's hat. In it were a bloody handkerchief and a big stone to keep it from being blown away. It was found in an angle between the Fort Thomas electric railway and the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad, near their intersections near Newport, Ky.

The mystery of the whereabouts of the girl on Thursday, Jan. 30, the night before the murder, remains unsolved. From her arrival here on Monday, Jan. 27, up to 11 o'clock Thursday forenoon, her movements have been traced. Then comes a hiatus until 7 o'clock Friday evening, when she was last seen alive. This was at Dave Wallingford's saloon, where she and Jackson were seen, and she drank a glass of mineral water. The rest of the story has been told, barring certain gaps in it which detectives are now trying to fill.

The finding of the hat last night weakens the theory that a cab was used to take the murderers and their victim to Fort Thomas.

High School Contest.

MR. EDITOR:—I had the pleasure of being present at the annual contest of the Quincy High School, Feb. 7th.

Having to make a train before the close I did not until the present moment, become acquainted with the facts of the awards.

I must say in my estimation it stands most unfair. A judge of elocution should be familiar with the art in all its phases.

Dramatic expression especially in character work, is a difficult task for the ordinary amateur, as it is there, the power of expression is given full play, and cannot be effective without clear articulation, accent, emphasis, and the proper inflections to produce the natural realization of the subject or story told.

To hold the attention and carry the sympathy of an audience, indeed to be appreciated by a large assembly of people not only requires study but talent.

It was therefore with pleasure I noted the ability displayed in this contest, it would be recognized in our colleges of oratory.

Back Bay, Feb. 10, 1896.

A Long Way Round.

The progress of the work of abolishing the large number of grade crossing in the vicinity of Jamaica Plain is of considerable interest to our daily travellers to and from the Hub. Among the interesting facts in connection with the work is the carrying of all the granite used in the bridges a distance of nearly forty miles over the railroad from Quincy, although the distance across the country from the quarries to Jamaica Plain is only about four miles. As the loads are so heavy, some trains being made up of 35 or more cars with monster locomotive, they must be taken without change or carting, so that the long route is the easiest and best way after all. The trains go from Quincy to Brockton thence over the Shovel Handle road to Easton, Stoughton and Canton, on the main line to Heath St. station at Jamaica Plain.—Sharon Enterprise.

—There was a little breeze in Plymouth a few days ago among the merchants of the town, on account of some Jews advertising a clothing sale. The matter has been taken up by the Commercial Club and a movement made to stop this sale of clothing where a license has not been secured by the parties. The merchants object to these parties coming into town and hiring a room and selling, as they say, goods of inferior nature, when they have to keep up a big store and pay rent and taxes. Five of the Jews interested in this clothing sale were brought before Judge Davis charged with violating the statute in passing handbills, announcing the sale when a license for it had not been secured — Hingham Journal.

GEMS IN VERSE.

Greatness.

I like the man who faces what he must
With step triumphant and a heart of cheer,
Who fights the daily battle without fear,
Sees his hopes fail, yet keeps unfaltering trust
That God is God—that somehow, true and just,
His plans work out for mortals; not a tear
Is shed when fortune, which the world holds dear,
Falls from his grasp; better with love a crust
Than living in dishonor; envies not,
Nor loses faith in man, but does his best,
Nor even murmurs at his humbler lot,
But, with a smile and words of hope, gives zest
To every toiler. He alone is great
Who, by a life heroic, conquers fate.

The Difference.

He couldn't write, he couldn't read,
He little knew nor cared
About the people's wrongs or need;
How others lived he took no heed
Nor how they fared.

The big saloon he couldn't pass
Nor pools of any type;
He couldn't live without his glass,
And he was miserable, alas!
Without his pipe.

On public streams, whiche'er the way,
He could do naught but float,
And on the questions of the day
He couldn't think, he couldn't pray,
But he could vote.

* * * * * * *

She couldn't drink, she couldn't swear,
She couldn't even smoke,
Nor could she open wrongs declare,
Nor with a ballot did she dare

She loved the people, and she knew
The questions passing by
Were weighty; her conclusions drew,
And out of these convictions grew
The how and why.

She kept herself outside the rut,
From leading minds could quote;
She had opinions clearly cut,
Could read and write and reason—but
She couldn't vote.
—Hattie Horner Louthan.

Who Cares?

Who cares that your cross is heavy;
Who cares that you weep and sigh;
Who cares that you find life darkened—
That you'd gladly lie down and die?

Who cares that your tears are falling
Like the chill November rain;
Who cares that your heart is aching
With a dull and ceaseless pain?

Who cares that your feet are weary,
Walking in poverty's way;
Who cares that you see no sunshine
In the fair, bright summer's day?

Who cares that your dreams are shattered
Who cares that you know no rest;
Who cares that you're daily nursing
Despair at your very breast?

No one, for the world is selfish.
It wants not your grief and pain.
You may cry your woes from the housetops,
But you'll cry them all in vain.

But fill your pockets with gold dust,
With a beaming smile advance,
And then you can play your fiddle,
And the whole wide world will dance.
—Katharine Dangerfield.

The Scarecrow.

It was a regular scarecrow man,
Made on the old and well known plan—
A cross of sticks in a garb forlorn—
That stood on guard in the field of corn.
And indeed it made the old farmer smile
As he put it up and whistled the while.
It would look to the crows so very ferocious,
So truly astounding and atrocious,
That it tickled his fancy to think how they
Would catch a glimpse and flutter away.

Well, two black crows sat off on a tree,
And the young crow said to the old one:
"See!
Now, what is that frightful thing out there?
It's enough any honest crow to scare!"
But the old crow chuckled and then looked wise,
Shook in his feathers and winked his eyes.
Something tickled him, but if 'twas a joke
His voice didn't show it a bit when he spoke,
As, looking down at the younger crow,
He said: "What is it? Ah, don't you know?

"Why, that, as we wise ones all suppose,
Is the special patron saint of the crows!
We watch for his coming every year,
To tell when the feast of the corn is here.
See how he stands with his arms stretched out!
He is calling the crows from all about!
Such a kind invitation is most alluring,
So very cordial and reassuring!
I think we had better accept, don't you?"
And down to the field of corn they flew.
—Wallace E. Mather.

The Sweetest Things of Earth.

What are the sweetest things of earth?
Lips that can praise a rival's worth;
A fragrant rose that hides no thorn;
Riches of gold untouched by scorn;

A happy little child asleep;
Eyes that can smile though they may weep;
A brother's cheer; a father's praise;
The minstrelsy of summer days;

A heart where anger never burns;
A gift that looks for no returns;
Wrong's overthrow; pain's swift release;
Dark footsteps guided into peace;

The light of love in lover's eyes;
Age that is young as well as wise;
A mother's kiss; a baby's mirth—
These are the sweetest things of earth.
—Kansas City Times.

The Development of Genius.

When Jimmy was a little boy—
He's now jes' twenty-one—
His parents talked with constant joy
About their hopeful son.

His mother said thet Jim would be
A parson good an true.
His father kinder 'lowed thet he
In law would better do.

His gran'pap said he'd give the press
An intelleckchul feast.
His gran'ma sniffed an put her guess
On president at least.

The neighbors had opinions free.
Some booked 'im fur finance,
An others said he'd git ter be
A general with the chance.

An still we're waitin anxiously,
An still it's even bets,
Fur Jim's done nothin yet, ye see,
But jes' smoke cigarets.
—Washington Star.

The Social Show.

But the thirsty of soul soon learn to know
The moistureless froth of the social show;
The vulgar sham of the pompous feast
Where the heaviest purse is the highest priest;
The organized charity, scrimped and iced,
In the name of a cautious, statistical Christ;
The smile restrained, the respectable cant,
When a friend in need is a friend in want;
Where the only aim is to keep afloat,
And a brother may drown, with a cry in his throat.
—John Boyle O'Reilly.

Worthy of the Laurel.

The true poet today is God's prophet.
If a singer prove false to his trust,
Make his mission a byword and scoff; it
Is meet he should sink into dust.
Who would wear the life crown of the poet
Must breathe out a soul in his art—
Stand above the rude throng, now below it,
And his song must be pure, like his heart
—Alice Williams.

Fitting Himself For It.

"Yes, grandma, when I graduate, I intend following a literary career—write for money, you know."

"Why, Willie, my dear, you haven't done anything else since you've been at college."—Life.

New Customer—In perfect silence! (Collapse of barber.)—Pick Me Up.

Not Amenable.

Parish Minister—Do you know it is an awful sin catching fish on the Sabbath?

A Question of Proximity.

Miss Summit—There is one rather disagreeable thing about Mr. Clubberly. He uses perfumery.

Miss Palisade—I hadn't noticed it.

Miss Summit—Why should you?—Brooklyn Life.

An Angler's Odd Catch

One of the oddest things a fisherman ever caught was a young live pig. This haul was made by Charles Johns, in the Delaware, near Bristol, Pa. He was fishing for plain fish, when he saw the pig swimming down stream, evidently almost exhausted. The pig seized the hook which he threw toward it, and was helped and steered ashore by the fisherman.—Fishing Gazette.

Earthquakes.

Between Jan. 1 of the year 1137 and Jan. 1, 1896, over 7,000,000 persons perished in earthquakes. The greatest mortality in any one shock or series of shocks was at Yesso, Japan, in 1703, when 191,000 persons perished in three days and nights.

Inscrutable Mystery.

"Mamma," asked the little girl, peering in between two uncut leaves of the magazine, "how did they ever get the printing in there?"

ST. VALENTINE'S DAY.

How It Used to Be Celebrated and How It Is Now.

When we were children, St. Valentine's day ranked with Christmas and Fourth of July in much anticipated pleasure and in the simple delights that were attendant upon the coming of the lovers' saint. The little girl who did not have at least a half dozen valentines to show was considered very unpopular indeed, and so strong was this feeling that parents, fearing lest the youths of the neighborhood might not be blessed with sufficient money to favor every little girl and knowing what a disappointment the absence of the postman's knock would mean to their small daughters, would prowl out the night before and buy up paper hearts and gay little Cupids presiding over verses that breathed of love and darts rhyming with dove and hearts.

The elder ones regarded the sentimental side of the affair only and did not mind if but one missive were received, provided it was from the one, a fact which was generally speedily discovered, despite the disguised handwriting and other mysteries attached to the delivery of it. Today the hideously ugly penny dreadfuls and the paper stage scenes have given place to more substantial offerings, and the day is celebrated in quite a different manner.

Now large and beautiful boxes, filled with bonbons and tied with ribbon on which some sentiment appropriate to the day is painted, are the gifts generally exchanged. A candy Cupid presiding over a bouquet of lovely blossoms, or sprays of flowers tumbling in artistic disorder from a silver or gold heart or a quiver and arrows of tiny buds, are all the up to date gifts of the modern valentine.

In the country the lads and lasses used to hang baskets of early spring blossoms on each other's doorbells, or if winter had lingered until the day of the mating of birds paper flowers were substituted. Today they give a valentine, luncheon or party, and the tables take the shape of hearts, the candle shades become opening roses, and a little pink Cupid bearing its own valentine is the souvenir for the guests.

The simpler forms of entertaining and celebrating on every occasion have given way to the more extravagant and the more artistic modes, and in nothing is this more noticeable than in the evolution of the valentine and the gayeties that mark the day of which it is the leading feature.

Two Children Killed.

BROOKLYN, Feb. 10.—Two children were instantly killed and one young man seriously injured as the result of a fire which occurred yesterday in a cottage on Fort Hamilton avenue. The victims are Minnie Spacht, 9 years old, and Harry Rotzen, 7 years old, both killed; Edward Hill, 18 years old, seriously hurt. The cottage was unoccupied, and the fire started from an unknown cause, and the building was burned to the ground, the chimney alone being left standing. Later in the day while a crowd of children and others were viewing the ruins the chimney fell without warning, burying the three mentioned.

AWARD IS CUT DOWN.

Morgan Will Not Get as Much of Bond Loan as Anticipated.

Successful Bidders Sent Notices of Acceptance.

Outline of Work Before the Senate and House This Week.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—The secretary of the treasury has made public the names of the successful bidders for the new loan, together with the amounts subscribed for by each, and the rate offered for $100 with interest from Feb. 1. The last revision of the lists, completed Saturday night, reduces the amount awarded to J. P. Morgan and his associates by $32,100, making their allotment $33,179,250.

Secretary Carlisle has sent to each of the 781 successful bidders the following notice of acceptance of their respective bids:

You are hereby notified that your subscription, under the terms of the department circulars of Jan. 6, Jan. 9 and Jan. 15, 1896, for $——of the 4 per cent bonds of the United States, for which you have agreed to pay in United States gold coin, or gold certificates, at the office of the assistant treasury, in the city of ——, at the rate of —— and accrued interest per $100 face value of said bonds, has been accepted.

You are therefore requested to deposit with the United States assistant treasurer at —— on or before Feb. 15, 1896, the sum of $——, which is 20 per cent of the amount of your subscription at the price above named. The accrued interest from Feb. 1, 1895, to date of the payment hereby requested, should also be paid, at the rate of 4 per cent on the amount of the bonds paid for by said deposit. At the expiration of 15 days from the day of this first payment an additional payment of 10 per cent must be made, and such payments must be continued at intervals of 15 days until the whole amount is paid. The accrued interest accompanying each payment must be computed from Feb. 1, 1896, to date of such payment. If you desire to pay the entire amount of your subscription at once, you may do so, or you may anticipate the total payment of your subscription at any time prior to the maturing of the last installment. In the former case the amount to be deposited is $——, with accrued interest at 4 per cent on $—— from Feb. 1, 1895, to date of deposit.

The secretary of the treasury should be promptly advised of the character of the bonds desired (whether registered or coupon), and the denominations thereof. If this information has already been furnished, please confirm it.

The bonds will be issued only upon receipt by the secretary of the "original" certificate of deposit of the assistant treasurer receiving the payments. The department is prepared to begin the delivery of the bonds at once, and deliveries will be continued as rapidly as the facilities of the department will permit.

J. G. CARLISLE, Secretary.

Congressional Forecast.

The first business before the senate this week probably will be the vote on Senator Quay's resolution for the recommitment of the revenue tariff bill to the committee on finance. Senator Smith (N. J.) is announced to make a speech on the Monroe doctrine, and Senator Blanchard on the same subject.

The Hansbrough resolution in regard to the distribution of seed by the agricultural department will, by agreement, be taken up early in the week, and it is the purpose of the committee on appropriations to get the appropriation bills up in rapid succession and out of the way as soon as possible. Four of these bills have already been reported from the committee, and others will follow as speedily as the committee can turn them out after their passage by the house.

There will be an effort to secure an adjournment from Thursday until Monday to permit the Pacific railroads committee to continue their hearings. It is probable that the better part of the week will be given up to the appropriation bills. The Republicans expect to get up the question of the senate reorganization toward the latter part of the week, and if they succeed this will consume considerable time.

The interest in the Quay resolution is enhanced by the knowledge that the vote will be very close. The Republicans expect to poll their full vote of 44 members for recommittal, and they are not without hope that they may get a vote or two from the Democratic side. This claim, is, however, vigorously contested by the Democrats, who say they will have a full Democratic and Populist vote against this proposition.

If they succeed in defeating the resolution, the effect will be to place the silver substitute for the tariff bill before the senate, but it is not expected that it will be taken up immediately. Senators incline to the belief that in no event can the tariff-silver bill be disposed of within less than a month's time.

The general debate on the free coinage substitute for the bond bill, which was discussed day and night for four days in the house last week, closes today. It is the general expectation that a vote will be reached sometime tomorrow.

As to the result, there is no sort of doubt. Mr. Dingley's motion to non-concur and insist on the house bill will carry by a vast majority, probably exceeding 100 if there is a full house. It is not believed that Mr. Crisp's motion to concur in the free coinage substitute will muster over 100 votes. If an opportunity is given to concur in the last three sections of the bill—to redeem greenbacks in gold or silver at the option of the government, to coin the seigniorage and to retire national bank notes of a less denomination than $10—the vote may be close, but it is thought that parliamentary manipulation will prevent votes except on the main propositions.

The resolution to censure Mr. Bayard can be prevented at any time during the week, but it may be withheld until the pending appropriations bills—the agricultural, army and District of Columbia—are out of the way.

Saturday's Work In Congress.

The debate in the house on the free coinage substitute for the house bond bill was very spirited Saturday. There were several strong speeches, and one, at least, of a somewhat sensational character. Mr. Towne (Rep., Minn.) claimed the attention of the house and galleries for over an hour with an eloquent effort on behalf of free coinage, which won for him a personal ovation such as has not been accorded any member since the session began. His speech was illustrated with charts, and aroused unbounded enthusiasm among the silver forces.

Mr. Hall (Dem., Mo.), on the other hand, announced his conversion to "sound money" in a rather sensational speech, in which he charged that senators who voted for free coinage according to "credible information" had privately said that they believed free coinage would bring upon this country national and individual bankruptcy and ruin. He charged them with trying to "feather their nests at home," and declared that the greatest sin of the present age was the cowardice of statesmen. He also declared that a high official of the administration had said that the silver agitation had already cost the government $262,000,000 in bond issues, and in the course of the next 12 months the bond issues would increase to $1,000,000,000. Mr. Hall voted for free coinage in the last congress.

Populist Plans.

The Populist senators have concluded to stand by their former decision to nominate candidates of their own for the offices of secretary and sergeant-at-arms of the senate when the election of these officers is undertaken in accordance with the Republican program. The Populists will name Thomas Watson of Georgia for secretary and Mr. Taubeneck of Illinois for sergeant-at-arms. They have not, so far as can be learned, gone beyond an agreement to support these men on the first ballot.

Edison's Latest Discovery.

ORANGE, N. J., Feb. 10.—Thomas A. Edison has made a discovery which he thinks is second in impotance only to the discovery by Professor Roentgen himself. The wizard of Menlo park obtained with a Crookes tube of his own manufacture a "light" which penetrates steel. That, so far as is known here, has not been accomplished before. The steel penetrated was one-eighth of an inch thick, and the "light," which is what Mr. Edison describes as "a pure blue fluorescence," penetrated the steel to such an extent as to leave the negative upon which the photograph was made perfectly black. Just how this more perfect force works, Mr Edison does not know yet. He encountered a series of phenomena in his experiments, and he and his men are busy running down the things which they discovered.

Car Crushed In Collision.

HANNIBAL, Mo., Feb. 10.—Fifteen persons were more or less seriously hurt, and one cannot recover, as the result of a collision yesterday between a stock train and a passenger train one mile north of this city. The stock train, which had just emerged from a tunnel, struck the passenger train, crushing in the side of the ladies' coach and throwing it over an embankment, almost into the Mississippi river. There were 15 passengers in the coach, and that none was killed is a miracle. All were more or less bruised, but one.

Collided With Rocks.

GREENPORT, N. Y., Feb. 10.—Schooner Scudder left New York for the east with a cargo of coal. All went well until the channel between Plum gut and Orient point was reached. The currents carried the vessel along, dragging her anchors, and she was brought up against the rocks of Orient point. Captain Raynor and his men had hardly gotten away from the schooner when the rocks had pounded a hole in her bottom, and she went down in 10 feet of water.

For Stricken Armenians.

BUFFALO, Feb. 10.—Nearly all the Protestant churches of this city, with several of the Jewish congregations, united in 25 places of worship last night in simultaneous mass meetings to protest against the Armenian outrages. A uniform resolution was adopted at the several meetings calling on congress and the executive branch of the United States government to take such immediate action as will effectively restrain the Turkish government and subjects from further murder and outrages.

A HEARTY GREETING.

Habana People Evidently Expect Great Things of Weyler.

Formally Assumes Charge of Affairs In Cuba.

"Military Editors" to Play an Important Part In Future War Reports.

HABANA, Feb. 11.—The Spanish cruiser Alfonso XIII, with General Weyler, the newly appointed captain general and commander-in-chief of the Spanish forces in Cuba, on board, arrived off Morro Castle yesterday morning, and at 10 o'clock entered the harbor and steamed up to the city.

As the warship passed Morro Castle she was saluted by the guns of that fortress, and as she proceeded was welcomed by thunders of artillery from the Cubans fortress, and the dippings of flags and other greetings from the ships in the harbor.

General Weyler, who was accompanied by six generals, besides the Marquis de Ahumada, the latter having been designated by the queen regent to be second to General Weyler in command, disembarked shortly before noon, and was met by the civil and military officials, who escorted him to the palace.

GENERAL WEYLER.

The entire city was brilliantly decorated in honor of the occasion, and in the bay all the warships and merchant craft were decorated with bunting. The troops and volunteers were turned out to a man, together with the fire department and police, and for a long time past no such brilliant display has been witnessed in Habana.

General Weyler was welcomed by the city council on board the Alfonso XIII. He was presented with an address of welcome and assurances of loyalty. Weyler came ashore and was received by General Marin and staff. He seemed to be much pleased with his reception, and upon arriving at the palace formally took over the duties of the captain generalship, taking the oath of fealty over a crucifix and upon a Bible.

After the reception of the local military and civil authorities, corporations and clergy was completed, General Weyler appeared upon the balcony of the palace and reviewed the troops. His appearance before the public was the signal for a long outburst of the most enthusiastic cheering, the firing of cannon and the sound of martial music, all the bands in the city being stationed at different points.

In addition to the inhabitants of the city proper, thousands of people dressed in their best flocked into the city from all directions. The march past of the troops was probably the finest sight of all. With the exception of the men actually on duty in the forts and at the different outposts, all the infantry, cavalry, artillery engineers, marine battalions and sailors forming the garrison of Habana turned out in the neatest possible manner.

Pathway Strewn With Flowers.

Flowers were thrown upon the soldiers from all sides and floral wreaths found their way upon many a bayonet, as the troops passed through the streets, accompanied by loud cheers for Spain. Everybody seemed to catch the enthusiasm of the day, and the new captain general may be said to have received one long, uninterrupted and most enthusiastic ovation.

Accompanying General Weyler were Captains Gelaber and Linares, who are known as "military editors." They will most likely have charge of the press censorship here, and it is already rumored that there will be considerably more difficulty experienced in this connection by the correspondents in the future. Recently the press regulations have been considerably relaxed, and not much difficulty has been experienced in getting average matter upon the cable.

But, if reports are correct, the new captain general will be very severe with correspondents who send false accounts of Cuban successes or who in any way bring about the publication of false news.

So far as the general situation is concerned, there is not much change. Indeed, no change of importance is expected for several days. General Weyler will first devote himself to a complete review of the operations already undertaken, and he will then figure out the situation as it actually exists.

For this purpose, almost immediately after taking the oath of fealty, he caused orders to be sent to all the commanders in the field to draw up promptly and forward to headquarters here complete returns of the number of men under their command available for active service, the amount of ammunition they have in their possession, the nature of and quantity of supplies at their disposal, the number of horses capable of mounting troops, the state of the railroads, telegraph and public thoroughfares in the vicinity of their commands and the probable location and strength of the enemy in their neighborhoods.

Some of these reports, those from the forts around Habana, will come in at once; but others, from the outlying districts, will take some time to reach here. General Weyler has already detailed a staff of young officers and non-commissioned officers who will act as headquarters' clerks for the time being and assist in compiling the returns.

This action upon the part of General Weyler is supplementary to the regular report and returns which were handed over to him by General Marin after the new captain general had been sworn in. Weyler took this step in order to thoroughly go over the ground himself, and possibly in view of the sensational reports that large quantities of stores, arms and ammunition are missing from the different depots and have found their way into the hands of the insurgents.

General Marin, who has been appointed captain general of Porto Rico, is expected to leave for his new post today. He has not done much since he assumed command here after the recall of De Campos; but he has certainly displayed activity and has been on the move almost continually.

The exact plan of campaign of General Weyler, naturally, is not known; but it is believed that it will be a very different one from that of Campos. He is likely to call in all the small detachments of troops which have from the first had such a weakening effect upon the Spanish operations, and he will try to drive the insurgents into a position from which they cannot escape without a pitched battle.

General Weyler will also do everything possible to muster as strong a force of cavalry as he can. Considerable re-enforcements of this branch of the service have already arrived here, and more are expected during the week.

Regarding his political standing, General Weyler, it is said, will be entirely non-partisan, while willing to listen to suggestions and advice from all parties. His first efforts will be directed to concentrating his forces and restoring public confidence. Later he will try to engage the insurgents who are understood to be concentrating their forces in anticipation of having a much more difficult task before them than they have had up to the present.

In fact, some reports credit the insurgents with desiring to concentrate all their scattered detachments and columns into one body and so bring the insurrection to a direct issue. If so, there seems to be no doubt that the Spanish generals will not put any obstacle in the way of the insurgent commanders. But Spaniards here who are well posted on the situation say that there is no truth in the report that the insurgents will make any effort to risk a pitched battle.

General Weyler is the subject of interested speculation and study on all sides as to his character and as to his plans in his new office of captain general. He deprecates the idea that he has any intention of putting into force cruel practices, such a course being entirely against his sentiments; but he asserts very explicitly that he will be as hard and severe with the enemies of Spanish sovereignty as circumstances requires, not only with those with arms in their hands in the field, but with those in the city working harm among the friends of Spain.

It is obvious that General Weyler's presence has produced a magnificent effect, due not only to his presence, but to his talks and promises, and it is the general opinion that the spirits of the Spanish sympathizers have greatly raised.

Weyler to the People.

The following is the proclamation issued by Captain General Weyler upon assuming his post:

TO THE PEOPLE OF CUBA.

Honored by her majesty the queen and her government with the command of this island under the difficult circumstances now prevailing, I take charge of it with the determination that it shall never be given up by me, and that I shall keep it in the possession of Spain, willing as she is to carry out whatever sacrifice shall be required to succeed, as she has been in the past.

I rely upon the gallantry and discipline of the army and navy, upon the patriotism, never to be subdued, of the volunteer corps, and more especially upon the support that I should be given by the loyal inhabitants, born here or in Spain.

It is not necessary to say that I shall be generous with the subdued and to all of those doing any service to the Spanish cause. But I will not lack in the decision and energy of my character to punish, with all rigor that the law enacts, those who in any way shall help the enemy or calumniate the prestige of our name.

Putting aside at present any idea of politics, my mission is the honorable one of finishing the war, and I only see in you the loyal Spaniards who are to assist me to defeat the insurgents. But her majesty's government is aware of what you are and of what you are worthy and the statutes of peace that these provinces may obtain. It will grant you, when it is deemed suitable to do so, the reforms that the government may think most proper, with the love of a mother to her children.

Inhabitants of Cuba, lend me your co-operation, and in that way you will defend your interests, which are those of the country.

Long live Spanish Cuba!

A CHARGE OF MURDER

May Result From Joseph Prescott's Assault With a Hatchet.

Struck His Wife and Her Sewing Maid.

Had Been Drinking and Quarreled Over Financial Matters.

BOSTON, Feb. 11.—Mrs. Joseph Prescott and Bridget Cullen, her 18-year-old sewing maid, the victims of a murderous assault, lies at the point of death in the Massachusetts general hospital.

The assault was committed at 60 Chelsea street, Charlestown, shortly before 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, but it was not until some time later that the police were notified.

Upon receiving word, officers were sent to the scene in the patrol wagon. When they entered the rooms occupied by the Prescotts they found Joseph Prescott raging about, giving utterance to the wildest curses and most disgusting language. He was seized and quieted, but he made no attempt to escape.

In the kitchen his wife and Bridget Cullen were found lying on the floor, unconscious, while blood was freely flowing from many wounds about their heads.

Mrs. Prescott sustained a compound fracture of the skull, a piece of broken bone being removed from the wound. Her chances of recovery are said to be very slight, while those of the Cullen girl are considered somewhat more hopeful, but still very critical.

After the removal of the women, Prescott was taken to the station, where he was examined by Captain White, to whom he confessed that he had assaulted his wife and their servant with a hatchet.

According to the statement, he was arrested Sunday afternoon on a warrant charging him with disturbing the peace at his home last Friday. Yesterday morning he was taken into court, fined $5 and released. After leaving the court room he took two drinks of whisky, and went home to dinner about noon.

During the meal he had some words with his wife, who spoke of him as being shiftless, and

Upbraided Him About Money Matters.

He rapidly grew angry, and when she accused him of taking $25 from a pocket of her dress he lost his temper completely, and seizing the hatchet which lay near at hand, viciously attacked her. Bridget came to her assistance, and he struck both women twice.

Mrs. Prescott fell to the floor after the first two blows had been struck. Bridget tottered, but managed to support herself until she reached a chair, and then she sank, unconscious, behind the stove.

It is stated that Prescott was married about seven years ago. During several years they have been living at 60 Chelsea street. He is a longshoreman by trade, but has not been working, it is stated by the police, during the last six or seven months.

It is alleged that he has been drinking quite freely lately, and has been in a quarrelsome mood on many occasions.

Mrs. Prescott has conducted a lodging and boarding hours during the past three years.

ON BEACON HILL.

The Bulfinch Front—Taxation of Church Property—Biennials Again.

BOSTON, Feb. 11.—The committee on state house gave a continued hearing yesterday upon the question of reconstructing the Bulfinch front, in the course of which ex-Governor Long told why the construction commissioners thought the present building should be taken down. There was a hearing on the proposition to repeal the law exempting church property from taxation, and a few other hearings of secondary importance.

Petitions were received for the establishment of a children's aid bureau under the supervision of the state board of lunacy and charity; of the Arlington mills, for authority to increase capital stock to an amount not exceeding $2,500,000.

Mr. Stevens of Somerville introduced, on leave, a bill for a tax of $2 on every bicycle, the amount raised in any city or town by the tax to be expended on the highways of such city or town in the interest of good roads.

Remonstrances against biennial elections were received from Charles H. Coulter, Neil Currie and others of Brockton.

When the resolves in favor of biennial elections were reached, Mr. Myers moved to limit speeches to 10 minutes, which prompted Mr. Mellen of Worcester to protest against attempts to cut off debate. Mr. Myers said that while he did not intend to cut off debate, he did not want any filibustering.

Mr. Mellen said that points of order are to be raised that will require much discussion.

The house voted to limit speeches to 10 minutes.

Mr. Mellen then asked that when a vote is taken it be on each proposition in the resolves separately. Mr. Mellen also raised several other points of order.

Quick Bouts.

BOSTON, Feb. 11.—The 1500 sporting men who attended the boxing exhibition under the auspices of the Suffolk Athletic club last night were given two surprises, in the defeat of Nick Burley of California, by Charles Strong of New Jersey, in the first round, and the defeat of Maurice Hagerstrom of Newark, N. J., by Eddie Connelly of St. John, N. B., in about a minute after the first round opened.

Partially Paralyzed.

BOSTON, Feb. 11.—Mrs. Whitten, theatrically known as "Lola," an aerial performer at a local theater, slipped from the diving bar yesterday afternoon and fell 25 feet. Her fall was broken by a safety net, but injuries necessitated her removal to the hospital, where she lies with the lower half of her body paralyzed. She came from Poland three weeks ago.

Few sections of Quincy are building up faster than that section south of Independence avenue.

The new bowling alleys on Hancock street will probably be ready for occupancy early in March.

Wonder if there is a pupil of the public schools who does not know that tomorrow is Lincoln's birthday.

The Massachusetts Colony of Pilgrim Fathers are to hold their monthly dancing party in Music Hall next week.

Remember the fine entertainment at the Universalist vestry, on Wednesday evening, by some young ladies of Quincy. Supper at 6.30.

Congratulations to John R. Graham, Esq., and best wishes to Mrs. Graham. The street railway horn should be brought out for a serenade.

A class in elocution has been formed in Atlantic. Many of the young ladies have joined it, and the first instructions were given on Monday evening. Miss Smith of Boston is instructor.

Dr. John H. Ash of the Board of Health has written a communication to the DAILY LEDGER on the use of anti-toxin which will appear tomorrow. He quotes many authorities.

West Quincy is to lose one of its most enterprising business men. Mr. T. L. Williams is to remove his business to Quincy centre next month, having leased the store now occupied by Walker & Colpitts on Hancock street.

The Massachusetts Bay Colony, Order of Pilgrim Fathers, is to hold a minstrel show in Music hall shortly. The arrangements have already been begun and the colony will give a show equal if not superior to those given in the past by the Atlantic Social club.

The regular supper and social of the Ladies' Benevolent society which was to be held in the Memorial Congregational church, Atlantic, on Wednesday evening has been postponed for two weeks on account of giving more time in which to perfect the arrangements for "Grandmother's Memories" which is to be given as entertainment.

A Place For Hosea.

Dean Hole, in his "Little Tour In America," gives the following good story, which was picked up at an entertainment given in his honor by the Lotos club of New York. The quaintest story of the evening was told by Dr. Greer of a tedious, monotonous preacher who had exhausted the patience of his hearers by an elaborate dissertation on the four greater prophets, and when, to their sad disgust, he passed on to the minor and asked, "And now, my brethren, where shall we place Hosea?" a man rose from the congregation and made answer: "You can place him here, sir. I'm off."

It is a vain thought to flee from the work that God appoints us for the sake of finding a greater blessing instead of seeking it where alone it is to be found —in loving obedience.—George Eliot.

COMMUNICATIONS.

"A Parent" Who Has Decided Views on Anti-Toxin.

"Americus" Hopes That Prize Speaking May Continue.

"A Voter" Objects to Dropping an Efficient Fireman.

The columns of the DAILY LEDGER are always open to correspondents, especially to those desiring to discuss matters of local public interest. Three communications appear today, and another in favor of anti-toxin will appear tomorrow:

VALUABLE REMEDY.

Anti-Toxin a Success in Quincy and in Newton.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

It is with feelings of righteous indignation that I have read several communications that have lately appeared in your columns, decrying the use of anti-toxin as a remedy for the terrible scourge of diphtheria. What feeling but pity can one have for the parents who have seen their loved ones suffer and die, without using all the remedies known to science, and what feelings can we have against those physician, who, knowing that the overwhelming evidence of the scientific world is in favor of the use of anti-toxin, neglect and refuse to advise its use. They are of the class who refuse to use vaccinations; or anaesthetics, and who believe that when sick all that is required is to believe themselves well.

It is well known that the most eminent physicians recognize anti-toxin as a valuable remedy and it is in daily use in the largest hospitals of the world. It has the sanction of the highest medical authorities of the U. S. Marine Hospital service and of nearly, if not quite all, the health authorities of the different states at the public expense. The great cities of our country are daily producing under the direction of skilled scientists, anti-toxin for the free use of their citizens. The State of Massachusetts also produces it for free distribution. It has the sanction of thousands of the medical profession; it is endorsed and used by our own faithful and devoted physicians. Is there any one so ignorant as to suppose that the opinion and authorities quoted above have not had full as great an opportunity to judge of its value as a remedy as the two or three writers of the communication lately made in your paper?

Right here just a little practical evidence among ourselves. Is it not a fact that scores of children sick with different forms of the dread disease in our city have been treated with anti-toxin the last thirteen months or so?

Is it not in plain evidence right before our eyes, that almost all have recovered and are healthy today? The writer knows personally of many who are bright happy healthful children, who have had the disease in some of its worst forms, and no ill results have as yet manifested themselves.

Is it not a well-known fact, that the percentage of deaths has been greatly lowered throughout the world by its use?

The writer is informed by a member of the Board of Health, that in Quincy in 1894 there was 80 cases and 26 deaths, none being treated with anti-toxin. In 1895 and one month of 1896 there were nearly 113 cases treated with anti-toxin and 16 deaths.

Take the record of 6 cases in 1895 and 1896 with 6 deaths, not so treated.

Look at the results in the city of Newton the ideal place of residence for many as regards health. There was reported in 1893, 88 cases of diphtheria and 32 deaths; in 1894, 81 cases and 20 deaths; in 1895, 151 cases and 13 deaths. Of the 151 cases, 121 received the anti-toxin treatment and only 8 deaths ensued; of the 30 cases not so treated there were 5 deaths.

In the contagious wards of the Newton Hospital there were treated for diphtheria, viz:

1895,—97 " " 5 "

Anti-toxin treatment having been used only in 1895.

What deduction shall we make but this, that those in authority and those called upon to treat this disease, who do not advise its use, have a terrible responsibility resting upon them, and one which they should not assume lightly.

A PARENT.

THE PRIZE SPEAKING.

Competency of Judges Beyond Question—Were Eminently Qualified.

Editors of Daily Ledger:

The misunderstanding which has arisen over the awarding of the declamation prize at the High school is to be regretted deeply and an amicable settlement earnestly hoped for by the many friends of the school. The unusual interest taken by the scholars in declamation and the degree of proficiency which they have acquired, show careful attention and intelligent oversight and is particularly creditable to those in charge, as declamation receives very little attention indeed in high schools.

Inability, real or imagined, to express one's self in intelligently public has deprived the State of the services of many self-made and self-taught men, whose practical knowledge and sound judgment acquired in the great "School of Experience," would be of great value. The parents evidently appreciate the advantages their children enjoy in this respect, as the full attendance at the public exhibitions and the encouragement there given testify. It would be a source of great regret to all, to teachers, parents, pupils and the public, if anything should hamper the further study and practice of declamation in the High school.

It seems to the writer, without wishing to cast any reflections whatever, upon the intelligence or fair-mindedness of the gentlemen who refused to abide by the judges' award, that the proper time to object to the competency of any judge or referee, is before such judge or referee has acted. And further, the competency of the judges in this instance seems beyond question. All are evidently eminently qualified in education, experience and fairness to decide the contest upon its merits.

It is easy to understand the disappointment of a loving parent, and to excuse what appears to be the somewhat hasty action taken in consequence thereof. There can be no question as to the competency or fairness of the judges.

Very respectfully,
AMERICUS.

Civil Service Should be Extended.

To the Editors of the Ledger:

In the formation of Hose 3 Company, Monday evening Mr. James C. Elcock who has been a member of the fire department of Quincy from 17 to 18 years was dropped and apparently for no other reason than at Municipal election he talked and voted for Mr. Hammond. Yet it is openly claimed that there is no politics in the Quincy Fire Department. As far as known there never has been any question as to Mr. Elcock's ability as a fireman. Is it right therefore to drop a good man simply because he exercised that right given to every citizen to vote as he chooses?

Card Party and Dance.

The first public entertainment of the Young Ladies' Auxiliary of St. John's society was a great success socially and financially. It was held in St. John's hall and was attended by about 160 young ladies and gentlemen. There were 36 tables in the contest. The ladies' prize was won by Miss Mary Parker, and the gentlemen's prize by Mr. Maurice Cantfill. At the close of the playing, refreshments of cream and cake were served by the young ladies.

The success of the affair was due in a great measure to the following ladies: Miss Eliza C. Sheahan, Miss Mary McNally, Miss Alice G. Gavin, Miss Frances Talbot, Miss Margaret O'Hara, Miss Ellenore Roche, Miss Jennie Walsh and Miss Mary Collagan.

The dance closed at 12 o'clock.

Also the February Atlantic with an article on the negative entitled—"Mr. Reed and the Presidency." The Sunday Herald of Dec. 1 gives a very comprehensive argument in behalf of Mr. Reed. ## TOO GREAT A TASK.

Sexton Does Not Care to Lead the Irish National Federation.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—Thomas Sexton has declined the chairmanship of the Irish National Federation, which was tendered to him by the council of the federation at their quarterly meeting in Dublin on Sunday.

W. T. SEXTON, M. P.

Mr. Sexton has written to Sir Thomas Esmonde, chief whip of the anti-Parnellite party, conveying his deep regret that he is unable to accept the profferred honor and expressing the conviction that no public advantage could be gained by his acceptance, which, under the circumstances, would subject him to a strain entirely beyond his strength.

IN CONGRESS.

Monroe Doctrine and Seed Distribution Receive Attention.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Although the senate failed to accomplish much yesterday, the session served to make definite the program on a number of important subjects.

Mr. Morrill, chairman of the finance committee, gave notice that he would call up the tariff bill tomorrow. Mr. Call secured unanimous consent that the Cuban question made the special order following the deficiency appropriations bill. Mr. Davis, author of the Davis resolution on the Monroe doctrine, gave notice that on next Monday he would call up the resolution.

Thus the three most important questions were given a definite time for hearing, although it is probable that Mr. Davis' notice contemplates a speech, rather than final action. Mr. Smith of New Jersey spoke at some length in opposition to the Davis resolution. He urged that the doctrine was a national policy, which needed no explicit definition, such as the resolution proposed. Mr. Smith created some amusement by his appeal to the congress to adjourn and go home as the best means of serving the country.

The debate over the secretary of agriculture's seed distribution again waxed hot, Mr. Vest renewing his criticisms, while Mr. Bate championed the wisdom of the secretary's course. The seed debate is not yet concluded. During the day Mr. Cameron offered another resolution looking to the independence of Cuba. Mr. Quay's resolution to recommit the tariff bill went over until today.

Live Stock Figures.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—The agricultural department returns for January, 1896, show the total number of horses to be 15,124,057; mules, 2,278,946; milch cows, 16,137,586; oxen and other cattle, 32,085,409; sheep, 88,298,783, and swine, 42,842,759. The average farm prices per head are estimated for horses, $33.07; mules, $45.29; milch cows, $22.55; oxen and other cattle, $15.86; sheep, $1.70; swine, $4.35. The grand total value reaches $1,727,926,084. In number horses have decreased 4.8 per cent; mules, 2.3 per cent; milch cows, 2.3 per cent; oxen and other cattle, 6.6 per cent; sheep, 9.4 per cent, and swine, 3 per cent, since January, 1895. The estimated wool product of 1895, sheared, butchered and pulled, is 309,748,000 pounds.

Done In a Hurry.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—The nomination of E. F. Uhl to be ambassador to Germany was confirmed by the senate yesterday in little more than an hour after it had been received. The nomination was not formally referred to the committee on foreign relations, to which under ordinary circumstances it would have been sent, but the committee were canvassed, and no opposition being developed, it was decided to confirm immediately. This action was taken in conformity with the wish of the state department, where it is considered important that Mr. Uhl shall reach his destination at as early a day as practicable.

A Complete Wreck.

HALIFAX, Feb. 11.—The American fishing schooner Resolute of Gloucester, Mass., John McDonald master, bound halibut fishing, struck a rock off Lorraine, near Louisburg, during a heavy storm, and is a total loss. One of the crew of 16, a man named Rogers, was drowned by the swamping of a dory alongside. The others saved themselves with great difficulty. Not a vestige of the wreck is to be seen. The crew will be sent to Gloucester by the American consul.

Killed In Slugging Match.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 11.—As the result of a prize fight in this city on Saturday night Frank Schlechters, aged 40 years, one of the principals, is dead, and ex-Policeman Henry Pluckfelder, aged 36 years, the other principal, is in jail, charged with Schlechters' murder. The fight was the result of a political quarrel.

Kruger's Wisdom.

PRETORIA, Feb. 11.—President Kruger has notified the governor of Cape Colony that he is willing to visit England, according to the suggestion of Joseph Chamberlain, provided the subjects of the proposed conference between himself and Mr. Chamberlain are definitely specified before hand.

Light Out of Order.

HALIFAX, Feb. 11.—Schooner Mary F. Harlow, from Turk's island for Lockesport, with salt, is a total wreck at Little Hope. The captain states that Port Jolle light was out of order and misled him. It resembled Little Hope fixed light.

Birdie Gets $25,000.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—The suit for breach of promise brought by Birdie Sutherland, a ballet girl, against Dudley C. Marjoribanks, has been settled, the defendant paying Miss Sutherland £5000 and assuming the costs of the action.

Nothing Startling.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—The queen's speech, which was read at the opening of parliament today, was longer than usual, but did not announce any sensational departure in policy.

PLANS APPROVED.

Not Committed to Either Brick or Wood.

School Committee Regard S. O. Moxon's Plans as the Best.

A Special Committee Appointed to Confer with the Commissioner.

A special meeting of the School Committee was held Monday evening to consider plans for two new school houses. After some discussion the following votes were passed:

Voted,—That the School Board approve the plans made by S. O. Moxon, and the chairman of the board is hereby authorized to inform the City Council of the fact.

The Committee suggest that two entrances be made in the rear of the building to the basement, and that the cost of finishing the building in brown ash be determined before the plans are formally accepted. The School Committee do not intend by this vote to approve any system of heating and ventilating until approved by the State Inspector for this district.

Voted,—That a special committee consisting of the chairman and the superintendent confer with the Commissioner of Public Works regarding the specifications for the S. O. Moxon plans, to see that no details are omitted.

Wollaston Team on Top.

There was great sport on the Duck's Nest alleys on Monday evening. Teams A and D had a hot time. Team D was captained by Harry Reed and was composed wholly of Atlantic bowlers, while team A, which was captained by Briggs, was made up of true and tried Wollastonians, thus the rivalry. But A did D up in good shape, 2185 to 2121. J. F. Emery was high bowler on totals, 468, and Fratus was high on singles, 190. The result:

FIFTEEN DELEGATES.

Three Each from Three Wards and Two Each From Three.

The basis of representation to the Republican State convention will be as follows: One delegate for the first 75 votes cast for the Republican candidate for Governor in 1895 in each ward of a city and in each town; one delegate for each succeding 150 votes cast for the Republican candidate for Governor in 1895 in each ward of a city and in each town, or for a fractional part as large as 75 votes so cast.

Upon the above basis the LEDGER finds that Quincy will be entitled to fifteen delegates, viz.: three each from Wards One, Three and Five, and two each from Wards Two, Four and Six, as the following vote shows:

| | Votes. | Delegates. |
|---|---|---|
| Ward One | 363 | 3 |
| Ward Two | 262 | 2 |
| Ward Three | 396 | 3 |
| Ward Four | 271 | 2 |
| Ward Five | 333 | 3 |
| | 1821 | 15 |

Three hundred votes is the dividing line between two and three delegates, and 450 is required for four delegates. It will not be many years on the above basis before each of the ward will be entitled to three delegates, for Wards Two, Four and Six will reach 300 before the other wards pass 450, unless it be Ward Three.

NEED OF GOOD ROADS

Discussed by Delegates to Convention of League Wheelmen.

A Government National Highway Commission

Would Work Great Reforms In the Road Building Line.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 11.—The 15th annual assembly of the League of American Wheelmen has begun here, with a good roads convention. This is a new feature of the general assembly, and, having been once entered into, was carried on with great zest and enthusiasm, giving great encouragement to Consul Potter and the other leaders of the movement.

It was not easy to start the convention, for it was hard to get the delegates from the Hotel Rennert, where league politics were boiling hot, to the Y. M. C. A. hall, where the convention was held.

At the headquarters the managers of the various companies were running around buttonholing this or that delegate and exacting pledges from everybody.

President Willison, in calling the meeting to order, said: "This is the first 'good roads' day ever given by the league, and it will not be the last. It is but an acorn which we are planting, and from it will spring a noble oak that will overshadow the other trees in our already large collection."

Chairman Isaac B. Potter of New York next addressed the meeting briefly, saying: "New York has 27 votes and numerous proxies, and we intend to cast them for the city which makes the best showing at these sessions. Both Louisville and Toledo are evenly represented here, and our vote, of course, is still in abeyance. The attendance is not as great as it should be, but it is twice as great as was the attendance at the 'good roads' congress called by the United States government, and which was more widely advertised than was this convention. The delegates here, however, represent 40,000 wheelmen, and what transpires here will be more far-reaching in its effects than was the action of the 'good roads' congress referred to."

Mr. Potter then introduced Mayor Kennedy of Allegheny City, Pa., one of the most prominent advocates of good roads in the country, and during whose administration Allegheny City has changed from an ill-paved, ill-kept city to one of the finest in the country. Mayor Kennedy spoke of what had been done in the way of improved streets and roads in and around Allegheny City, and of the many direct and indirect benefits.

Following Mayor Kennedy, Henry W. Williams, chairman of the legislative committee of the Maryland Good Roads league, was introduced. He said: "If I told you of the work we had done, it would take but a short time; but if I tell you of what we have to do, I am afraid I would never get through." Mr. Williams gave a history of the birth of the Good Roads league of Maryland and the appointment of a legislative committee, of which he was made chairman.

Work Good and Bad.

"We did considerable work," he said, "throughout the state, and the result I consider both good and bad. Through our work we roused up the opposition of politicians, and they have been against us wherever possible, but the agitation has at length compelled these same politicians and county commissioners to make some slight concessions to public opinion, and we have the pleasure of seeing a slight improvement in the general road system of the state. We have now prepared a bill which we expect to get before the legislature for the appointment of a permanent road commission to oversee in general the road improvements throughout the state. An expert engineer is to be a member of this commission, and his knowledge is to be put at the disposal of the local county road commissioners. We predict a bright future for the good roads movement in Maryland."

D. P. Miller, chairman of the board of commissioners of Allegheny county, delivered a short address telling of the work accomplished by his confreres and himself in western Maryland. He approves of good roads, and said that if the farmers were enlightened as to the benefits to be derived from improved highways, all opposition that now exists would be wiped away.

The principal speaker at the afternoon session was General Stone of the United States bureau of road inquiry, who said in part: "The wheelmen should help to encourage the farmers who are in hard luck by joining them in securing good roads. Make the farmers see that good roads will make the city people want to live in the country and will make them live there.

"The government can and will do much," said he, "when we have a national government highway commission. That commission can, by visits to different parts of states, gain a great influence in the road building line.

"State aid to local efforts is doing good work. No state is too poor to help localities that will show an effort to help themselves. The wheelmen can co-operate with the government by having convicts work in quarries to crush the stone."

The day's exercises closed with a banquet last night at the home of the Maryland Bicycle club, at which almost 200 delegates and other guests were present. The decorations and menu were of the best, and speeches were made in response to the following toasts: President A. C. Willison, "Greeting;" Governor Lowndes, "My Maryland and Her Wheelmen;" Mayor Hooper, "My Cycling Constituents;" General Nelson A. Miles, "Cycling in the Army;" John K. Cowen, "Wheels, Political, Railroad, Cycle and Otherwise;" General Roy Stone, "Paternalism in Cycling and in Government;" General Felix Angus, "The Press and Its Mission in the Cause of Good Roads;" United States Senator Lindsay of Kentucky, "In Old Kaintuck;" Isaac B. Potter of New York, "How to Make the Wheels Go Round Faster;" ex-Mayor Latrobe, "What I Know About Wheelmen and What They Want."

Doing What He Can.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 11.—United States Minister Terrell is using his influence with the Turkish government in order to procure the necessary escorts and protection for Miss Clara Barton and her assistants while they are distributing relief to the suffering Armenians.

In Johannesburg.

Long before daylight the square is full of ox wagons, some from distances occupying days to traverse, and the buyers of forage, oats, corn, mealie meal, firewood, poultry, eggs, etc., are busy as soon as they can see. Here the middleman makes a good profit, often riding far out on the roads to get at the illiterate Dutch farmer before the latter reaches the market. Here is an amusing instance of a bargain recently overheard on the square;

An English trader purchased a wagon load of stuff from a Boer, and by means of a few figures and calculations easily tossed off with many flourishes makes out that the amount he has to pay the Dutchman is about half of what it ought to be if correctly reckoned up at the price agreed. Oom Paul cannot reckon much, but has a Ready Reckoner and points to and wants the larger amount. "What's that?" says the other. "Let's look at it." Then, "Why, that's last year's Ready Reckoner. Look here, man, it's marked 1894. It's no good now."

"Allamachta," says the Boer. "I did not notice that." And he plods off home, wagon and all, content with the lesser sum.

No expense is spared in high living. A special fruit train is run daily from Natal and fish is brought enormous distances. All South African fish, however, are either tasteless or of a milk and water or insipid flavor. The vegetable market opens each morning at dawn. At 8 the lots are all sold at auction, and Malays pile up their carts and pannier baskets to sell their stuff from house to house before the midday heat. In England meat is dear and bread and vegetables cheap. In the Transvaal bread and vegetables are dear—a small roll not large enough to be dignified with the name of loaf costing sixpence—and meat is cheap.—Chambers' Journal.

Usefulness Preferable to Brilliancy.

Dr. C. H. Parkhurst says that a lightning flash is brilliant to behold, but he would rather have a candle to read by. There are few lightning flashes and many candles in the world. A "brilliant" young man or woman isn't such an acquisition as some people would have us believe. The plodding habit of dogged toil can accomplish more than spasmodic freshets of enthusiasm.

The work of the world is done in its workshops, not its talking shows, conventions and "enthusiastic" gatherings, whose enthusiam never, by any chance, percolates into the adjoining street or slum.

The girl who is plain in face and homely of figure, but kindly of heart and tender and true, is to be preferred by an honest man for wifehood before her dashing, laughing sisters, rare and handsome, whose dainty fingers never baked a pie, whose hearts never bore another's burden. The light of the home is generally the quiet, humble, unobtrusive sister or brother who is not cursed with the waywardness of genius.

Beauty and talent have unequaled opportunities when combined with directing character. But the plan of nature never intended that the many should trust to them, so they are given to the few. The majority of us depend on our power to be useful—determinedly useful—for our life's value. And the daily effort thus to live has made this world and our national heritage much what they are and give to us.—New York Ledger.

How Mines Are Bought Nowadays.

The time has passed when mine properties are bought on assays. The higher the ore goes the more suspicious the investor becomes. A mining proposition, to receive attention in these days, must have a reasonable assay value, and must stand the test of expert examination. A low grade camp, it is said, is better in the long run for the mine owner, and infinitely better for a community in which such mines are situated, as more men are employed and more money is taken out than in camps where the mines are narrow and rich. This is shown in the Cœur d'Alenes, where over 60,000 tons of ore are mined monthly to produce 10,000 tons of concentrates. Every one is benefited where such conditions prevail.

Mine investors have become suspicious because in the past they have been most unmercifully worked by unscrupulous mining men and promoters. Mine experting has become a science, and it is a difficult thing to improve upon a mine expert of national reputation, and only men of this character are employed to pass upon a mining proposition the purchase of which involves the expenditure of large sums of money.—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

Patronizing Infants.

A characteristic instance was given at a dinner party lately of the present day tendency for children to patronize their parents. At a preparatory school the children were told to write down what they thought to be the object of education. One small boy wrote, "The object of education is to be able to talk for your father and mother when you go abroad," and another boy, doubtless remembering the oft repeated reflection at home, when he had fallen into some scrape, that "the holidays would soon be over and he would be safely back at school," wrote, with unconscious cynicism, "The object of education is to get you out of your parents' way."—Gentlewoman.

Inquisitive.

His Father—Yes, my son.

"Is an owlet a small owl?"

"Yes, Tommy."

"Is an egglet a small egg?"

"Yes, yes, you might call it that."

"Then what is a bullet? 'Tisn't a small bull, is it?"—London Tit-Bits.

A Shock to His Complacency.

Jaggs—Why is it every one laughs at a fool?

Snaggs—They don't. Some one was trying to humor you.—Adams Freeman.

Coffee Drinking.

There are some persons who indulge to a considerable excess in coffee drinking, and many more who go to even greater excess in the use of tea. It has accordingly been contended by some abstainers from these two substances that they are capable of generating a form of inebriety corresponding to etherism. Unquestionably intemperate tea and coffee drinking will give rise to serious mischief. The inordinate consumer of strong tea may become a dyspeptic wreck, a sleepless hypochondriac, with a decrepit nervous system, the victim of a deep, intense melancholy, with, in some cases, a suicidal tendency. The immoderate indulger in coffee, black and strong, may lose all appetite for healthy food, eat little, suffer from tremors, acute neuralgic and other pains, excessive thirst, agonizing headache and a feeling of intolerable dryness and heat. He may become pinched and emaciated, have a feeble circulation and a constant fear of falling, with a blurred vision, as if looking through light brownish media.

These, however, are the symptoms of tea and coffee poisoning. They bear witness, so to speak, to theine and caffeine intoxication, minus the anæsthesia and paralysis of alcoholic drunkenness. Dr. Kerr, in his practice, has never seen an uncontrollable craving for tea or coffee to which all natural affections and duties were subordinated. He is therefore unable to recognize these phases of excessive drinking as manifestations of narcomania, the disease which is characterized by an overpowering impulse to intoxication at all risks.—New York Sun.

Pope Leo's Reading.

The pope's favorite poets are Virgil and Dante. He knows a great part of both by heart and takes pleasure in quoting them. When Father Michael, the apostolic prefect to Erithrea, was taking his leave with the other Franciscans who accompanied him to Africa, his holiness recited to them with great spirit Dante's canto upon St. Francis.

The pope reads the newspapers, passages of interest being marked for him by readers in order to save him time. He frequently writes letters to the bishops and encyclicals in a polished and Ciceronian style of Latin. The encyclicals are printed at the private press of the Vatican, an institution founded by him and furnished with all modern improvements. They are first published in The Osservatore Romano, the official daily paper of the Vatican, and then finally translated into Italian and other languages and sent out to the bishops abroad. Leo XIII writes excellent verses, both in Latin and Italian, and likes to see and talk with men of letters as well as to read their works. Two years ago he requested Professor Brunelli of Perugia to buy for him the poetical works of the Abbe Zanella. The request is characteristic, for his holiness insisted upon paying for the book like any one else.—Marion Crawford in Century.

Elkins and Camden.

Stephen B. Elkins tells an interesting story of his election to the senate. "I was sitting in my study at my country home," said he, "awaiting the returns that should tell me whether or not I had been chosen to take the place of Senator Camden. The operator at the telegraph station had orders to open all telegrams addressed to me, and to telephone their contents to me immediately. Suddenly the telephone bell rang, and the children's governess, who answered the 'phone, came to me and told me that the person at the other end of the wire was saying something about 'shoes,' she couldn't quite make it out. 'Oh,' said I, 'it's my wife's shoemaker, probably. Tell him to let the matter rest until tomorrow.' She delivered the message, but returned shortly to say that the man insisted on talking to me. I went to the telephone. It was the telegraph operator, and the message he was trying to transmit to me was: 'When shall I send you my shoes? Johnson R. Camden.' Then I knew that I had been chosen to fill the shoes of that worthy gentleman."

ERIE MEDICAL CO., Buffalo, N. Y.

If a man knew he was going to be hanged, he would certainly make every effort to prevent it. He would do everything he could and strain every nerve to the last minute to get himself out of his predicament. Men have been saved from hanging after the rope was around their necks. There are ways of dying that are not so quick that are even more certain. The man who neglects his health, and who in sickness refuses to take medicine, really has the rope of disease around his neck. He will die if he doesn't throw it off. A man who would struggle against hanging may yet be careless about his health. He may be traveling straight toward consumption and pay no attention to it, and yet death by consumption is much more terrible than death by hanging. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will cure 98 per cent. of all cases of consumption. Consumption is likely to be caused by weakness and in its turn, it increases the weakness. The "Golden Medical Discovery" is an invigorating, strength-giving and flesh-making medicine. It increases the appetite, puts the digestive organs in perfect order, purifies and enriches the blood, and builds up firm, healthy flesh.

In one chapter of Dr. Pierce's great thousand page family doctor book—"The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," are scores of letters from people who have been cured of consumption, lingering coughs, throat and bronchial diseases by the use of "Golden Medical Discovery." Their full names and addresses are given and their cases were generally pronounced hopeless by the local doctors. Twenty-one (21) one-cent stamps, to pay for mailing only, will secure a free copy of this great book. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, No. 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

Accounts Are Straight.

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 11.—Charles H. Baeny, assistant bookkeeper of the Western Union Telegraph company, is missing. There are no evidences of financial difficulties in the office, and his absence is attributed to mental troubles.

Bodies Coming Ashore.

AMESBURY, Mass., Feb. 11.—The surf breaking on Salisbury beach still continues to churn into smaller fragments the wreckage from the ill-fated schooner Florida. The fourth body, that of a sailor not yet identified, was recovered yesterday. At 8:30 last night the fifth body came ashore. It was apparently that of Mate McCuller. A close watch is being kept and the recovery of the remaining three bodies of the crew is expected on the next tide.

Not an Elopement.

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 11.—A sensation was caused here by the receipt of the news that Miss L. F. Olney, daughter of ex-Mayor Olney of this city, was married yesterday, in New York, to W. S. Keene of Pawtucket, while her father, mother and brother remained in this city. Mr. Olney refused to discuss the occurrence, but said it is not an elopement.

Reform at Providence.

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 11.—Chief of Police Baker, who was elected by the "reform" element recently, took his first step in the work yesterday by issuing orders to all the captains to close all gambling and disreputable houses, and keep them closed. This is the beginning of a vigorous attempt at reform.

Law Asked to Step In.

BOSTON, Feb. 11.—The aldermen yesterday concurred with the common council in a resolve condemning certain hotel keepers for discrimination against Bishop Arnett of Ohio, and recommending inquiry by the district attorney into the circumstances.

Stabbers Out In Force.

BOSTON, Feb. 11.—Three stabbing affrays occurred last night in the North End, in one of which William O'Neil was badly cut in the neck, ear and face, and McLaughlin, his assailant, broke his arm.

New England Briefs.

The liabilities of Charles H. George, ex-postmaster of Providence, who has assigned, will reach $100,000.

Fire destroyed the immense stock barn on the summer place of S. E. Peabody at Kernwood, Mass. The live stock was saved. The loss is $6500.

Frederick Cyrenius of Oswego, N. Y., has sold a patented device known as the automatic chemical fire extinguisher, for $10,000, to a newly incorporated company at Hartford.

The new trial of William Chase, charged with poisoning John Holloway, began at Newport, Vt., yesterday. Holloway died of poisoning March 8, 1894, after a dance. Poison was mixed with liquor, and it is alleged Chase gave Holloway the liquor after a dance.

In the superior criminal court at Boston, Charles Burns, for threatening a bank clerk and forging a check, was sentenced to 16 years in prison. Mike Powers, for robbery, received 10 years in state prison, and John Brown was given eight years in prison for breaking and entering.

A Talkative Young Woman.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 11.—Lulu May Hollingsworth, who is supposed to know something about the Fort Thomas murder mystery, made another alleged confession last night. She says the death of Pearl Bryan was caused by an abortion, and that it was performed on a stairway in this city. Miss Hollingsworth says that she performed the abortion at the request of Miss Bryan. She also claims to have received a letter from Jackson, in which he said that Miss Bryan died in his room; that he hired a horse and buggy and employed a negro to assist him. The negro, with the body of Miss Bryan, drove to Fort Thomas, where Jackson was in waiting. The negro cut the head off the young woman with a cleaver and Jackson threw it into the river from the suspension bridge. The police here believe Miss Hollingsworth is a notoriety seeker, and discredit her story. So far she has been unable to verify her story.

The English Millions.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 11.—The will of William H. English was probated yesterday. The estate is estimated to be worth $5,000,000. He gives $2000 to Brownhill cemetery, the interest to be used in keeping up the English monument; $2500 to the Indiana Historical society; $10,000 to the completion of the history of Indiana; to Miss Ruth Hedges, confidential clerk, $5000 in money and certain real estate in this city—this to be accepted and receipted for as final settlement. The remainder of the estate is divided between his son and daughter. The provision looking to final settlement with the confidential clerk is supposed to preclude any contest, even if one were contemplated.

KATIE AND THE OLD GUITAR.

The sweetest strain that ever
My raptured ears have heard—
I know that memory never
Can lose a single word—
Was on a balmy evening
That crowned a summer day
When Katie tuned the old guitar
And sang my heart away.

The happy starlight beaming
Upon her lily throat
Set wistful fancy dreaming
With every haunting note.
It was no idle ballad,
No senseless modern lay;
With "Bonnie Annie Laurie," lo,
She sang my heart away.

And when the song was over
And Katie breathed a sigh,
She, too, could boast a lover
Who would lay him down and die.
'Twas then I told my secret,
And still I bless the day
When Katie tuned the old guitar
And sang my heart away.

—Samuel Minturn Peck.

A MATCHMAKER.

"I am sure, Cousin Molly, that Mr. Beaumont is in love with you."

"Nonsense, Nellie! He knows very little about me. I have only been staying with you three weeks."

"But don't you believe in love at first sight?"

"I am sure I don't know, but"—

"Now, be sensible, Molly. You know you are very fond of him."

"I don't know anything of the sort. I don't care a bit about him—that is, I think he is very agreeable and handsome and kind hearted and all that"—

"You might add 'clever, virtuous and fascinating.'"

"Why?"

"Because then you would have given him all the qualities that a woman can expect in the man she would marry."

"Really, Nellie, I believe you are nothing but a scheming little matchmaker."

"In this instance perhaps I am. But it is certainly a very desirable match, and you are both head over ears in love with each other."

"I protest I don't love him a bit."

"You don't know your own mind."

"Oh, yes, I do. I don't love him, and I wouldn't marry him."

"Do you mean that?"

"Well, of course I do."

"Then I'll marry him myself."

"You?"

"Why not?"

"Oh, of course it is nothing to me."

"Quite so."

"But I think it very mean of you—very, very mean—not to have told me that you cared for him."

"Now, Molly, just listen. Mr. Beaumont, I am sure, thinks you do not like him and that you would refuse him if he asked you to marry."

"Do you think so?"

"Yes. So I believe, from something he dropped, that he is going to propose to me this afternoon. Now, if you slip into the drawing room and hide behind the screen"—

"I shouldn't think of doing any such thing. The idea!"

"Do as I tell you, dear, and you will hear me refuse him. I was only jesting when I said I would marry Mr. Beaumont myself."

"Then you are sure you don't love him the least little bit, Nellie, dear?"

"Not in the least. You will hear me tell him so if you wait."

* * * * * *

"Well, Mr. Beaumont, I have sounded my cousin, Molly."

"And do you really think I may hope for success?"

"I am sure of it. She is very fond of you, but not yet fully aware of the fact. We women are curious creatures."

"It was very good of you to offer me your advice and help."

"Not at all. We are very old friends. Now, don't you be rash, or you will spoil everything. You must do exactly as I tell you. You must come into the drawing room and propose to me."

"Propose to you?"

"Yes, and mind you act the part well."

"I don't understand you."

"Well, while you are proposing to me, Molly will be behind the screen. When she hears your protestations of love for me, she will think she has lost you and will discover the true state of her heart."

"But, really, this seems rather"—

"Now, don't argue. Do just as I tell you. Come into the drawing room at once, or she will suspect collusion."

"One moment. Don't you think"—

"Not a word. I hear Molly coming down stairs. I will sit here on this sofa. When I raise my hand, begin. Can you tell me of a good novel, Mr. Beaumont?"

"Well—er—it is rather a responsibility recommending novels to ladies nowadays. There are as many different schools of readers as of writers."

"But you know by this time my taste in fiction."

"Not so well, I am afraid, as I could wish. Hem! If you would—er—only let me become your sole literary reader, taster and adviser for life!"

"I am afraid I don't understand you, Mr. Beaumont."

"Cannot you guess what has brought me here this afternoon. Let me be frank with you. Oh, Nellie, we have been friends now for a long time. Every year you become dearer to me and more necessary for my happiness. Will you not become my wife? Speak, darling! Say you consent. You cannot guess how I long to have you always by my side. Say yes, and make me the happiest man in all the wide world."

From where she sat Nellie saw the flutter of a light blue gown as it passed quickly from behind the screen to the open door. Molly had prematurely fled.

"Do not keep me in suspense," he went on. "Say, will you be my wife?"

"Yes."

Mr. Beaumont leaped to his feet in amazement. Nellie did not speak a word. With a look of anger on his face he stepped behind the screen. There was nobody there.

"What does this mean?"

"It simply means, Mr. Beaumont, that you have asked me to marry you, and I have consented."

"I merely did so at your suggestion because"—

"Exactly, and it was good of you to adopt my suggestion. I have accepted your offer, and I hope I shall not have reason to regret it."

"Nonsense, Miss Nellie! You knew it was only in jest. I like a good practical joke, but surely this one is a little undignified. It was understood that you would refuse."

"I made no such promise, Mr. Beaumont."

* * * * * *

"Why, Molly, dear, whatever is the matter?"

"Don't come near me! I'll ne-never for-forgive you. You are a horrid, mean th-thing. I'm packing up and go-going away."

"Now, don't be a silly girl. What have I done?"

"You pro-promised to refuse him, and then actually accepted him. You treacherous creature! I'll never speak to you again. To play such a vile trick on me! How could you be so heartless?"

"But I saw you leave the room before I gave him my answer."

"I came back and listened outside the door—I heard you accept him, and then rushed away."

"My dearest Molly, it was all a practical joke. I thought you were out of hearing, and I was just teasing him. I am so sorry I have hurt your feelings and will confess all. I have been hoaxing both of you."

"How?"

"Mr. Beaumont never meant to propose to me—he loves you alone—but he went through the farce at my request. He is waiting down stairs to see you. So bathe your eyes, make yourself pretty, and come down. I gave the poor man quite a fright, but I am awfully penitent and he has forgiven me. I will tell you all about it. There—we're good friends again, aren't we?"

* * * * * *

"My darling Molly, you have made me so happy."

"But don't you feel a terrible bigamist—accepted by two women in the same day?"

"It was a cruel jest of Nellie's."

"Yet she meant no harm."

"Nevertheless I should like to pay her back in her own coin."

"Yes. How can we manage it?"

"Look, Molly! Here is Captain Durston coming up the drive. We will pretend that Nellie and I are engaged."

"Delightful."

The captain entered and exchanged greetings.

"Have you heard the news, Captain Durston?" said Molly.

"What news?"

"Nellie has accepted an offer of marriage."

"Yes? I am delighted to say I am quite aware of it."

Molly and Mr. Beaumont exchanged glances.

"Why, who told you?"

"Ha, ha! Who in the world should tell me but your cousin herself?"

"Nellie? Impossible!"

"Not at all. I have just authorized the announcement in the county newspaper."

"The deuce you have!" exclaimed Mr. Beaumont excitedly.

"And why not, sir?"

"Because it is utterly false, sir."

"Sh-h! What is the matter?" cried Nellie, running into the room. "Surely you two gentlemen are not going to quarrel here."

"Captain Durston states on your authority, Miss Nellie, that you are engaged to be married."

"It is perfectly true. I believe I am."

Molly threw herself into an easy chair and began to sob and show signs of becoming hysterical. Nellie and Durston stood looking bewildered, while Beaumont regarded Nellie with a glance of mingled surprise and contempt.

"I thought," said Beaumont, "this farce was at an end, Miss Nellie."

"Farce! What do you mean?"

Suddenly a smile broke over her face, and she burst into a peal of laughter. As soon as she was capable of speech she explained that she was privately engaged to Captain Durston three days before, and that he had actually come that afternoon to announce the fact. She also enlightened her future husband as to the cause of all the confusion.

Then everybody laughed, everybody congratulated everybody else and everybody was in the end supremely happy. But three of the company insisted that Nellie was a wicked, meddlesome, mischievous little thing, and that she would have to be kept well in hand when she became Mrs. Durston.—London Tit-Bits.

Revenge.

The clock in the church tower struck the hour of 3—3 in the morning.

An object on the mantel caught his glaring eye. He picked it up and read the inscription:

"To the quietest and best behaved baby. Shagwox's Baby Show, 1895."

Laughing bitterly, he crushed the fragile silver mug with his slippered heel, kicked off the slippers and wearily sank into bed.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

"Helping Somewhere."

A writer tells how a little child once preached a sermon to him.

"Is your father at home?" I asked a small child on our village doctor's doorstep.

"No," he said; "he's away."

"Where do you think I could find him?"

"Well," he said, with a considering air, "you've got to look for some place where people are sick or hurt or something like that. I don't know where he is, but he's helping somewhere."

Spiritualistic Fraud Exposed.

GLOVERSVILLE, N. Y., Feb. 11.—Samuel Thompson of Kingston has been giving seances here for several months. The circle was harmonious until a human form came before the curtain, purporting to be the spirit of John Roberts, a prominent Odd Fellow, who died last fall. The medium motioned several of the fraternity to come forward, and the spirit gave them grips peculiar to the order. The spirit was dragged into the middle of the room and divested of its regalia, a piece of cheese cloth. It proved to be Thompson himself, and he begged for mercy and was given a few hours to leave the city. He disappeared during the night.

Without Known Motive.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—What appears to have been a cold-blooded murder was committed yesterday afternoon in the Institution for the Improved Instruction of Deaf Mutes. The victim was Professor Max Eglau, 62 years old, an instructor in drawing at the institute. There were several gashes on the back of the head, and near the body was found a bloody iron shovel, with which the murder evidently had been committed. No apparent motive for the crime was discovered.

Officers Implicated.

OMAHA, Feb. 11.—A scandal developed at Fort Omaha yesterday, when Privates Cavanaugh and Murphy were arrested for prize fighting, and 100 others who witnessed the fight expect to be ordered to the guardhouse. It is stated that the two men fought for a purse that was furnished by the officers at the fort. Colonel Bates, while he has no doubt that there was a purse in sight, says he is sure it was not made up by the officers.

New Turkey Works.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 11.—Turkey's plan to implicate the American missionaries in Armenian affairs is being steadily pursued. An attempt has been made to arrest Mr. Knapp, one of the hardest working missionaries at Bitlis, on a charge of sedition and murder, based on an accusation signed under coercion by some Armenians who were in jail. Mr. Knapp appealed to Minister Terrell, who learned that the charge was wholly unfounded, and was a mere pretext to drive Mr. Knapp from the country. Mr. Terrell insists that, unless the charge is abandoned, Mr. Knapp shall be brought here and tried before him.

Sickness at Cornell.

ITHACA, N. Y., Feb. 11.—Although Buchanan, the Cornell student, who was attacked with smallpox, has practically recovered, sickness in the university has broken out in another direction. W. D. Pomeroy is sick with scarlet fever and N. C. Cushing has scarlatina. Messrs. A. M. Myers and C. Mix have the measles.

HELD WITHOUT BAIL.

Mrs. Quinlan Suspected of Having Murdered Her Sister.

No Evidence Offered by Counsel For Defense.

Takes the Opportunity to Say a Word Detrimental to Police.

BOSTON, Feb. 12.—Ida Quinlan, accused of the murder of her sister, Sophia Grant, at Charlestown, on Feb. 1, had her preliminary examination in the Charlestown district court yesterday. She was held without bail for the grand jury.

The following were heard: Dr. Harris, medical examiner; Dr. Wood of the Harvard Medical school, who examined the supposed weapon and the skirt taken from the prisoner; Dr. O'Brien, Officer McTiernan, Sergeant Fessenden and W. D. Doughty. They substantially reported the testimony with which the public is familiar, and were subjected to cross-examination by Mr. Corbett, the prisoner's counsel.

Mr. Corbett said he did not think he would offer any evidence. He said that when the crime was discovered it was necessary for the police to Go to Work and Do Something.

"Your honor," he went on, "sees the result of their labors, or, at least, some of them. Whenever a person finds the body of a murdered man or woman, that person is looked upon with suspicion by the police and the authorities."

He asked if it wasn't a reasonable thing for Ida Quinlan to do, to send for a physician when she found the body of her sister. Speaking of the wounds upon the body, he said that the blow in the face was not the act of a woman. That was a man's act.

Mr. Corbett said he did not think the evidence was strong enough to hold the woman for the grand jury. The blood on the skirt was the only evidence worth considering, and there was no evidence that it was human blood. He asked for the discharge of the prisoner.

Judge Bragg, in his decision, said that the crime was certainly murder, or nothing, on account of its atrocity.

"The only evidence there is," said he, 'is the blood. That is the very strongest kind of circumstantial evidence. It has not been explained. In this state of affairs I cannot see how I can do anything but hold the defendant for the grand jury."

The defendant was returned to Charles street jail without bail to await the action of the grand jury.

ON BEACON HILL.

Biennial Resolve Passes the House—The Hooker Statue—Rapid Transit.

BOSTON, Feb. 12.—Rapid transit in this city promises to again become an absorbing topic on Beacon Hill, as yesterday a bill was filed entitled "An act to incorporate the Lancaster Elevated Railway company, and to promote rapid transit in the city of Boston." The features set forth are 5-cent fares and free transfers. The capital stock at the start will not be less than $6,000,000, with privilege of increasing to $10,000,000.

The promoters are said to be prominent bankers. The bill is drafted to include all the regulations affecting railway corporations under the laws of Massachusetts. It provides that the corporation may construct an electric railway on the plan of a system invented by George A. Lancaster. It may use electricity or any other power, and specifies streets to be used and locations of stations, besides other details, such as acquiring property, etc.

After a spirited debate, the amended resolve for state biennial elections passed the house by a vote of 175 yeas and 54 nays. Seven Democrats voted for the resolve and seven Republicans voted against it.

The resolve providing for erecting, in or on the state house grounds, an equestrian statue in bronze of General Hooker was ordered to a third reading after eulogistic addresses.

The insurance committee reported a bill requiring mutual fire insurance companies to have a reserve of $100,000 instead of $25,000.

A petition was presented for legislation providing for the appointment of a commission to investigate the subject of the sale and use of nitro-glycerine and other high explosives and report a bill to regulate the sale and use of the same.

Becoming Quite Frequent.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 12.—Another fire scare in this city last night brought into the lumber district the entire Cambridge fire department and strong re-enforcements from the Somerville and Boston departments. An explosion from unknown causes was the first intimation received that a fire was raging in a big building on Albany street, leased yesterday by the Boston Woven Hose company as a storage warehouse. The large furniture factory of Badger & Co. caught fire on the roof, which was completely burned, and the valuable stock badly soaked. While the firemen were working in the Badger factory one of the walls of the Woven Hose building fell upon 20 of the firemen. All but two escaped serious injuries. The loss will range between $100,000 and $125,000. Incendiarism is the cause. Four fires on three out of four succeeding Tuesday evenings set at the same hour lends a weird mystery to the work of this fire devil. Many have come to the conclusion that the guilty person has a peculiar streak in his madness.

Combination on Fish.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Feb. 12.—Owners of several cargoes of frozen herrings, unsold and afloat in the harbor met yesterday and decided to form the frozen herring company, with the object in view of managing and controlling the output and price of cargoes of Gloucester vessels. A contract with a binding clause will be drawn up for signing by the various owners.

A Disorderly Crowd.

MERIDEN, Conn., Feb. 12.—A special meeting of over 2000 taxpayers here last night, to decide which section of the city should secure the state road appropriation, broke up in great disorder. One of the factions rushed to the platform and attempted to assault Councilman Kennard, the moderator, and it required a dozen policemen to disperse the excited crowd.

Thinning Out.

RUTLAND, Vt., Feb. 12.—The annual encampments of the Grand Army department of Vermont and the Woman's Relief corps opened here yesterday. Department Commander Cannon, in his annual report, said that no new posts had been organized, but one post had surrendered its charter. The number of veterans in good standing Jan. 1 was 4891; net total loss in membership for the year, 473, of which 122 were by death; number of posts, 112; amount expended in charity, $1659.38.

Complaint From Democrats.

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 12.—The Democratic state central committee has authorized the preparation of a communication to the president asking why their recommendations to office are not considered. The cause is the appointment of J. S. McKay, a Republican sympathizer, to the office of United States marshal, in place of John T. Driman, recommended by the committee.

What Next?

TORONTO, Feb. 12.—Since the discovery of the method of photography by cathode rays, Messrs. Wright, McLennan and Keel of the School of Practical Science have been continuously experimenting. Yesterday afternoon they made the remarkable discovery that pictures may be taken practically instantaneously, instead of with a time exposure of 30 to 40 minutes. This they succeeded in doing by covering the tube with a glass bell jar, by which they were enabled to focus the rays.

Irish Politics.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—The Times says that Michael Davitt is freely mentioned as a compromise for the nomination to succeed Justin McCarthy as chairman of the Irish National league. But in well-informed national circles it is thought another trial of strength between the Dillonites and the Healyites will occur. It is rumored in Irish circles that the government commission has reported that Ireland is overtaxed to the extent of over £2,000,000.

A statement from Shea was opened after the execution. It said in part: "On the verge of death, I desire to say that I do not think I had a fair trial. Extraordinary means were taken to convict me. I die for a crime I did not commit. I am an innocent man. I bid you all farewell."

Cuban Correspondence Submitted to House.

Shows That Secretary Olney Has Looked After Americans' Interests.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—The president has transmitted to the house such correspondence relative to Cuba as he deems not incompatible with the public interest. This is in response to a house resolution. The papers are voluminous, and include over 2000 letters which passed between Secretary Olney and Senor de Lome, the Spanish minister; Consul General Williams and others.

The letters of the secretary of state to Mr. de Lome, the Spanish minister, insisted upon the right of Mr. Williams, our consul general at Habana, to protest against the action of General Campos, then governor general of Cuba, in confining American citizens and otherwise transgressing on American rights. General Campos had denied this right.

Mr. Olney, under date of Sept. 26, 1895, insisted on this right under the treaty of 1870 in vigorous terms. Mr. de Lome, in reply, was inclined to evade the issue, pleading that General Campos did not intend to give offense. This part of the correspondence concludes with a cable from Mr. Taylor, our minister at Madrid, dated Oct. 21, announcing that the minister of foreign affairs had agreed to recognize the rights claimed for consuls under the treaty of 1870.

The correspondence under the head of the progress of the insurrection includes the reports made by Mr. Williams, our consul general; Mr. Hyatt, consul at Santiago de Cuba; Mr. Barker, commercial agent at Sagua la Grande; Mr. Casanova, consul at Cienfuegos, and other consular officers.

As early as April 4, 1895, Mr. Barker, in a report, described the great advantage of the insurgents in being able to harass the regular troops, predicted the ravages of fever among the Spanish troops and the decreasing of the Spanish chances of subduing the insurgents as each day went by, and prophesying that unless the subjugation was accomplished before the crop was finished the accessions of the insurgents would be so great that Spain's dominion over the island would be "in great jeopardy, if not lost." The skirmishes, battles, victories, defeats, losses and captures are duly chronicled.

In the large amount of matter relating to the protection of American property in Cuba is a letter from Acting Secretary Uhl to Vice Consul Springer at Habana. The letter says in part: "It is a generally accepted principle of international law that a sovereign government is not responsible to alien residents for injuries that may be received within its territories from insurgents whose conduct it cannot control."

Waller In Error.

A communication from the president was received in the senate yesterday, which, on breaking the seal, proved to be the long-expected report on the Waller case.

This included a report from Secretary Olney, and all the correspondence in the case of John L. Waller, ex-United States consul to Tamatave, and now confined in a French prison under conviction of treason.

Secretary Olney says that Waller was unquestionably guilty of the offense charged, and that the penalty inflicted would be considered exceedingly moderate, but the French government made an effort to release Waller from further imprisonment and to pardon his offense on condition that the affair be thereby terminated as between the two governments, and that the United States should make no claim for damages in behalf of the accused ex-consul, based on his arrest, conviction and imprisonment.

Ambassador Eustis, it appears from the correspondence, has been instructed to give notice to the French government of the acceptance by the United States of these conditions, and to exchange the notes necessary to carry out the arrangements. Waller, however, as had been intimated, acting under the advice of his wife and his brother-in-law, who are here, has not consented to the arrangement, and still insists that he shall receive compensation from France.

He charged that he had received ill-treatment while being taken from Madagascar to France, and demanded indemnity. Secretary Olney says, should he desire to resort to an action in the French courts to sustain this claim, Mr. Eustis could furnish security, and therefore there seemed to be nothing which ought to stand in the way of the offer of the French government for his immediate release. Mr. Eustis has been instructed to furnish Waller with means to reach the United States, should he desire to come here.

With reference to the Waller rubber concession, which he claimed was confiscated by France, Secretary Olney says there is no proof of the nature, extent, validity or value of the concession, and that it is certain that the French authorities have always held the concession to be without any validity.

The communication was referred without opposition or debate to the committee on foreign affairs.

Among the many gathering announced for tonight are: Concert of the Boston Ideal Club, the annual banquet of the Quincy Grocers' Association; supper and entertainment at Universalist church and dance of the Alp's club.

The high wind Tuesday afternoon was the cause of a swinging ground on the fire alarm circuit and was the cause of the numerous blows on the alarm bells about 3 30 The first that were struck registered Box 52 at the Central station and the apparatus had a run to Wollaston for nothing.

Upon motion of Hon. W. B. Rice of this city the Associated Board of Trade of Boston has voted to establish a committee on metropolitan district. Mr. Rice has resigned from the committee on roads and highways and will probably be chairman of the new committee.

The sudden appearance of the Central Station apparatus at box 52, corner of Elmwood avenue and Farrington street, Wollaston, at 3 30 Tuesday afternoon, created quite a sensation, as no alarm had been sounded by the whistle. Inside of a minute the streets were thronged with an excited crowd of men, women and children yelling "Where's the fire! where's the fire!" But there was no fire. The alarm was caused by crossed wires.

Child Seriously Burned.

A two year old child of William Fitch was severely, if not fatally, burned at Cohasset this morning. Mrs. Fitch heard the child's cries in an adjoining room, but owing to her feeble condition it was with great difficulty that she was enabled to go to her daughter's assistance. When she reached the room the child was enveloped in flames. The mother succeeded in extinguishing the fire but not until the child had been terribly burned. The accident was caused by the child's playing with matches. Mrs. Fitch was severely burned about the hands and arms while trying to extinguish the flames.

DR. ASH WRITES.

He Quotes Authorities Favorable to Use of Antitoxin.

To the Editors of the Ledger:

Recently there appeared in your columns articles concerning the use of antitoxin in the treatment of diphtheria, and as the Board of Health has been admonished in a measure by one of the writers, I, as a member of that Board, submit the following for publication, provided the encroachment is not too great upon your valuable space. I do not intend to be personal in my writings but owing to circumstances already transpired I may be so judged. My only object is to place before the public, facts which have been found and proven in localities where the following statistics have been gleaned:

| Reporter. | Cases. | Death. | Mort. with antitoxin. Per cent. | Prev. Mort. without antitoxin. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Roux & Martin, Paris | 449 | 109 | 24.5 | 51.7 |
| Ehrlich, Berlin | 220 | 52 | 23 2 | 34 7 |
| Bokai, Buda Pest | 35 | 5 | 14.2 | 53 8 |
| Katz, Berlin | 128 | 17 | 13 2 | 38 9 |
| Arouson, Berlin | 255 | 31 | 12.1 | 45. |
| Weighen, Berlin | 65 | 18 | 28.8 | 40. |
| Dr. White of Willard Parker Hospital | 32 | 8 | 25.0 | 42.7 |
| Reports of London Lancet | 79 | 9 | 11.4 | |

Saltmann of Vienna reports a mortality of 40 per cent. in 71 cases before the use of antitoxin was introduced and since then 122 cases treated with antitoxin with a mortality of 18 per cent.

Dr. Hermann Biggs reports in 150 cases where antitoxin was used by the New York Board of Health the returns gave a mortality of only 12 per cent..

Reports of Washburn, Goodall and Card in the London Lancet of 72 cases to which antitoxin was admiuistered a mortality of 19.4 per cent resulted, where as the average fatality without antitoxin was 39 per cent.

Prof. Virchow, of Vienna, reports from April to November 1895, 335 cases to which antitoxin was administered 35 deaths resulting making a mortality of 10 5 per cent. whereas without antitoxin the mortality was 43 per cent.

Dr. F. Gordon Morrill, of The Children's Hospital, Boston, reports that in 1894 three distinct outbreaks of diphtheria were cut short by the administration of antitoxin and during these periods every patient admitted to this hospital was subjected to antitoxin for its immunizing effect and out of nearly 500 such cases he failed to see any harmful result.

Dr. Welch, of Baltimore, Maryland, reports from Johns Hopkins Hospital 7166 cases treated with antitoxin with a mortality of only 17 per cent. and 2276 cases treated before the introduction of antitoxin there was a mortality of 42 per cent. Dr. Welch considers antitoxin a specific curative agent for diphtheria and says that it is most effective if given during the first three days.

The Newton City Hospital reports from August 1, 1895, to November 1, 1895, 24 cases treated with antitoxin and not one death.

Dr. Curtis of Newton Board of Health states during the same period 34 cases were reported to the board where antitoxin was not used with the mortality of 35 per cent. In the Newton City Hospital the diagnosis of diphtheria was verified by microscopical examination in every case. The same is done in all hospitals of today.

Dr. W. H. Parks, of the Willard Parker Hospital, New York, colleague of Dr. Joseph E. Winters (quoted by two of the writers of the several articles which appeared in your paper) has stated that the mortality of diphtheria at the above hospital has dropped 25 per cent, and the result is due to use of antitoxin and that alone. He disagreed entirely with Dr. Winter's opinion concerning it as a curative agent and as to its ill effects. The records of New York Health Inspectors bear out Dr. Parks' assertions. Dr. Parks also testifies, other than a slight rise in temperature and an appearance of abscess at the site of injection with a little urticaria, he has seen nothing harmful follow antitoxin and he has failed to realize the disturbances accorded it by Dr. Winters, such as heart, kidney and nervous affections, and Dr. Parks concurs with Dr. Morrill of Boston concerning antitoxin as an immunizing agent it having been demonstrated at the Mt. Vernon branch of the Children's Hospital of New York.

| | Cases. | Death. | Mortality. per cent. |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1890 (6 mos.) | 138 | 58 | 42 |
| 1891 | 233 | 105 | 45 |
| 1892 (13 mos.) | 376 | 185 | 49 |
| 1893 | 389 | 203 | 52 |
| 1894 | 698 | 268 | 38 |

1895 (45 weeks) 578 cases, without antitoxin, 244 deaths, 42 per cent. mortality.

1895 (7 weeks) 120 cases, with antitoxin, 26 deaths, 21 per cent. mortality.

Dr. Withington admits he has seen some ill effects although of trifling nature, such as cutaneous eruptions. He has seen only one case where harmful results followed.

In an article I recently read, Dr. William H. Parks is again quoted. He wrote that the mortality of diphtheria cases at the Willard Parker Hospital for four years, without antitoxin, averaged 34 per cent. At no time had it descended to 25 per cent. but now through the use of antitoxin the morality is lowered to 18 per cent. In some cases he has seen slight pain in the joints and swelling but never such symptoms as reported by Dr. Jos. E. Winters.

With due respect to Drs. Davis, Thurston and Kimball, for they are without doubt physicians of ability, I considered their "minority reports" concerning antitoxin was made too emphatic in the face of all facts both pro and con, and to support the stand taken by the Board of Health of this city concerning antitoxin, and as a member of that body, I submit to you the above, hoping by it to do an injustice to no man.

Yours very truly,
JOHN H. ASH, M. D.
West Quincy, Feb. 10, 1896.

WILLISTON OUT.

Elliott of Massachusetts Chosen President of the Wheelmen's League.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 12.—All the slates which the league politicians have been fixing up with so much care for the past three days were smashed to bits yesterday by the election of Sterling Elliott of Massachusetts as president of the League of American Wheelmen and the selection of Louisville as the place for holding the next annual "meet."

A. C. WILLISON. STERLING ELLIOTT.

It has been an open secret that a combination of some magnitude existed between the Elliott men and the Toledo "boomers" by which it was designed that if one should win the other would also come out ahead. It looked, therefore, as if Louisville was a sure loser when Elliott carried the day by such a decisive vote, but the Colonels won in a canter.

There is but little doubt that this result is attributable in a great extent to the eloquent speech of Colonel Bowden of Louisville's Commercial club, who carried the convention off its feet when he presented the claims of the "Falls City," and stampeded the delegates in spite of the combination which until then appeared too strong to beat. After the election of Elliott the friends of Willison gave up the fight, and the candidates for the other places on his ticket withdrew in good order. The convention, however, honored one of them, A. C. Morrison of Wisconsin, by re-electing him second vice president.

The Bryan Inquest.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 12.—Coroner Tingley of Campbell county, Ky., yesterday began hearing testimony to determine the manner in which Pearl Bryan met her death. Sheriff Plummer testified that he had secured evidence to show that her death ensued from the cutting of her throat. Dr. Meyl, a surgeon, testified that in his opinion the head had been removed by several hours before the body was deposited where found. Two colored girls, Minnie Johnson and Annie Lee, identified Jackson and Walling as having been at their house on the morning the body was found. They asked permission to wash up, and the women observed blood on the arms of one, and that a shirt sleeve was gone. A third man with a valise waited outside.

On the Same Old Subject.

PARIS, Feb. 12.—The senate yesterday by a vote of 158 to 85 rejected the demand of Premier Bourgeois for a vote of confidence on the question of the Southern railway's scandals. The senate then adopted a resolution deprecating the irregularities and demanding a searching inquiry. The cabinet decided not to resign, but to endeavor to later obtain a vote of confidence. The Bourgeois cabinet was formed in November last in succession to the Ribot cabinet, which came to its fall on this same question of an investigation of the Southern railway's scandals.

Bridge Gave Way.

CLEVELAND, Feb. 12.—A high bridge, which was being constructed across Tinkers creek by the Akron, Bedford and Cleveland Electric Railway company to take the place of a structure which gave way and fell beneath an electric train a few weeks ago, again fell yesterday, as a result of a terrific storm. Five workmen went down with the big bridge, all of whom were more or less injured. The bridge, which is 75 feet high and several hundred feet long, was nearly completed.

Senate Confirmations.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—The senate yesterday confirmed the following nominations: W. W. Rockhill, to be first assistant secretary of state; Frank C. Richardson, to be collector of customs for the district of Gloucester, Mass.; James S. McCabe, to be marshal of the United States for the district of Rhode Island.

Stuart's Nerve.

EL PASO, Tex., Feb. 12.—Dan Stuart remains confident, and declares that the fights will surely come off. This looks as if Stuart would keep his word, so far as the big fight is concerned, and the chances are very strong that he will keep it as regards most if not all the lesser fights.

THE PROPOSED BOULEVARD.

From Franklin Park Through Quincy to the Blue Hills Reservation.

Every business man in Quincy, who has the welfare of our city at heart, is earnestly requested to attend the hearing before the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs at the State House, Boston, Monday next at 10 A. M., to show why we should not have this great improvement carried out. Such a chance will never occur again. Nine-tenths of the property owners from Squantum Head to Merry Mount Park have offered to give their land free of expense for the construction of a boulevard 100 feet wide along the shores of Dorchester and Quincy Bays.

The land is vacant today but may not be so ten years from today, and what can be done now at trifling cost will be an expensive luxury in years to come. This beautiful boulevard along our shores will benefi every part of Quincy.

There will be an effort made to secure additional appropriations for a boulevard in Winthrop, and if Quincy wants this boulevard she must make herself heard now. No improvement has yet been made by the Metropolitan Park Commissioners on the south side of Boston, but no part of our shore is more beautifully adapted for improvements than are the shores of Quincy and Dorchester bays.

By building the proposed boulevard from Franklin Park down through the beautiful valley of the Neponset river along the shore of Quincy bay, the residents of Boston are brought directly to the sea, which will be of inestimable benefit in years to come.

It is hoped that the solid business men of Quincy will take the time from their business on Monday next to go before the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs, to whom this matter has been referred, and present the claims of the City of Quincy to be heard in favor of this great improvements.

The Mount Lebanon Shakers have invented a great many valuable things. They were the first to make brooms by machinery; the first to put up seeds in little packages; the first to manufacture cut nails.

Now they are out with a method of curing dyspepsia by resting the stomach. Their remedy is known as the Shaker Digestive Cordial. It supplies food in an artificially digested form and at the same time aids the digestion of other foods in the stomach. In other words, by the use of the Shaker Digestive Cordial, a dyspeptic virtually gets along without the use of his stomach until it is restored to its natural strength and vigor. A single 10 cent bottle will oft-times give marked relief. Get a bottle from your druggist and try it.

Writing of Reed.

New England readers always find in the Boston Sunday Journal features which are especially attractive to them; for that is one of the Journal's specialties.

Moreover, the news of the literary world is chronicled every week by Edward W. Bok, whose articles are the most familiar of any published in the newspapers of the country. A novelty for New England will be the publication of the breezy, brisk letters by "Bab" which are so popular with the ladies.

One of the many noticeable features soon to appear exclusively in the Sunday Journal is a series of signed articles by famous New England leaders. Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge will contribute an interesting comparison of Reed and Cleveland as Presidential candidates; Hon. Joseph H. Manley will write an article about Mr. Reed, while Senator Chandler, Congressman Dingley and others of equal fame will furnish special signed articles for New England's favorite newspaper.

Where Moslems Are Most Numerous.

Far in advance of any other nation in the number of the Moslems under its rule is Great Britain. In India alone there are about 60,000,000 Mohammedans and they outnumber all the subjects of the sultan more than two to one. Besides, England rules Mohammedans in other parts of her vast empire, though not many in any one place. The queen is the sovereign of many millions more Moslems than Christians.

China is believed to come next as a country inhabited by many followers of the prophet. The number of Mohammedans in the Chinese empire is estimated all the way from 30,000,000 to 50,000,000, and the smallest of the guesses is more than Turkey can match. Holland also has nearly or quite 30,000,000 Moslem subjects in her populous and rich East Indian possessions. Java has fully 25,000,000 people, and nearly all of them are Mohammedans.

The Turkish empire is supposed to contain about 23,000,000 Moslems, counting the portion of Arabia in which the authority of the sultan is not very well established and is in danger of being destroyed at any time. Therefore it is apparent that unless great error has been made in estimating the number of Mohammedans in the Chinese empire the sultan is only fourth among rulers of great bodies of men and women who believe in Mohammed.

But among other countries which are dominated by the Moslem element of their population and are under the sway of a Mohammedan ruler the Turkish empire is easily first in numbers and in power for evil.—Cleveland Leader.

The Danger of Silence.

I once had a case (said a member of the bar) against a man in the country which was as clear as daylight in my favor, but, by the cunning of his lawyer, he had continued to avoid coming to trial for about two years.

At last the case was called, late in the term and late in a hot day, the court and jury tired and impatient. I stated the facts and produced the evidence, which was all on my side.

The judge asked the counsel whether they wished to argue the case, stating that he hardly thought it necessary to submit it in so plain a matter. The lawyers agreed to submit it without argument. The jury went out and immediately returned with a verdict for the defendant.

As soon as the court adjourned I sought the foreman of the jury, and asked him how in the name of common sense they came to render such a verdict.

"Why, you see," said he, "we didn't think much of the lawyer against you, and it wasn't strange he didn't have nothing to say; but, squire, the fact is we thought you was about one of the smartest lawyers in the country, and if you couldn't find nothing to say on your side it must be a pretty hard case, so we had to go against you."—Pearson's Weekly.

Close Shave With a Leopard.

I walked a little nearer the edge of the ledge to listen if I could hear anything in the gap, as we could not tell where the dogs or the leopard had got to. I heard a slight rustle below, whether in the bush or on the ledge I could not tell, and there was no time to find out, for with a rush and a bound the leopard threw himself against the krantz, clutching at the grass roots on top with the claws of one fore paw—the other was broken just above the wrist—and I could hear his hind claws scraping on the rocks in his endeavors to scramble up. I knew that he was very close to me. His great blood smeared paws were, within six feet, and I could see his wicked yellow eyes glaring savagely and the saliva, red tinged, dropping from the gleaming tusks.

As Nogwaja ran in with uplifted assegai I fired down into the brute's mouth, and with a savage gasp he fell down on to the ledge below. The plucky Swazi, without waiting to see if he was dead, jumped down on top of him and gave him a final thrust with his assegai ere life had sped.—Kirby.

Able to Read Writing.

"I never will forget the queer incidents and experiences I had when I first bought a typewriter and sent out in print my correspondence and bills to my customers who lived in the rustic regions about me," said a merchant from a backwoods town. "Several of my patrons dropped me, and I was at a loss to account for their manner, which changed toward me. At last the mystery was solved. A burly young farmer drove up to the store, tied up his oxen and stalked into my office.

"'Mr. Blank,' said he, 'I'd have you know that I know how to read writin, and you don't have to print your letters and bills when you send them to me. I don't propose to be insulted in such a manner.'

"He then threw down the letter on my desk and stalked out."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Kinglake and The Times.

It was Kinglake who uttered one of the neatest of mots on the peculiar character of the London Times. He had little fondness for that journal in spite of personal friendships which might have been expected to soften his view of the question. The paper was still to him a sort of Juggernaut, irresistible and fateful. On seeing an announcement of the new editor's marriage he exclaimed: "Heavens! That brings The Times into relations with humanity."

Indians In Columbus' Time.

While there are no complete statistics available, careful estimates from all possible sources of information make it probable that at the time of the discovery there were no more than 500,000 Indians in all North America.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Maryland has 107,054 persons engaged in manufacture, the annual value of whose product is $171,842,593.

HOVE TO.

Baffled, but bravely, like a stag at bay,
She faced the driving gale and angry sea
Under short canvas, and with helm a-lee,
Hove to, upon the starboard tack, she lay
And looked into the wind's wild eyes that day,
Over the great green rolling billows she
Rode like a storm bird, and did seem to be
A mist born phantom rising from the spray.
Her tightened weather shrouds rang like a lyre,
Swept by the furious storm king as he passed;
Wild ocean wraiths wailed in the thundering choir,
A thousand demons shrieked in every blast;
Yet, better far to battle with the gale
Than drift o'er glassy seas with listless sail.

TRIAL BY FIRE.

The major was one of the many well born Englishmen who come to California with a younger son's portion and a small monthly allowance and hope to make a fortune on a vineyard or a wheat ranch. The plan always looks feasible in England, and the agent assures his victim that the thousand pounds will buy a ten acre plot, plant vines, build a decent bungalow and tide the owner over until the vines shall bear and bring him a harvest of good American gold.

The major was going the way of many of his English friends. The £1,000 legacy was gone, and the monthly allowance of £20 (which, viewed from a distance, seemed large) always grew painfully small as it neared California and the debts it was supposed to cover. The major's little mountain vineyard had been destroyed by phylloxera, and he was living on the uncertain promise of a number of green shoots, called, respectfully, "the olive orchard." But the major was not unhappy. When he was not tilling the soil, he sat on his little veranda, with his brier wood pipe between his teeth and studied the long, narrow, picturesque Napa valley far below.

It may be that the major's failure to succeed in the grape business was not the fault of the country, but that his genial, unpractical nature was the true obstacle to success. The major was, in fact, the most helpless Englishman who ever came to California to take care of himself. The poor fellow became so convinced of this after a short trial that he engaged a man to act as valet to himself and incidentally cook the meals for both.

The major was a solitary bachelor then. The gods alone know in what unpropitious moment he picked up Pete to hang about his neck, a millstone of inefficiency. Pete's poverty must have been his recommendation and the major's poverty the excuse for keeping him. Pete had about as much knowledge of laying out and caring for a man's wardrobe as the major had of running a ranch. The consequence was that the major often presented himself at his friends' houses in the most surprising garb—a combination of white duck trousers, black frock coat and russet hunting boots being one of Pete's masterpieces. In his capacity as cook Pete was not one whit more efficient and often suffered mental agony over the ponderous directions of the major's French cookbook, which were like the hieroglyphics of the ancients to his clouded intellect. Considering the diet of sour bread and tinned meats which Pete provided, it is only less than marvelous that his benefactor was still alive.

When the major married Ellie Smith, a pretty San Francisco girl, Pete was promoted to be manager of the ranch and expended his grooming talents on the pet mule. The major's wife was "artistic." She had studied sketching and did some really clever bits. Her admiring husband was sure that she possessed the divine afflatus, and consequently much time was devoted to art and little time to ranching.

But this was not without protest from one individual. Not that he was disturbed by lack of work, but poor Pete was oftener than not the unwilling model for Ellie's clever studies. One day Pete posed for "The Man With the Hoe." His temper was particularly tried on that occasion, for he had taken up his tool with the honest intention of weeding the primitive vegetable garden. Though he had scudded through the back yard and climbed the rear fence he had not counted on meeting his young mistress in the barnyard. He began to wrestle with the weeds and pretended not to see her. His education, however, had not included a sight of Millet's picture, or he would have fled down the mountain side in utter despair.

"Stop, stop, Peter, right there. Don't move an inch," called the sweet voice that drove him to madness. "Kenneth," Ellie called to her husband, "look. Isn't it wonderful? The lights, the pose, the very landscape like"—

"'The Man With the Hoe,'" shouted the major gleefully. "I'll get your paints, Ellie. Hold on, Pete!" And before that honest son of toil had time to collect his scattered senses, he found himself posing in a very uncomfortable attitude, with the Napa valley lying at his feet and the major's familiar phrases ringing in his ears—"fine pose—jolly good subject—delicious coloring."

After Pete had posed for a hundred or more indifferent works of art without names, he began to think of deserting his master and leaving him to a just and awful fate. But this stupendous blow was averted by the arrival of Brompton Edwards, another Englishman, who had come to learn practical ranching under the direction of his father's old friend, the major.

After a week had been given up to driving his protege about the valley and introducing him to the English colony, the major returned to his daily routine of pruning olive trees and digging out worm eaten grapevines. Ellie soon discovered in the young man's clean cut features and fine, athletic figure an entirely new field for art study, and Edwards found the time pass more pleasantly as a model than as an embryo rancher. They were together during most of the daylight hours. When Brompton was not posing for a wild Norseman or a Greek hero, he was sitting very close to Ellie, criticising, in soft, caressing tones, the sketches of himself which she had been doing. Without actually straying from the path of duty, Ellie was treading on dangerously uncertain territory. She quite frankly admitted to herself that she was pretty and charming, and, being of that mind, she did not repress comparisons between husband and the younger man.

Matters had arrived at a state where a warm hearted but vain young woman needed a friend with the strength to hold up a good, powerful, unrelenting mirror for her to gaze into. Pete could have held up the mirror with right good will, but he did not know how. In those days he followed the major around with doglike devotion, and only glowered when Ellie came out to the orchard one morning with her paints and succeeded in bringing upon herself a scolding from her overindulgent husband. She held her head very high and stiff, and marched over the hill some distance away, where she seated herself and pretended to sketch, but was in reality nursing her injured feelings to keep them alive. The major watched her disappear with a pained expression on his good natured face, and then went dejectedly into the house. Pete was deeply incensed against Ellie, and made another solemn vow to desert the ranch. It was the ninety and ninth time that he had done so, and this time he sealed the vow with an oath.

The long grass on the Napa hills was burned and crisp and Ellie was daubing yellow ocher and burnt umber over her canvas with vicious strokes. She was not giving any attention to her work, however, for an athletic form stood between her and the landscape, and she was indulging in a very foolish day dream. To do the little woman justice, she was not in love with Brompton, but her vanity had been stimulated to such wonderful activity by his youthful gallantries that she fancied he was deeply infatuated with her. She wondered if he would ever tell her that he loved her. If she could only have some test of his love, what a satisfaction it would be!

* * * * * *

Over on the mountain side a half mile away Pete leaned on his hoe and watched a thread of fire crawling like a red snake through the underbrush of chaparral and manzanita. He knew only too well that no human power could stop it, and that within a few minutes the gentle breeze would cause a flying spark to fall upon the long dry grass, and puff—the crawling snake would become a great swirling, galloping mass of flame and smoke and would pass over the very place where Ellie sat sulking and dreaming. Pete had firmly determined to leave the ranch. He had washed his hands of these people. He would not—but the grass was on fire, and Pete made a dash for the house, yelling at the top of his lungs for the major.

The volume of smoke was rising high when Ellie rose to her feet and sniffed the air. Before she could gather up her paints a thin rim of fire ran along the top of the little hill above her. The small birds and insects rose from the ground with a whir and scattered down the hillside. Ellie glanced quickly backward and saw the fire licking up the grass as it bore down upon her and the smoke rolling heavenward in dense, sooty clouds. She did not lose her presence of mind, but remembered a small plowed field a short distance away, where the flames could not reach her, and ran nimbly down the hill, with her fluttering skirts gathering cockle burs and sticker weed as she sped.

When she was fairly on the plowed ground and gasping for breath, she saw the young Englishman tearing along the hill at a frantic rate. Through the smoke he looked pale and frightened. Ellie felt a thrill of satisfaction. Here was the longed for proof of his love. He thought she was in danger and had come to her rescue. A deep blush mounted to her cheeks and her heart beat to suffocation. But he did not seem to see her. It was evident to her that he was crazed with fear and would plunge into the fire in search of her. Merciful God! He would be burned.

"Brompton!" she screamed. "Dear Brompton, I am here—safe."

The fire was very close, and she had to throw herself flat on the ground to escape being burned. She gave one more despairing cry as she felt the hot breath scorch her clothing. "Brompton! Brompton! Brompton!"

A great wave of smoke and flame swept around the edges of the plowed ground, and for a minute nothing could be seen or heard. Fortunately for Ellie the dry grass burned like tinder, and the fire was soon roaring down the hill toward the valley.

When Ellie, choked and frightened, lifted her head, she saw the thin, long, scantily clad legs of her husband bounding over the blackened earth toward her. His duck trousers were smeared with soot, and he had a wet blanket about his shoulders. He could not speak, but caught Ellie in his arms and burst into stifled sobs.

Back of them was heard the voice of Brompton Edwards. "Hello there, major!" he called. "I had a very narrow squeak of it. My hammock and books are burned to tinder by this. By Jove, old fellow, you are burned yourself, aren't you? Your wife was safe enough. I knew she could take care of herself."

But Ellie buried her head in the wet blanket with a shudder and burst into tears of shame and contrition.

"Well, well," gasped Pete, who had stumbled up the hill with a bundle of wet sacks. "I never was so plaguey scared in my life. Thought you'd be burned sure, Miss Ellie. Me and the major'll have a fine time next week clearing"—

For Pete had reconsidered his ninety and ninth vow. Indeed it was only a week later when he was speculating if there was ever a happier couple than the major and his Ellie. And Pete beamed as he thought of the ignoble part Brompton Edwards played on the day of the fire.—Stella Walthall Belcher in San Francisco Argonaut.

Useless Expense In Chicago.

He looked over the plans for the new building that he intended to have erected and shook his head.

"What's the matter?" asked the architect.

"Too elaborate," was the reply; "too much unnecessary fancy work to suit me."

"No more than is usual on first class buildings," protested the architect. "What would you have left off?"

"The ornamental work at the top."

"But, my dear sir," protested the architect, "that is quite the thing now. We make the buildings plain except at the bottom and the top."

"Well," returned the capitalist decidedly, "it's all right to have a little ornamentation for the first story, but I object to paying for art work for the angels. We'll have the top plain."—Chicago Post.

Punished For Their Wickedness.

The St. Andrew's fishermen are supposed, no doubt erroneously, to be less venturous than others. A year or two ago they retrieved their fame by very gallant conduct in an unseaworthy lifeboat. However, their marine neighbors tell this tale:

Many years ago there was a violent storm on a 22d of November. A wreck came in; the fishers boarded it, found some sailors still alive and "made sikker" by drowning them. Then they seized the cargo and fell in luck. The anniversary, Nov. 22, was a bright, still, halcyon day, and the blue bay was covered with brown sails. Not one came home to the rocky chink which does duty as a harbor. A fierce storm arose, and the fishing fleet perished. Consequently a new and more or less highland colony, mainly of Chisholmes, came in, and never were such good men as the lost sailors of Fife. For long the unholy day of November was a holiday, nobody daring to go forth to sea.

Such is the legend, which may have no historical basis. In any case Fife fishers and the east coast men generally are considered to be better in a boat than the west highlanders, and Fife enterprise and capital might have left us a more prosperous isle of Lewes.—London News.

The Schoolboy and the Inspector.

In an Edinburgh school the other day an inspector, wishing to test the knowledge of a class in fractions, asked one boy whether he would rather take a sixth or a seventh part of an orange if he got his choice. The boy promptly replied that he would take the seventh. At this the inspector explained at length to the class that the boy who would choose the smaller part as this boy had done because it looked the larger fraction was very foolish, but the laugh was on the other side when the chirping voice of another urchin broke in in remonstrance, "Please, sir, but that boy disna like oranges."—Westminster Gazette.

The Scoffer.

Watts—Do you really believe that every sin is followed by punishment?

Potts—Of course. For instance, when some man steals a million or so dollars, don't a lot of people have to starve as a consequence?—Indianapolis Journal.

Unprepared to Say.

"Don't you think," said Miss Simfoni, "that Theodore Thomas is the best conductor in the country?" and old Mrs. Flat replied thoughtfully:

"Well, I dunno as I ever rid in his car."—Boston Commercial Bulletin.

WORDS OF FRIENDSHIP.

British Statesmen Express Kindly Feelings Toward America.

Monroe Doctrine and International Arbitration

The Main Topics Discussed In Replies to the Queen's Speech.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—The regular session of parliament was opened yesterday. Speaker Gully presided over the house of commons. At 2 o'clock the royal commission entered the house of lords, and at that hour the house of commons was summoned.

The house of commons, after listening to the queen's speech in the house of lords, resumed its sitting at 4 o'clock. Joseph Chamberlain entered the house shortly after it had been called to order, and was vociferously cheered.

After the new members of parliament had been sworn in, the ministers announced the various bills to be introduced in accordance with the announcement contained in the queen's speech. The notice of the proposed increase in the strength of the navy was cheered.

Speaker Gully then read the queen's speech, after which the address in reply to the speech was moved.

Mr. Harcourt said he was rejoiced at the paragraph in the queen's speech with regard to Venezuela, as it held out the hope that the question could be settled at an early date. He added that no words that could impede such a settlement would fall from him. This remark disposes of the report that the Liberal leaders had determined to make an attack upon the government's policy in regard to Venezuela, which course necessarily would have led to an exchange of warm remarks which might have impeded the progress of settlement of the dispute.

Continuing Mr. Harcourt said that misunderstandings both in England and in the United States existed and had caused ruffled feelings on both sides. The idea that America and Great Britain disputed the question of Monroeism was nothing new or extraordinary. Monroeism, he asserted, was not a principle of international law, but one of national policy, to which the Americans have a traditional and passionate attachment, and it was the same dogtrine by virtue of which Great Britain had interfered in various states when her interests were affected.

Generous Admissions.

Sir William Harcourt also said: "I am in entire agreement with Lord Salisbury when he says the United States has a perfect right to interpose in any controversy by which their own interests are affected, and they are entitled to judge whether their interests are affected and in what measure they shall be sustained. That is a general doctrine upon which all states act. Upon this is founded the balance of power, and upon that ground Great Britain interposed in Belgium, Greece, Turkey and many other places.

"I regret the delay in the publication of the English case. I should have thought that before Secretary Olney was answered all the materials would have been ready to lay before the United States and the world at large. We do not desire to claim any territory to which we are not clearly entitled to, and the question is what is that territory?

"It is the business of the diplomats to come to a reasonable settlement in such a matter. Diplomacy has had this matter in hand for half a century, and a mighty bad hand it has made of it, in my opinion. It is not creditable that a question of this character should have been allowed to fester until it has broken open into a dangerous sore to breed bad blood between two great nations. It is the first duty of the government to take measures, without delay, to heal the sore.

"The people of Great Britain and the United States of America have already settled important questions by arbitration, and it cannot be admitted that this question is beyond the reach of arbitration. The government does not reject arbitration, and the only question left is the limitation of the boundary. There is a general desire that justice should be done."

Referring to the Transvaal, Mr. Harcourt complimented Mr. Chamberlain for his skillful conduct of the affair, and said that he thought history had but few examples of such moderation as had been displayed by President Kruger under circumstances of unparalleled provocation.

Turning to Armenia, he said that to say that the reference to this subject in the queen's speech is disappointing and totally unworthy of the subject will represent the feeling of the country. Continuing, he remarked: "These crimes are matters for our special concern, as we are parties to the guarantee of the powers. The whole point of the treaty of Berlin is that there was a covenant upon the part of the sultan to carry out reforms, and a guarantee upon the part of the powers of Europe to see that these reforms were effected.

"Under the Cyprus convention, Great Britain specially covenants to defend Turkey in Asia, in return for which Turkey covenants to protect the Christians in Armenia. The support we have given Turkey was conditional upon the covenants which the sultan has foully broken. Is this to be the outcome of the great Anglo-Turkish policy of 1878?"

Mr. Harcourt described Lord Salisbury's recent speech on the subject of Armenia as an "unparalleled confession of diplomatic insolvency and national impotence." He concluded his speech by saying: "I am glad to find that the government has not contemplated to return to protection or tampering with the currency."

Balfour's Turn.

A. J. Balfour, first lord of the treasury and Conservative leader in the house, was loudly cheered when he arose to reply to the Liberal leader. He said:

"Sir William Harcourt has devoted much time to attacking views which the government has never held. Neither I nor my friends ever said that the Monroe doctrine was one to which we had a right to object. It is of British origin, and I do not see any reason why we should criticise it.

"The American commissioners (on the Venezuelan boundary) have applied to us to aid them with any information we have on the Venezuelan question, and we have promised to give them all the information we are able to give at the earliest possible moment. No false pride or diplomatic punctilio will be allowed to stand in the way of a settlement as far as we are concerned.

"It is impossible to foresee with certainty what will be the general conclusions arrived at by the American commission or by those called upon to investigate the British case. But one conclusion, I am certain, will be reached by every one who impartially investigates; he will be convinced that there has never been the slightest intention on the part of this country to violate the substance or essence of the Monroe doctrine.

"Whatever other conclusion the commission may arrive at, it will most assuredly reach the conclusion that no desire to push beyond the due limit of the frontier of this empire has ever been the animating cause which moved British diplomacy in this long-drawn-out controversy. If this conclusion be fairly and frankly set before the citizens of the United States, one of their gravest preoccupations will be at rest.

"I should rejoice if out of this evil should spring some general system of arbitration. If that were the issue, I should feel that all misunderstandings and evils done had been more than removed, and that a permanent guarantee of goodwill between the English speaking nations on the two sides of the Atlantic had been attained for all time."

Turning then to the Transvaal question, Mr. Balfour said: "The armed forces of the Chartered company will, of course, be transferred to an imperial officer without delay. There is, therefore, no possibility of a repetition of the recent deplorable event. The government propose, as soon as the pending trials are concluded, that there shall be a full inquiry into the facts and history of the charter."

Passing then to the subject of Armenia, Mr. Balfour said: "Lord Salisbury's speech to the Nonconformist Unionist association accurately described Great Britain's obligations. There is nothing in the Berlin or the Cyprus treaties requiring the powers, or England singly, to go to war to compel the Turks to carry out their pledges."

Mr. Balfour pointed out the impossibility of individual action on the part of Great Britain. He said in this connection: "Short of bringing upon ourselves the prospect of a possible European conflagration, we could have done no more in the direction of helping those unhappy people than we have done. Let the house and the country remember that we alone among the nations of Europe (I do not include the United States, which I know at one time was with us) feel deeply and earnestly on this subject of the horrors done in Armenia. Foreign nations see only the inevitable evil that must overtake Europe if the Eastern question is reopened."

Mr. Balfour further pointed out that foreign nations think that in all controversies it is probable that war will follow such an event, and they are not prepared to lift a finger to assist Great Britain in carrying out reforms. While, unhappily, there is no sign of Turkish statesmen seeing the errors of their ways, he would never regret being the follower of a government which, at all events, did its best to induce Turkey to take the only course to secure the permanence of the Ottoman empire.

Rosebery Scores Salisbury.

In the house of lords Lord Rosebery referred to the ominous omission from the queen's speech of the usual reference to the friendship of foreign powers. He ridiculed the fulsome eulogy bestowed on Colonial Secretary Chamberlain.

He approved the government policy in the Transvaal, but he thought it unfortunate that the new poet laureate had been permitted to publish a glowing eulogy of the Jameson raid. He warned Mr. Chamberlain, in boasting of his conduct of the colonial policy, not to indulge in puerile reflections calculated needlessly to irritate the foreign powers.

The Venezuela difficulty, he said, was no new one, and they had all tried their hands at it. But now the intervention of the United States offered a guarantee of the permanence of any settlement that might be effected. He welcomed the movement on both sides of the Atlantic in favor of permanent arbitration.

Turning to the subject of Armenia, Lord Rosebery said that he hoped the house would receive fuller information than was contained in the curt, cold allusion in the queen's speech. Lord Salisbury's brave words toward the sultan, he said, had not been fulfilled by brave needs. The noble marquis had been forced to abandon the cause of the Armenians. Surely some course might have been adopted between a crusade and apathy.

Salisbury Talks Back.

The Marquis of Salisbury was received with cheers as he arose to reply to the criticisms of Lord Rosebery, the ex-prime minister. He said: "No sympathy with the Armenians would justify us in facing calamities compared with which the Crimean war would sink into insignificance."

Turning then to Venezuela, Lord Salisbury concurred in Lord Rosebery's views that America's mixture in the dispute had conduced to satisfactory results more rapidly than if the United States had not interfered. "I do not think," he said, "that the invoking of the Monroe doctrine was controversially quite necessary for the United States. Considering the position of Venezuela in the Caribbean sea, it was no more unnatural that the United States should take an interest in it than that we should feel an interest in Holland and Belgium; and from that point of view, I trust the negotiations will continue.

"I think we are rightly relying upon the question of arbitration. America attaches more unrestricted value to that mode of adjusting controversies than has hitherto been done here."

With reference to permanent arbitration, the prime minister expressed the belief that between the extremes of unrestricted arbitration of all subjects, which it was impossible for the two nations to adopt, and the former practice, which perhaps used arbitration too little, a middle term may be found which will effectually diminish the chance of conflict.

"Now, as to Armenia," was Lord Salisbury's way of taking up the next topic of his speech. I defy Lord Rosebery to find any stipulation in the Berlin treaty that could be construed into an undertaking or threat to fight Turkey on behalf of the Armenians." He had warned the sultan, he continued, of what would happen if he ignored the opinion of Europe, and he repeated that the sultan was in very great danger by such defiance if he relied on the European fear of what would happen if the Turkish empire disappeared. He was inclined to believe that Europe would delay such a catastrophe the longest possible; but if the present state of things continued, its natural consequence could not be indefinitely delayed.

Lord Rosebery had accused the government of inaction, but when, in May last, he himself had been in power, he did not give any sign of resorting to force if England's demands were not conceded.

The remainder of the speech was merely a repetition of Lord Salisbury's speech to the Non-Conformist Unionist association.

Upon the conclusion of the speech, the address was agreed to.

Late War the Result of Misunderstanding and Misrepresentation.

BOSTON, Feb. 13.—Two hundred members of the Middlesex club were at dinner at Young's last evening—a Lincoln dinner. It was a grand Republican demonstration. A handsome steel engraving of Speaker Reed on the dinner card, and enthusiasm at the mention of his name showed where the sympathies of the club are.

Ex-President John Haskell Butler led. He said: "We all of us regret most exceedingly the enforced absence of our president, ex-Governor Brackett. We meet here tonight in honor of America's greatest man. We feel all the more devoted to this duty because this club was one of the first of American associations to give remembrance to an honored custom in acknowledging the life and services of Abraham Lincoln.

"We, in our services, have endeavored to select some particular incident in the life of Lincoln, and to draw a lesson. My friends, this is a time when we can look back and wish we had a man like Abraham Lincoln at the helm of the ship of state.

"We have right here, within the last six months, a spectacle that 10 years back we would have said would never have occurred in this 19th century of boasted civilization. Nations claiming to be Christian are looking down at the murder of a Christian people, and doing nothing. We find the United States almost making a declaration of war. There never was a time when we could better sit and listen to the words of wise men, who have come from all parts of the country to tell us of Abraham Lincoln, and draw from his life lessons of comfort and guidance."

Congressman Walker was the principal speaker, and as he was the commander of the famous Stonewall brigade, after the death of Stonewall Jackson, his tribute paid to the martyred president was received with enthusiasm. He said, in part: "In behalf of the veterans of the Confederacy I extend to the veterans of the north the hand of greeting. I announce that the clouds of passion which so long obscured the reason of men are dispersed, and on the hills and through the valleys is burning the fire of patriotism beneath the Southern cross.

Solid South Is No More.

"The south submitted the question of secession to the arbitrament of the sword, and they will abide their fate, as becomes a good and brave people. When next the southern people march forth in battle, it will be under the flag of the Union. I come to proclaim the glad tidings that the solid south is no more. Kentucky and Tennessee have broken the ranks of Democracy, and West Virginians joined the Republicans ranks. The color line has been obliterated in the politics of Virginia. The most effective weapon of the Democratic party in years has been the race issue, until thousands of men, who are Republican in heart, have been deterred from expressing their honest preferences at the polls, but today we find that changed.

"No great man was so ever misunderstood and so misrepresented by the southern people as was Lincoln from '61-'65. We knew nothing of him excepting as was written by the bitter pens of political opponents, or told by unfriendly orators; we believed he was our enemy, was hostile to all people of southern birth, and we hated him. We can see now that he was not the enemy of the south, but in fulfillment of the duty imposed upon him was carrying out the task of preserving the Union. We hail George Washington as father of our country; we now hail Abraham Lincoln as preserver of the Union, founded by our forefathers, and may this great fabric, erected and preserved by so much blood and treasure, endure so long as the names of Washington and Lincoln be gratefully remembered."

Hon. Charles W. Fairbanks of Indianapolis said: "The celebration of the birth of Abraham Lincoln is the celebration of the birth of the Republican party in the United States. Republicanism does not live in the arduous deeds of the past, but it is the promised beneficence to come. It is an unwritten law of nature that like begets like and unsound economic laws do not beget prosperity, but in the speedy return of a Republican president to the White House is a harbinger of brighter days."

The closing speaker was Hon. William H. Eustis, ex-mayor of Minneapolis, who dwelt on the progress, both material and political, during the past century. All the speakers were enthusiastically received, and their remarks were frequently applauded.

Bills Presented For Legislators' Consideration. Biennial Reconsideration Fails.

BOSTON, Feb. 13.—Yesterday being the last day upon which bills could be filed to accompany petitions waiting therefor in the offices of the clerks of the two branches, some pretty weighty matters made their appearance. Prominent among them were bills for the consolidation of the gas companies of Boston and its vicinity; a state boulevard from Boston to Newburyport; an elevated railway in this city, and a Cape Cod canal commissioner. The bill to give firemen one day off in seven was also introduced, together with a bill quite new, for the regulation of the manufacture and sale of ice-cream.

The house refused to refer to the committee on the judiciary an order offered by Mr. Mellen providing for obtaining the opinion of the supreme judicial court on the question whether the general court of 1895 complied with the requirements of the constitution in passing the resolves providing for biennial elections.

Mr. Gallivan introduced a bill prohibiting any officer, agent or employe of the state board of education from being pecuniarily interested, directly or indirectly, in the matter of furnishing school books or supplies for use by the commonwealth.

Yale May Lose Her Trainer.

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 13.—A great commotion was created among Yale men when it was announced that the University of Pennsylvania had made Michael C. Murphy, Yale's trainer, an offer to accept a similar position at Philadelphia. The offer is regarded as a pronounced attack on Yale's athletic prestige, but as yet nothing has been done toward inducing Mr. Murphy not to accept the offer. Murphy has been offered $3000 a year and the position of director in all athletic affairs at the institution. Murphy's present salary is only $1500, and it is believed he is seriously considering the offer. His decision will be announced in a day or two.

Vermont Veterans' Session Closed.

RUTLAND, Vt., Feb. 13.—Clear weather favored the closing day of the Vermont Grand Army encampment. Unfinished business was in order yesterday and the installation of Grand Army and Women's Relief Corps officers constituted the opening exercises. The installation was conducted by J. H. Golding of post Roberts, assisted by Past Commander B. Cannon, Jr. Incoming Commander Puffer of Bennington delivered a brief address, after which it was voted to hold the next annual encampment a year from next June, changing the time of meeting from winter to summer season. No place was decided upon for the next encampment.

Boom For Reed.

PORTLAND, Me., Feb. 13.—The fame of the immortal Lincoln was somewhat overshadowed at the Lincoln club's annual banquet last night by the enthusiasm for Maine's favorite son, Hon. Thomas B. Reed. To the Lincoln club's celebration of the birth of the martyred president, the members of the new State of Maine Reed club were all invited, and Portland's spacious city hall was hardly adequate to take care of the crowd of prominent Maine Republicans that responded.

Alleged Dishonest Students

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 13.—Seven members of the junior class at Brown university have been expelled for alleged dishonest work in the rhetoric class. The notice alleges that they "presented papers not their own in an examination." They have been ordered out of the grounds till Sept. 2 next. Three of the men are prominent in the Y. M. C. A. here, and four are Providence men. The juniors are greatly excited, and will hold a meeting to decide on some definite action.

Want Decision Changed.

HANOVER, N. H., Feb. 13.—A mass meeting of Dartmouth students was held yesterday to protest against the vote of the faculty, expelling eight sophomores for "horning" a professor. The meeting voted to send a petition to the faculty to change their decision to suspension for the present term. Eighteen other members of the sophomore class admitted being connected with the affair. It is thought the faculty will take immediate action.

Decision Reserved.

WORCESTER, Mass., Feb. 13.—The divorce case against ex-Mayor Charles Hayden of Fitchburg was tried in the superior court in this city yesterday. The judge reserved his decision, and suggested that the evidence should be considered by the district attorney as a basis of a prosecution against the libellant for adultery. The libel against Hayden, who is special justice of the district court at Fitchburg, alleges cruel and abusive conduct.

Victimized Young Girls.

TAUNTON, Mass., Feb. 13.—In the superior criminal court yesterday Judge Blodgett sentenced E. Edward Enos of New Bedford, convicted of seduction, to four years in the house of correction. Enos, who was a druggist, and several other men were shown to have been in the habit of consorting with several young girls. Finally, one of the girls was found drunk on the streets and she told the whole story

Commander Thayer Takes Up the Cudgels In Defense of the Nation's Heroes.

LOWELL, Mass., Feb. 13.—The Grand Army veterans were in full possession of this city yesterday, and the good old Spindle City was an easy and willing captive.

Evidence of a cordial welcome was everywhere apparent. "Old Glory" floated from every flagstaff, and the red, white and blue was to be seen at many points. The boys in blue were here to hold the 30th annual encampment of the Department of Massachusetts, Grand Army.

They assembled in Association hall, opposite the graves and monument of Ladd and Whitney, whose blood was the first shed in the Civil War of 30 years ago.

Commander-in-Chief Walker of Indiana entered the hall and was given a rousing reception. He made an address and was followed by Quartermaster Bearce; Mrs. Elizabeth E. Turner, president of the National Relief Corps of America; Mrs. Reed, national secretary; Mrs. Mason of Maine, and Mrs. L. W. Adams, national president of the Ladies of the Grand Army.

W. P. Derby of Springfield was unanimously elected department commander. The other officers elected were: John M. Deane, Fall River, senior vice commander; John E. Gilman, Boston, junior vice commander; Mark B. Taylor, Canton, chaplain, and F. W. Graves, Woburn, medical director.

The vote to hold the next encampment in Boston was reconsidered, and it was voted to go to Worcester instead. A resolution was adopted calling for the recognition of Feb. 12, Lincoln's birthday, as a national holiday.

Thayer's Stirring Address.

The feature of the day was Commander Thayer's address, the salient points of which follow:

"The resolution from this department, calling for a change in the rules and regulations which shall unseat past department commanders in the national encampment, shared the same fate at Louisville as have previous resolutions of the same character.

"The continual agitation of this question is likely to cause dissension in our ranks, and I am of the opinion that we had better drop it and stand shoulder to shoulder in upholding and maintaining the foundation principles of our order.

"The recent effort in this department to organize a so-called Grand Army association because of disappointment over the result of the movement to change the rules and regulations in the manner indicated, is rebellion pure and simple, and senseless rebellion at that. Let comrades stop and consider before giving countenance to such crazy schemes.

"There is abundant cause for complaint as to the manner in which the pension laws of congress are being executed.

"Their interpretation is narrow, the machinery is complicated and altogether too slow, and men who have been waiting for years for the adjudication of their just claims are dying by hundreds. The trouble seems to be that those in control of the pension department are lacking in sympathy for the disabled veteran, and, instead of acting with reasonable promptness upon the thousands of claims on file in the pension bureau they are trying to invent schemes to delay or evade their consideration. One of the latest 'dodges' is to cut down a veteran's pension and then issue a new certificate at the reduced rate, advertising it in the newspapers of the country as a 'reissue.' Reissue, indeed!

"It is fast becoming the opinion of all fair-minded people that service pensions are the only, if not the best, way out of the difficulty.

Objects to Confederate Monument.

"During the past year, as you all know, I have had occasion to call your attention, and incidentally the attention of the entire country, to the dedication of a Confederate monument in the city of Chicago.

"The lesson taught by the monument is an erroneous one. The statue of a Confederate soldier which they placed upon it, in rags, with wasted body, intended as an implication that our government maltreated its prisoners, is a standing falsehood, and the dedication of the memorial upon a day which we have set apart for memorial services in honor of our fallen comrades, was an insult to every man who wore blue.

"Do not let them use this monument at Chicago as an entering wedge for other cities of the loyal north. We may join with them in extolling the heroism of the people of the south, but we must not be asked to contenance or to palliate the gigantic crime which they committed in seeking the destruction of the Union, or to allow attempts to distort the facts of history to go unrebuked.

"If they are as loyal as they say they are, let them forsake the errors of the past, and not seek to perpetuate them; let them acknowledge that they were wrong, and join with us and all true Americans in building the grandest nation of the world upon the foundation which our fathers laid. One flag, and that the Stars and Stripes, is enough for all.

"The histories now in use in many schools in the north, as well as the south, are wrong in many particulars. I suggest that the incoming council of administration look into this important matter of erroneous histories used as text books in our public schools."

After Dishonest Cashier.

WILLIMANTIC, Conn., Feb. 13. — The Dime Savings bank of this city has issued notices offering a reward of $1000 for information which will lead to the arrest of John L. Walden, the absconding cashier of the bank. State Attorney Hunter states that $2000 has already been spent in an effort to find Walden. He is known to be in Ontario, but his exact location is not learned.

Have You Money to Waste? Are You Willing to Save It?

The honest pharmacist may, without flattery, be called a benefactor of humanity. He spends a number of years in the thorough mastery of his profession and is a man of broad views, liberal education, and wide experience. The honest pharmacist, although in a sense he is a merchant, does not sink his profession below the level of a trade.

It is impracticable for everyone to have an intimate knowledge of drugs and chemistry, just as it is impossible for every person to be an expert electrician or astronomer—it is all a matter of education and experience.

The honest pharmacist is not "stuck up," he does not "own the earth", and he is wise enough to know it.

You will find Leonard J. Pastor, Ph. C., at THE PHENIX PHARMACY, 27 School street, Quincy. He is always courteous and obliging. You will have no cause to regret the time and trouble; it is more than likely that you will be pleased at making the acquaintance of the model pharmacist, Leonard J. Pastor, Ph. G.

It is needless to enumerate every article that is sold at The Phenix Pharmacy; it is enough to state that the stock of Drugs, Chemicals, Patent Medicines, and Herbs is the most complete in this vicinity, while the selling price may be judged from the few prices submitted herewith:

Restful Sleep.

If there's one thing on earth a tired body is entitled to, it's a comfortable, soft and luxurious bed at night.

There isn't one person in fifty that knows just how to bring about these results, but we've made a study of it from a scientific point of view and have all the fittings that go to make the rig.

Spring beds that almost woo you to sleep, comfort-bringing mattresses that rest the weary bones and make a life worth twice its living, and best of all the dreamy and restful sort of pillows.

There are many hardships in life, but you can square yourself with the world if you buy your bedding here.

An anonymous communication protesting against the discharge of George Connor from the Quincy Point hose company has been received. Being anonymous it has been consigned to the waste basket.

N. B. Funald is to build another store to his building on Water street, and somewhat larger, than that occupied by Peter Haverly, which is to be occupied by L. M. Pratt & Co. as a fish market.

The treasurer of the Quincy Yacht club has received another five dollar bill to pay for annual dues without the name of the sender. What's the matter with the members of the Quincy Yacht club?

The "Precious Pickle" at the Universalist vestry, last evening, was much enjoyed by a good audience. The young ladies did finely and carried off their parts in a very creditable manner. The readings and music also received encores.

Barre Agreement,

The Leader of Barre, Vt., reports that Granite Manufacturers' association at a meeting Jan. 15, voted upon the request of Barre Branch of the National Granite Cutters' union to strike out what is called the discrimination clause incorporated in the agreement of 1892, by which the big lockout was settled. A special meeting was called Saturday evening to reconsider the vote but the action of the previous meeting was sustained. Thomas Cave, Jr., succeeds E. M. Tayntor as secretary of the Barre association.

Deputy Sheriff Field.

Among the "Travelerettes" in the Traveler of Tuesday was the following personal of local interest.

"One of Sheriff Endicott's oldest deputies out at Dedham is George H. Field, known throughout the legal profession as Harvey Field, of Quincy. Well versed in court procedure, he is one of the most valuable assistants in the court room, while his acquaintance about the county is probably as extensive as any of the public officers in Norfolk. Every one has a pleasant word for Mr. Field, and about every lawyer in the county has had to acknowledge his courtesy on more than one occasion."

Quincy's Rockefeller.

Mr. John R. Graham is rapidly becoming the John B. Rockefeller of Quincy, for he has not only accumulated quite a little fortune in the various enterprises which have been started out in the Granite City, but nearly all of them have proved to be not only successful, but of actual public benefit. He was one of the incorporators of the street railway which yearly carries thousands of passengers from the surrounding towns to Quincy, but his enterprise in opening up some of the vacant tracts about the city has done much to make the city prosper during the past few years.—Traveller.

It is said that the cordage on a first-class man-of-war costs about $15,000.

GROCERS' BANQUET.

The Quincy Association Entertain Old Colony Brethren.

Mr. Joseph P. Prout Presides at Post Prandial Exercises.

The Menu, Speakers and a List of Those Present.

The Quincy Grocers' Association was not formed to give short weight on goods but to prevent long waits on the part of the grocers for their money. The annual banquet Wednesday evening at Faxon hall was not short weighted, neither were there any long waits between the courses. Caterer Nash served one of his tempting spreads as will be seen by the menu below, and the list of guests appended shows that many of the solid weights were in attendance. It could not have been in Quincy that a farmer's daughter attempted to trade some butter and insisted it weighed five pounds because she had weighed it with five pounds of soap bought at the same store the day before.

The Old Colony association held a short business meeting before the banquet, at which resolutions were adopted criticising the course of the Boston retail grocers in opposing the food fair to be held by the Old Colony association in Boston next fall.

The following menu was then discussed while Hanson's orchestra rendered the latest popular music.

Providence River Oysters.
Hot Roast Turkey, Roast Chicken
Cranberry Sauce. Currant Jelly.
Mashed Potatoes, French Peas.
Lobster Salad, from the Shell.
Chicken Salad.
Escalloped Oysters, Providence River.
Celery. Olives.
English Pickles. Cheese.
Plain and Fancy Cake in Variety.
Vanilla Ice Cream. Chocolate Ice Cream.
Frozen Pudding.
Pineapple Sherbet. Roman Punch.
Oranges. Malaga Grapes. Bananas.
Coffee. French Rolls. Tea.

Chairman Prout welcomed the guest. He said sociability had become a prominent part of the Quincy association. Five years ago however it was a necessity, and was organized for that reason. The Old Colony association had been an outgrowth of it, and he was pleased to note that it also was a success.

Andrew J. McNeil, the president of the Old Colony association, was first introduced. He spoke words of encouragement for the approaching food fair. As he was about to close Osborne Rogers hastened forward and presented Mr. McNeil with a framed life-sized portrait of himself. It was not a perfect likeness, however, for the snap shot was obtained before the gentleman lost his mustache and assumed his priestly appearance.

L. M. Pratt, the second president of the Quincy association, made the speech of the evening. The starting of the association was a great undertaking, he said, and had cost the twenty members over $1000 the first year, but they had since reaped dollars where cents had been sown, and the collector had earned a good salary on percentage, so that many had paid who did not want to. The expenses had not been so heavy since the first year. It was not a fact that the association had been formed to advance prices, as sugar was the only article upon which there was an agreement. He believed the food fair would be a success if properly conducted.

Other speakers were Messrs. Connell, Lynch, Humphrey, Prescott and Green. These were interspersed with music by the orchestra and solos by Galen V. Bowditch. A letter of regret was received from Mayor Adams.

Cigars were contributed by Fleischmann, the yeast manufacturer.

At the head table were Joseph P. Prout, chairman of the Quincy committee; Andrew McNeil of Hingham, president of the Old Colony Grocers' and Provision Dealers' Union; M. W. Lynch of East Weymouth, secretary of the Old Colony Union; A. C. Humphrey of Hingham, Josephus Sampson of Braintree, H. P. Capen of Rockland, Frederick Humphrey of Hingham and Frank L. Clark of Rockland.

At the table on the right were A. E. Hobart of Hingham, William H. Bain of Boston, J. Marcus Arnold of Braintree, C. H. Hobart of South Braintree, F. W. Hayden of Randolph, C. W. Hollis of Braintree, H. F. Holmes of East Weymouth, John J. Guess, Councilman E. G. Cleaves, Richard Prout, William Prout, Franklin Jacobs, J. W. Dennen, P. J. Williams, J. E. Hayden, E. H. Doane, J. Peterson, John A. Connell of East Weymouth.

On the table to the left were: Walter B. Wilson, W. E. Howe, Geo. H. Wilson, Osborne Rogers, W. L. Murdock of North Abington, C. L. Keon of North Abington, E. T. Paty of Abington, Arthur T. Faunce of North Abington, Frank F. Prescott of Quincy DAILY LEDGER, Lester M. Pratt, Howard Rogers, A. F. Macleod, Frederick E. Goss, George F. Spooner, J. A. North of Chicago, Joseph W. Johnson, C. E. Tuttle of Boston, Robert T. Johnson, John Curtis, 2d, Frank Kemp of East Milton, T. L. Pearce of East Milton, Councilman T. J. Lamb, G. H. Hardwick, John W. Nash, Fred F. Green, T. J. Collins and G. V. Bowditch.

FOR POLITICAL WORK.

Henry H. Faxon Sends Check of $500 to W. C. T. Union.

Mrs. Susan S. Fessenden, President of the Mass. W. C. T. Union:

Inclosed find $500 to be used in political temperance work. Do not be frightened at the word "political." The rumseller and his patrons are always on the alert to protect their interests, not by going to church, but by attending the caucuses and the polls.

Do not devote your time, money or energies in petting inebriates but aim directly at the saloon where vice and politics form a dangerous combination.

In looking over my legislative records for the past fifteen years, I am disgusted to note that the representatives of the Democratic party have, almost without exception, favored the dram-shop and all that it stands for. It is also true, and none the less disheartening to me to realize that many prominent Republicans, especially in Boston, Holyoke and Fall River are in league with those who uphold the saloon.

I would advise you not to waste efforts in trying to convert the heathen in Africa, but to be untiring in the work of converting capitalists and distillers who are shipping rum to that and other heathen countries. Yours truly,

HENRY H. FAXON.

Quincy, February 13, 1896.

WOMEN OR MEN?

Does the United States Owe as Much to the Former as Latter.

President Saunders took the chair Wednesday at the meeting of the Q. H. S. Debating society. Mr. Walsh, '97, presented the secretary's report.

The debate was on this subject:—"Resolved, that the United States Owes as Much to Its Women as to Its Men.

The affirmative was taken by Miss Maxim, Miss McGuane, Miss McPherson and Miss Mitchell.

The negative by Miss Perry, Miss M. Perry, Miss Pratt and Miss Sampson.

When the debate was open to the society Miss Cummings, Miss Coyle, Mr. Foley, Mr. Coe, Mr. Walsh, Miss Thompson, Miss Leake, Miss McPherson, Miss Mitchell, Miss Peterson, Miss Johnson, Miss Joss, Miss Roche, Miss Rothwell and Mr. Nichols spoke.

The debate was extremely interesting and lively. When fifteen pupils speak voluntarily on a subject, it would seem that the topic must be one of considerable interest. The verdict of the board of decision was reserved.

A Prominent Physician Speaks.

The following was taken from Merck's Index, a Medical Journal published in New-York, January 15, 1896:

"I have treated 72 cases of diphtheria in this city with anti-toxin with highly satisfactory results; prompt and complete recovery in all cases. Bacteriologic examinations were made by the Board of Health. I have also used immunization in over 200 instances, and in no case was diphtheria contracted, although frequently living in the room with the contagion."

ON THE WAY HOME.

Embezzler Murphy's Application For Writ of Habeas Corpus Denied.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 13.—Judge Bethers yesterday denied the writ of habeas corpus sued out by Clarence M. Murphy, detained at city prison for bank theft committed in Salem, Mass., two years ago.

CLARENCE MURPHY.

Marshal Hart arrived here two weeks ago and obtained requisition papers so the prisoner might be returned to Massachusetts for trial. These papers Murphy sought to evade.

In his opinion denying writ of habeas corpus Judge Bethers said: "The supreme court of Kentucky has held, as has several other states, the words, treason, felony or other crimes, include every offense from highest to lowest known to law. Therefore the offender may be returned to the state from which he fled."

Wizard Edison's Experiments.

ORANGE, N. J., Feb. 13.—Edison continues his experiments with Roentgen rays, and, although many of his experiments were unsuccessful, he is as enthusiastic as ever, and declares he will try photographing a brain as soon as he secures rays strong enough to suit his purpose. The most important discovery made by him was that the flickering noticeables in the fluorescent tubes is controlled by the vacuum in the glass bulbs and not by the force fluctuation of the electric current, as has been supposed. This discovery was made by placing two tubes on the same circuit, when in one the fluorescence flickered considerably and the others remained steady. Edison proposes to try if the rays can be sent over a telephone wire, placing the diaphragm of one receiver in front of a tube and a receiver at the other end of the wire in an adjoining room, in front of a sensitized plate. If the experiment is successful, he says the possibilities of the application of the rays will be immense, and may include a practical device for sending pictures by telegraph.

Bicycle Classes Abolished.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 13.—All classes heretofore recognized by the League of American Wheelmen were abolished at yesterday's session of the national convention, and cycle riders are now in exactly the same category as are all other athletes and sportsmen. In the future the league will recognize no grades of amateurs. Any rider who does not live strictly up to the rules governing non-professional sports will be placed in the ranks of the professionals. This result was reached by the repeal of all the clauses in the league constitution creating classes "A" and "B," and defining the status of the men who formerly belonged to them.

To Fight or Not to Fight?

EL PASO, Tex., Feb. 13.—Governor Ahumada of the state of Chihuahua is determined to prevent the fight coming off in his territory. He now has 500 men in Juarez, and with these, he says, he will patrol the banks and allow nobody to cross for the purpose of holding a fight. "If they come into my province," he declared, "with intent to break the law or fight, I shall repel them by force and stop the fight at any cost." Dan Stuart says: "The fights will come off. I will not say where, but they will come off, and on the day scheduled. That is all I have to say, and it covers everything."

Zetounites Bend the Knee.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 13.—The foreign consuls at Zeitoun have induced the insurgents at that place to accept the conditions of the porte. Therefore the revolutionists now living at Zeitoun are to be expelled from the town. The Zeitounites are to be allowed to retain their old weapons, but are to surrender their modern rifles, and the 6000 Armenian refugees now at Zeitoun are to agree to return to their villages. In regard to the proposed revision of taxation the porte will treat directly with the Zeitounites.

Looking to Mother Country.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—The Times says: It is believed that the accession of Sir Charles Tupper to the ministry will lead Canada to make some kind offer of preferential trade with the mother country. It is probable that the united governments of Australia will make a similar offer. The recent turn of foreign affairs, especially regarding Germany and America, has given much popular impetus to this movement.

Letting Rhodes Out.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—The Daily Telegraph today publishes a Berlin dispatch which says that leading personages there are in possession of convincing evidence that the Jameson raid was wholly instigated and the expense defrayed by six well-known financiers, formerly German subjects, and without the knowledge of the Chartered South African company.

Indignities From Spaniards.

LEWES, Del., Feb. 13.—The master of the schooner Navarino, which arrived here last night reported that on coming out of Mananzilla, with the American flag flying, his vessel was boarded by the officers of a Spanish cruiser, who subjected her to a rigorous search. The ship was detained 24 hours on suspicion of being a Cuban filibuster.

American Artist Honored.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—The Royal academy has elected as associate members the English artist J. Solomon Solomon, and the well-known American artist, Edwin A. Abbey, who has resided in England a number of years.

Trouble May Result.

YOKOHAMA, Feb. 13.—The rebels in Korea have killed a small party of Japanese who were engaged in protecting the telegraph. The Russians have landed 100 men and a gun at Chemulpo.

BOSTON IDEAL CLUB.

Concert of Popular Music Interspersed with Monologues.

Another large audience was at Hancock hall Wednesday evening at the concert under the auspices of the employes of the Bay State Aluminum Company, and it took nearly 200 of those fancy aluminum hair pins to supply all of the ladies present with a souvenir. These pins are a pretty design and are often taken for silver. They are only one of many attractive articles in aluminum made by the Quincy company.

The concert artists were the Boston Ideal club, and Messrs. Lansing, Shattuck, Robi s n, Galeucia and Grover, appeared in many numbers. The mandolins and guitars opened with two selections. The banjo solos of Mr. Lansing received a hearty encore and he responded.

Mr. Edward T. Phelan, the humorist, appeared three times on the programme, and the audience clamored for more of his witty monologues.

The banjos and guitars received an encore and gave a Chinese serenade. The trick banjo solo was very good and Mr. Grover was recalled, as were also the Boston Ideals after their song "Lindy."

The Indian war dance by banjos and guitars was one of the features of the evening.

MILTON.

The political pot has commenced to boil, and as the annual town meeting approaches there is much talk of what is going to be done and what is not. There is a movement on the part of some of the voters to oust certain officials but as their following is small there is not much prospect of a change, as the only complaint against the officials seems to be that they do their duty, and are not affiliated with the so called A. P. A. This organization will show it hand at the caucus which will be held next Wednesday evening at the Town Hall.

The fourth subscription party will be held at Ellsworth hall, Friday evening.

The young ladies of East Milton are arranging for a leap year party to be held at an early date.

East Milton has three candidates for selectmen viz Messrs. Simpson, Wheeler and Bates.

POST OFFICE FIGHT.

Martin F. Burns After Postmaster Wilde's Position.

Is Backed by only Two of Democratic Ward Committee.

Leading Democrats Rallying to Support of Present Incumbent.

One of the strangest postmastership fights that has ever taken place in this state, and most assuredly in this city, is now being waged at Wollaston. It presents the odd spectacle of the Democratic party in that place as represented by six members of the Demmocratic Ward and City Committee, out of a total membership of nine, under the leadership of Chairman Charles T. Baker assisted by City Collector Brasee, making a strennous fight to have Charles F. Wilde, the present incumbent, a Republican, re apointed. It may be well to add here that Charles F. Baker and Watson H. Brasee are the nestors of the Wollaston Democracy. The other three members of the committee (one of whom is Martin F. Burns the applicant for the office) are working for Mr. Wilde's removal and the appointment of Mr. Burns.

Now it can be easily seen that for all practical purposes Mr. Burns has but two of the nine members of the committee who have endorsed his petition.

The Republicans are all unanimous for Postmaster Wilde's re-appointment, but knowing that it would be useless to ask a a Democratic administration to re-appoint a Republican office holder, are passive. But what they lack in openly backing up Mr. Wilde, is made up ten times over by the amount of work which Chairman Baker and his colleagues are putting in.

On January 23 Postmaster Wilde's commission expired. He was appointed by President Harrison in 1892. The office, which does a large business and is a Presidential one has always been kept out of politics through a tacit understanding between the Republicans and Democrats. Mr. Wilde succeeded a Democrat, but not on account of politics.

Shortly before Postmaster Wilde's term expired it became noised about town that Mr. Martin F. Burns, who has for many years been employed as a clerk at Boynton & Russell's grocery store, and has also acted as secretary of the Ward Five Democratic Committee, had aspirations for the postmastership of Wollaston. The rumor soon developed into a fact, but at the same time the Democratic Ward Committee announced that it would not indorse his petition or support him for the office. This added interest to the fight immediately, and people began to wonder where he expected to get his pull.

It soon transpired that Mr. Burns based his claim on the office on the fact that his wife had for many years previous to their marriage been connected with Josiah Quincy's family, and that Mayor Quincy out of friendship to her, would support him for the office. This, it is said, Mayor Quincy has promised to do. But nothing daunted, all the leading Democrats of the place rallied to Postmaster Wilde's support and have carried the case to the Hon. John W. Corcoran, Chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee.

As to Postmaster Wilde's record. The strongest endorsement comes from Mr. Burns himself, who, upon being asked by the writer a few days ago if there was any fault found with the manner in which Postmaster Wilde conducted the affairs of the office, said without hesitation.

"None whatever. Mr. Wilde has made a most excellent postmaster, there is no fault found with his administration of the office."

"Why do you want the office?" was next asked, "you have a good position here in this store."

"I want it simply because I do," was the laconic reply.

It is alleged that Mr. Burns and his friends are attempting to drag A. P. A.-ism into the contest. This seems to be an ill advised proceeding, as there is not a place in the Commonwealth that is more tolerant of a person's nationality, color, and religion than Wollaston. The people care not whether a man is black, white or yellow; whether he is a Yankee, a German, an Irishman, a Chinaman or a colored man; whether he is a Roman Catholic, a Protestant or a Buddist, so long as he is a good citizen and a gentleman.

The opposition of the Democrats to Mr. Burn's appointment is so determined that if by any chance should he receive it, the Democratic committee will enter a protest and have it hung up in the Senate, when it comes up for confirmation.

She Was Needlessly Excited.

Years ago, journeying with my husband in Italy, we were on one occasion sole occupants of the railway compartment. Stopping at Padua, a suspicious looking person entered the carriage, placing himself on the opposite seat with my husband, while I sat opposite them and diagonally from the newcomer.

My opinion of Italians, acquired from the reading of romance, was that they were mostly brigands or robbers. Here was one of the type. While I fastened my gaze upon his sinister countenance, what was my horror to see him stealthily draw a stiletto from his pocket and lay it by his side. I coughed—my husband ignored it. Then I placed my foot upon his, which he drew away, annoyed. Cold chills seized me. We had watches and money. People had been murdered for less. I feared to speak. French, German, even English, the man might know. My husband spoke Dutch. Would that I could have imparted my fears in that tongue! There was little danger of the highwayman's knowing it.

While I contemplated jumping from the window Mr. S—— was calmly viewing the Italian scenery without. Alarm bells were not in use, and the guard was a misnomer.

Again the man sought his pocket. This time for a pistol! No, it was merely a pamphlet, and he coolly took up the stiletto and cut the leaves preparatory to reading. I fell back exhausted; but, I further argued, might not a stiletto do double duty, much as forks can be used for toothpicks? Presently he laid the pamphlet down. My husband, glancing at the title page, immediately addressed the man in Dutch, afterward disclosing that our fellow traveler was a harmless Dutch dominie. The stiletto proved a paper cutter and the murderous gleam in his eye only the blue light of Calvinism.—Chicago Times-Herald.

A Famous French Duelist.

The late Marquis de l'Angle-Beaumanoir was in his younger days famous as a duelist. One evening, meeting his cousin, the Marquis du Hallays, in the foyer of the Opera, he walked up to him and, in the course of conversation, remarked:

"Isn't it odd, my dear fellow, that, quarrelsome as you and I are, we should never have fought with one another?"

"That's true," replied Du Hallays, "but that can always be remedied."

And on the strength of that, the two cousins met in mortal combat on the following morning, the encounter resulting in the Marquis de l'Angle-Beaumanoir having his right hand pierced by his adversary's rapier, which, while it rendered a continuance of the fight impossible, left the other hand free to grasp that of his cousin in undiminished friendship a moment afterward. On another occasion, when he was about to fight a duel in which he was entirely in the right and his adversary in the wrong, he suddenly discovered that his opponent was a perfect novice in swordsmanship, and that he would, therefore, have him completely at his mercy. So he strode up to him and, in the presence of 20 or 30 persons, presented the most courteous and full apology. Almost dumfounded, the latter inquired why the marquis assumed such an extraordinary course. "Because," he returned, "it would really be too unfortunate if I were to fight with a mazette (greenhorn)." And with that he made a low bow and then turned his back upon him.—San Francisco Argonaut.

—Our Boston contemporaries seem to have been entirely oblivious to the fact that the largest newspaper organization in the world held a very important convention in St. Augustine week before last, that they were tendered a banquet by the citizens of St. Augustine, Fla., at what is probably the finest appointed hotel in the world, on Jan. 24, a reception by the Board of Trade of Jacksonville on Jan. 30, and the northern contingent were received by the Mayor of Charleston on Jan. 31.—Waltham Free Press.

INTEREST DYING OUT.

A Corporal's Guard at Last Night's Session on Coinage Debate.

The Senate Considers Urgent Deficiency Bill.

Lively Criticism on Growing Expenditures In the Department of Justice.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—The house spent another day in the discussion of the silver bond bill. Mr. Bailey (Dem., Tex.) sought to prove that gold had depreciated within the last 20 years, saying that if this was true the opponents of silver would have nothing to stand on, as the basis of their contention was that gold was stable. He had no special preference for either gold or silver, but desired that which was most stable.

Mr. McCleary (Rep., Minn.) said he would endeavor to answer the statements made by his colleague, Mr. Towne. He used the maps employed by Mr. Towne last week, and asserted that they did not bear out the free silver arguments of his colleague.

At the night session the general debate on the free coinage substitute bill was more poorly attended than any of its predecessors. The galleries were almost empty, and there were but seven members on the floor. Mr. Bingham (Rep., Pa.), in opposition to the senate free coinage substitute, predicted another $100,000,000 bond issue unless some legislation was enacted covering gold redemption of greenbacks. The only two other speakers—Wood (Rep., Ill.) and Gardner (Rep., N. J.)—were against the substitute. At 9 o'clock, for want of more speakers, the house took a recess until today.

Routine Business In the Senate.

It was expected that the tariff bill would come up in the senate yesterday, Mr. Morrill, chairman of the finance committee, having given notice of a motion to that effect. But the subject was not mentioned during the day, and the entire session was given to routine business.

The consideration of the urgent deficiency bill was resumed. The item of $210,000 for salaries of judges and officers of the federal courts in the Indian Territory brought out a protest from Mr. Chandler. Two of the judges (Springer and Kilgore) are ex-members of congress, and had gone to the Indian Territory "with all the extravagant notions engendered by life in Washington and membership in a billion-dollar Democratic congress." Mr. Chandler said he was not yet prepared to make charges, but he believed from letters received that all is not as it should be in the administration of Indian courts.

Mr. Chandler also criticized the growing expenditures under the department of justice. These had trebled in 10 years, with little increase in business. The senator pointed out that the last congress—Democratic in both branches, and with a Democratic president—had appropriated $675,000 for United States marshals, and made it necessary to provide $1,190,000 for deficiencies for United States marshals. Mr. Chandler declared that the fee system was responsible for the growing extravagance of federal court officers. He spoke of conspiracies in Alabama, South Carolina and elsewhere to get up fraudulent prosecutions to swell fees of officers.

This brought Mr. Tillman (Dem., S. C.) to his feet for a characteristic speech. He agreed with Mr. Chandler that the fee system was wrong. A supreme court judge had recently pointed out that court officials were encouraged to get up fictitious prosecutions. There is a class of habitual witnesses in the south. They do nothing but earn witness fees, going around "bamboozling" negroes and getting them to prosecute fictitious cases. When South Carolina had the fee system for local justice courts the dockets were loaded with chicken stealing cases.

Expensive Government System.

Mr. Sherman spoke of the enormous cost of our governmental system, which arose in part from the complication of appropriation bills, and urged that the budget system in use in England was far simpler than that of the American, and could be profitably adopted.

Mr. Vest spoke of the "robbery and plunder" practiced by United States marshals in order to earn fees. There were coteries and rings of these marshals who make it a trade to go around arresting men and dragging them hundreds of miles to jail, not for the purpose of justice, but to swell marshals' fees.

The deficiency bill was then laid aside, and Mr. Hale called up the bill making Feb. 12 (Lincoln's birthday) a national holiday. He said it would be an appropriate and graceful act to pass the measure on the anniversary of Lincoln's birth.

Mr. Hill (Dem., N. Y.) said he had intended to offer an amendment making the birthday of Andrew Jackson a legal holiday, but in order not to interfere with this measure he would submit his bill separately. The bill was about to pass when Mr. Hawley (Rep., Conn.) remarked that he did not wish to seem ungracious in such a matter, but he was of the opinion that the limit of national holidays was about reached. More of them might put this country into the condition of those foreign countries which had so many saints days that people had no time to work. Mr. Hawley objected to the immediate consideration of the bill, and this prevented action.

On motion of the chairman of the Republican senate caucus committee, the Utah senators were assigned to committee places as follows: Senator Brown, to the committees on mines and mining, forest reservations and Indian depredations; Senator Cannon, to the committees on pensions, manufactures and relations with Canada. To render these assignments possible, Senator Pettigrew resigned from the committe on mines and mining; Senator Mantle from the forest reservations; Senator Sewell from Indian depredations; Senator Lodge from pensions; Senator Cameron from manufactures, and Senator Perkins from relations with Canada—the Utah senators being given the places thus vacated.

A bill for the admission of Arizona as a state was introduced by Senator Carter (Rep., Mont.) and referred.

Damage Over $4,000,000.

LIMA, Feb. 13.—The city of Guayaquil in Ecuador has been visited by a terrible fire. The Peruvian consulate, the St. Augustine church and several blocks of buildings were destroyed. The losses will aggregate over $4,000,000. The conflagration made speedy and irresistible headway, in spite of strong efforts of the fire brigade, on account of the character of the buildings in the town.

The Cucumber Sponge.

In the cucumber sponge (Euplectella cucumber) we have a specimen of one which lies upon the mud after the manner of its namesake, which it somewhat resembles. Perhaps, however, the most beautiful of all these silicious sponges is Euplectella aspergillum, or, as it is commonly called, Venus' flower basket. It is like a beautiful horn of glassy fibers or a graceful bouquet holder. The first specimen of this sponge in England came into the possession of the late Professor Owen in 1841. It was held by him as a great treasure. It was soon followed by a few more specimens, which were sold in the market at about £6 apiece, but now that they have been found to be so plentiful they may be bought for as many shillings. These sponges were found by the Challenger expedition to be growing in vast abundance in certain spots in the deep waters among the Philippine islands and also off the coast of Brazil. "They live buried in mud which is so soft and loose as not to crush them or in any way to impede the assumption of their elegant form, and they are supported in their position and prevented from sinking by a fringe of glassy spicules.

"The tube of this specimen from the Philippines, after the death of the sponge, is frequently inhabited by one, sometimes by a pair, of decapod crustaceans." He reminds one forcibly of the hermit crab we have all seen living in dead shells upon our own shores. "These," says the same author, "are so often found together that only a few years ago a paper was written to show that this sponge was a wonderful habitation constructed by this crab."—Good Words.

Speechless and Swollen.

A story at the expense of Sir William Harcourt is worth repeating. Before his recent departure for the continent the ex-chancellor of the exchequer spent some time at the seaside, and on one occasion visited a man-of-war lying on the Hampshire coast.

After dinner, the weather proving rather rough, the captain, an unusually small and dapper man, suggested that Sir William should sleep on board, and thoughtfully surrendered his own berth for the night to his distinguished guest.

Next morning, at the early hour when the captain usually rose, the latter's sailor servant, who knew nothing of the change of berths, brought a cup of coffee to the cabin door and knocked once or twice without receiving an answer. Somewhat alarmed, the servant popped in his head and asked:

"Don't you want your coffee this morning, sir?"

The only reply was in the nature of a growl, and the terrified sailor beheld a gigantic figure turning over under the bedclothes. Dropping the cup of coffee, the faithful servant rushed to the ship's surgeon, exclaiming:

"For goodness' sake, sir, come to the captain at once. He's speechless, and swollen to ten times his natural size."—Strand Magazine.

The Father of the Cocktail.

The cocktail was the invention of Colonel Carter of Culpeper Court House, Va. Many years ago in that locality there was a wayside inn named the Cock and Bottle, the semblance of an old English tavern, and which bore upon its swinging sign a cock and bottle, meaning thereby that draft and bottled ale could be had within—the "cock," in old vernacular, meaning the tap. He, therefore, who got the last and muddy portion of the tap was said to have received the "cocktail."

Upon one occasion, when Colonel Carter was subjected to the indignity of having this muddy beverage put before him, he threw it angrily upon the floor and exclaimed, "Hereafter I will drink cocktails of my own brewing," and then and there, inspired evidently by the spirit of Ganymede, he dashed together bitters, sugar, the oil of lemon peel and some old Holland gin, and thus and then and there was the original cocktail concocted.—Philadelphia Times.

A Brilliant Confederate.

A prestidigitator, in the course of an exhibition in New York recently, had one of the audience select one card from a pack and then he handed a sheet of paper to another spectator, a timid looking blond man. The professor, who did not see the card, announced that after it had been returned to the pack the description of it would be found written on the paper. The card was the eight of hearts. It was taken out by the professor. "Is that it—the eight of hearts?" asked the professor. "That's all right," answered the timid looking man. But he was a very conscientious man, and later he insisted on telling the audience that the professor had written on the paper, "Please say, 'That's all right.'"

Nature No Sabbatarian.

The Rev. David Macrae has brought together in a most interesting little volume, entitled "Quaint Sayings of Children," a number of stories, many of them old, but nearly all of them good. There is one, evidently told in print for the first time, of a little girl in Aberdeen who brought a basket of strawberries to the minister very early on Monday morning. "Thank you, my little girl," he said; "they are very beautiful. But I hope you didn't gather them yesterday, which was the Sabbath day?" "No, sir," replied the child, "I pulled them this morning. But they was grown in all yesterday."

A Simple Diagnosis.

Professor Schuslich—I don't know what's the matter with me, doctor. I am perpetually limping today. Is it locomotor ataxy, I wonder?

Doctor—Why, professor, you are walking with one foot on the curbstone and the other in the gutter.—Lustige Blatter.

In the Cyclopean buildings at Baalbec there are stones 60 feet long, 4 feet thick and 16 feet wide. Some of them are 30 feet above the foundation.

The war department was established by act of congress Aug. 7, 1789.

BABY'S COMING.

Nature intended that every woman should look forward to the coming of her baby with joy and hope, unclouded by anxiety. Almost painless parturition is quite the usual thing among uncivilized people. Even in our own country it occasionally happens with women in robust health and good condition. It ought to be the rule instead of the exception; and it is a fact that a very large proportion of the usual pain and suffering may be avoided by looking after the mother's general health, and specially strengthening the particular organs concerned in parturition.

Many mothers have been brought through the trying time almost painlessly by the aid of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It prepares the system for delivery by imparting the organic strength and elasticity which the mother specially needs; shortens the time of labor and of confinement; promotes the secretion of abundant nourishment for the child and fortifies the entire constitution against the after period of depression and weakness. It's use should begin in the early months of gestation—the earlier the better.

MRS. FRED HUNT, of Glenville, Schenectady Co., N. Y., says: "I read about Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription being so good for a woman with child, so I got two bottles last September, and December 13th, I had a twelve-pound baby girl. When I was confined I was not sick in any way. I did not suffer any pain, and when the child was born I walked into another room and went to bed. I never had an after-pain or any other pain. This is the eighth child and the largest of them all. I suffered everything that flesh could suffer with the other babies. I always had a doctor and then he could not help me very much, but this time my mother and my husband were alone with me. My baby was only seven days old when I got up and dressed and left my room and stayed up all day."

HANGED BY A MOB.

Grant Atterbury the Victim of Lynch Law in an Illinois Town.

SULLIVAN, Ills., Feb. 13.—Grant Atterbury was taken from the jail here yesterday morning, dragged to the courthouse and hanged to a tree. The mob numbered only 15 men, but they were fully armed and carried sledge hammers. They acted quickly, and marched from the schoolhouse to the jail, which was guarded only by the sheriff and one deputy.

Atterbury was under arrest, charged with criminally assaulting Mrs. Roxy Atterbury on the night of Jan. 28. The evidence against him was very strong. The morning after the crime was committed bloodhounds were brought to the scene, and three different times they went direct to the house of Grant Atterbury. Atterbury was a brother-in-law of Mrs. Roxy Atterbury.

John Bull Acquiesces.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—Ambassador Bayard has informed Secretary Olney by cable that the British government has acceded to the request of the Venezuelan commission, transmitted through the department of state and himself, to supply all of the information in its possession that would throw light upon the question as to the location of the boundry line between Venezuela and British Guiana. The ambassador expects that the matter will be forthcoming very shortly in the shape of advance sheets of the Blue Book on the subject which is being prepared for the information of parliament, and this advance information he will promptly dispatch for the use of the commission.

Good For Dillon.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—In the house of commons yesterday, in the course of the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne, John Dillon, Nationalist member for East Mayo, referring to the Venezuelan difficulty, said that England had accepted the principle of arbitration after menacing the United States. It would have been much more decent and a great deal wiser, he said, if England had accepted arbitration six months ago, and it would also be better for England if she adopted toward weak and unarmed nations the same measure of civility which she had shown to America.

End of an Honored Career.

TOLEDO, Feb. 13.—Judge E. D. Potter died yesterday, aged 92. He had been postmaster, customs collector, common pleas judge, served in both branches of the legislature and was representative in congress in 1851, where he led the fight for a reduction of postage to 3 cents instead of from 5 to 25 cents, according to distance. Objection being made in the house to the reduction to 3 cents because of the difficulty of making change, he inserted in the bill a section authorizing the coinage of the silver 3-cent piece, which remained until repealed by the coinage law of 1873.

Cost of Coast Defense.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—General Craighill, chief of engineers of the war department, has written to the chairman of the committee on coast reforms on the subject of the cost of engineering the work planned for the fortifications of the 27 principal coast cities of the country as recommended by the Endicott board in 1886. He places the outside cost at $70,000,000, but he thinks it possible to do the work with $60,000,000 if it can be done under the continuous contract system, and for $55,000,000 or less if the eight-hour law were not applicable.

Doesn't Understand Salisbury.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—The Chronicle this morning says: When Lord Rosebery was in power Russia declined to interfere in Armenia, but promised not to object if England decided to act herself. It is difficult, therefore, to understand Lord Salisbury's fear of war resulting from English interference.

Promptitude of Morgan.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—J. P. Morgan was at the treasury department yesterday in conference with Secretary Carlisle and Assistant Secretary Hamlin. He proposes to deposit all the gold called for by his bond purchases during the present week. It is understood that a large fraction of it will be foreign gold.

Cause of Cecil's Departure.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—It is rumored that the sudden departure of Cecil Rhodes from England was due to the desire to forestall a detective whom the government had sent with a warrant to formally arrest Dr. Jameson.

Gold Reserve Gains.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—The treasury gold reserve, at the close of business yesterday, stood at $64,841,279, a gain of $12,901,976, being the second day's receipts of gold for the new bond issue.

KING OF TIGRE.

King of Tigre, comrade true,
Where in all thine isles art thou?
Sailing on Fonseca blue?
Wearing Amapala now?
King of Tigre, where art thou?

Batt ing for Antilles' queen?
Saber hilt or olive bough?
Crown of dust or laurel green?
Raving love or marriage vow?
King and comrade, where art thou?

Sailing on Pacific seas?
Pitching tents in Pima now?
Underneath magnolia trees?
Thatch of palm or cedar bough?
Soldier singer, where art thou?

Coasting on the Oregon?
Saddle bow or birchen prow?
Round the isles of Amazon?
Pampas, plain or mountain brow?
Prince of rovers, where art thou?

Answer me from out the west!
I am weary, stricken now;
Thou art strong, and I would rest;
Reach a hand with lifted brow!
King of Tigre, where art thou?"
—Charles Warren Stoddard.

FANNING'S HEART.

Miss Irwin was very busy. She was handling a difficult assignment which by rights should have been given to one of the men reporters, and so it happened that she remained after every one else had gone to dinner, and for some time the walls of the city editor's room had listened to the unusual sound at such an hour of a bad stub pen scratching over thin brown paper.

Finally the monotonous scratching was interrupted by the opening of a door, and Fanning, the police reporter, hastily entered. Miss Irwin paused in her story long enough to look up.

"Oh," she said, "it's you, Fanning. Been to dinner already?"

"No, ma'am, not yet. I'm looking for Scranton. Hasn't come back yet, has he?"

"Not yet. Anything I can do for you?"

"No, thanks. I just wanted to see him about a story on that little chap that was hurt. Heard about it, didn't you? Scranton interested. The little chap's dying. I've just come from the house. The doctors all say he'll die tonight, and I wanted to tell Scranton. I am so worried. Pshaw, I'm worried sick. I'"—He paused, ran his fingers through his hair and looked embarrassed.

"Come, now, Fanning, tell me all about it," said the thoroughly interested Miss Irwin.

"There ain't much to tell. Oh, you mean what I'm worrying about? Well, to put the whole thing in a few lines, I'm afraid he might not die in time for me to get my story for the morning's paper. Just think of what I'd lose—such a beautiful story."

Miss Irwin looked shocked, and Fanning saw it. His blue eyes took on a resolute expression, but the muscles of his face did not move, nor did his red cheeks grow the least bit redder. He lit a cigarette and said doggedly:

"Yes, ma'am; so long as he's going to die—they said he won't live through tonight—he might have enough consideration for me to arrange it in time. Just my luck to get scooped." And he knocked off some cigarette ashes.

"Why, you cruel, cruel fellow," she exclaimed, in a disappointed tone, "I didn't think you were that sort."

It was Fanning's turn to look disappointed. "You seem to think, because I talk as I do, that a police reporter hasn't any feelings at all," he said, in an injured way. "Maybe we've got more than you think. Now, there ain't anybody sorrier than I am for that little boy. Why, his mother and sister think I'm the best friend they've got, because if I hadn't said my say, the bully who hurt the little chap wouldn't have been held at all. I fixed him all right enough, though; made things pretty lively at the police court, didn't I? Well, I guess.

"Say, if he would only hurry up and die in time I could write the most elegant and touching story. You just ought to see him. Everybody takes so much interest in him, and folks send him books and toys and jelly and all sorts of good things to eat. When I saw him this evening, the bed was covered with playthings, but if you'll believe it, he didn't seem to care for 'em at all. The only thing he noticed was a bunch of roses somebody had sent him. He wouldn't part with 'em, and when I saw him lying back there with the flowers against his cheek, I thought how pretty it would be for me to have him die with them in his hand. Say, wouldn't that be picturesque? I won't bother you, though, any longer. If you see Scranton, tell him about it; he'll be interested."

The door closed, and Miss Irwin was again alone. She couldn't take up the train of thought she had been pursuing when interrupted, and she still had the shocked look she assumed at the beginning of Fanning's conversation.

"Such a hardened fellow," she muttered, "and yet at heart I really believe him to be what he says he is."

The next morning Miss Irwin scanned the papers, but saw nothing about the boy. The evening papers contained long accounts of his life and death. Miss Irwin felt rather sorry that Fanning, with all his cruel, kind heart, had been scooped. She was sure his account would have surpassed those she had read, and she sighed as she thought of the roses. They had not been mentioned at all.

Several days passed. She was anxious to meet the police reporter. Curiosity caused her to wonder what he would say. Finally the chance came. She happened to be waiting for a car when Fanning passed. She stopped him.

"By the way, Fanning, I saw you were cheated out of your story about the little boy."

'Yes, I was. Luck's dead against me."

"What time did he die?"

"Three a. m. exactly. Just too late for me to get in even a line. I was there when he died."

"Poor, dear, little fellow! How did he die?"

"He died on space rates, ma'am."

Miss Irwin thought that she had become used to the reporter's peculiar style, but his reply was too much for her. When she regained her composure, she said:

"I mean, did he know anybody? Was he conscious to the last?"

"Oh, yes. He just opened his eyes; then he shut 'em again, and he opened 'em again and smiled real sweet at his mother and sister and me, and then, and then he—he just died nice, real nice.

"Say," he touched Miss Irwin on the arm and laughed, "what do you suppose? His mother thinks so much of me she asked me to pick out the coffin; said she didn't know what would be appropriate. I selected a little beauty. Say, you ought to have seen him in it."

Miss Irwin was becoming vastly interested in Fanning. He was so different from any one she had ever met before. Then, too, he puzzled her. His conversation was certainly of a "don't care" style, but somehow she couldn't believe him to be as heartless as he seemed. His story about the death of the little boy had affected her greatly; so much so, in fact, that she went to see the sorrow stricken mother.

"Oh," said the mother, between her tears, "you are from The Morning Herald, you say? It is so kind of you to come. My poor little boy thought The Herald was the best paper in town; he often sold it. If all the people on The Herald are so good and kind as you and Mr. Fanning"—

"Fanning!"

"Yes, do you know him? I don't know what on earth I would have done in all my trouble if it hadn't been for him. He's got the kindest, most generous heart. 'The Lord loveth a cheerful giver,' but then, Mr. Fanning can afford to give, and"—

"Fanning afford to give!" ejaculated Miss Irwin. "Why"—

"It's a blessed thing to be rich, and to have so much power on a great big paper like The Herald," continued the elder woman. 'Of course, if he had been poorer off than he really is, I wouldn't have let him do what he did."

"May I ask what he did?" inquired Miss Irwin.

"Yes, indeed, and I'm only too glad to tell you about it. I believe in mentioning good deeds. Mr. Fanning's paper took such an interest in my little boy that it printed long columns about him, and then Mr. Fanning had the man who injured my boy put in jail, and then he sent him flowers—beautiful roses, the ones he was buried with—and Mr. Fanning even bought the coffin with his own money. When I told him not to do that, he laughed and said that was nothing—he could afford it."

"So," mused the lady reporter, as she walked away, "Fanning has spent all his hard earned savings on the flowers and coffin. He's a dear, good boy."—Omaha Herald.

Always Room For "Isers."

"The kind of men I want to hire," said a newspaper publisher the other day while talking to a friend, "are seldom to be had. No matter what their lines of business 'isers' (a word that rhymes with scissors) are never out of work and always get good money. I want some isers."

"Isers?" exclaimed his companion. "What on earth are isers?"

"To explain what they are," replied the publisher, "let me tell you a story of a 'want ad.' Once a man wished to employ for his circus an acrobat who could throw triple somersaults. So he put a 'want ad.' in the paper. In reply to the advertisement he received 50 letters. Together with a friend he read them over. Some of the letters he put in a pile by themselves. They were the ones that read something like this:

"DEAR SIR—You advertise for a man who can throw a triple somersault. I used to throw triple somersaults and think that after a little practice I could do it again. I'd like a trial.

"The other letters were put in another pile and ran something like this:

"DEAR SIR—I am a good acrobat; but, while I never have thrown triple somersaults, I think with a little practice I could do it. I'd like to have a trial.

"'Well,' said the circus man, as he shook his head sadly, 'there are 50 letters from 50 acrobats. Twenty-five of them are "has beens," 25 are "going to bes," but there ain't an "iser" in the whole lot.' Now, I want 'isers,' and so does every other business man, but they are all employed."—New York Tribune.

Mistaken Kindness.

One of the first resolutions which are formed by men and women who are succeeding in life, that is, as measured by the only standard in use nowadays, increasing their possessions far beyond their actual needs, is that they will put safeguards around their children; the hardships which they themselves contended against shall never, if they can help it, be encountered by their offspring. They not only coddle themselves, indulge themselves with unaccustomed luxuries and spare themselves all avoidable physical exertion, but they believe this course to be the right way to live, and that if it is good for them, it is good for their children. They do not understand that character is formed under the pressure of the compulsory hardships and self denials of youth, just as they forget that health is not a gift or an accident, but the reward of abstinence and of hard work under natural conditions, perhaps continued through several generations.—Frederick Tudor.

First Electric Light In a Theater.

It is believed that the first electric light installed in an American theater was a Jablochkoff candle, used as a focusing lamp in the old California theater, in Bush street, San Francisco, in 1878. The managers of the theater at that time were Messrs. Barton & Hill, General Barton and Frank Lawler. The play was "Antony and Cleopatra," Rose Eytinge and Cyril Searle taking the leading parts. Mr. A. H. Reece was the engineer in charge of the work.

Time has worked a complete revolution in theatrical lighting, and today there is not a theater in the United States which could dispense with the electric light.—Electricity.

RESULT OF A DEBAUCH

Rum-Crazed Husband Tries Hard to Murder His Wife.

Assailant a War Veteran and Ex-Policeman.

After Being Disarmed Succeeded In Making Good His Escape.

BOSTON, Feb. 14.—C. M. Lovis, 52 years old, a retired police officer, while intoxicated, fired four shots at his wife at their home on Church street. Only two of the bullets took effect, causing slight wounds of the shoulder.

Lovis is a big and powerful man. He is 6 feet tall and broad shouldered. He served on the police force at both stations 6 and 4. While at the latter station he was on duty at the Park square depot of the New York New Haven and Hartford railroad for some time. He always drank hard, and on March 16, 1885, he was discharged from the police force for drunkenness.

Since then he has done very little work. He drove a horsecar for a while and then got a job in the paving department. Two years ago he went to Philadelphia, and while there he met and married the woman whom he shot yesterday. They came to this city to live. Some months ago the woman discovered, it is said, that Lovis was not single when he married her.

She discovered that he had a wife living in Portland, Me., it is claimed. The result was that she refused longer to live with Lovis. She took the lodging house at 66 Church street. Lovis was not working. She hired a room for him in another section of the city and allowed him to take his meals with her. All the time he was getting ready to get a divorce from his first wife.

Yestersday afternoon he was exceedingly under the influence of liquor. He called at the Church-street house at about 3:30 in the afternoon and remained some time. In some way Mrs. Lovis ran across a pawn ticket in Lovis' pocket. She looked at it and saw that it represented a new suit of clothes that she had given him, and as a result they had some words. Mrs. Lovis put on her mackintosh to go out. A young woman was with her.

Work of a Craven.

"I want to see you alone a minute," said Lovis. Mrs. Lovis asked the young woman to step outside and wait for her. She did as requested. She had not been outside very long, when Mrs. Lovis ran screaming out of the room. Lovis closely followed with a pistol in his hand. This happened in the parlor on the street floor. As Mrs. Lovis ran out she started down the basement stairs to the kitchen. Half way down she received the first bullet in the shoulder, Lovis having opened fire from above.

McDonald, one of the lodgers, heard the noise of the shots and ran to Mrs. Lovis' assistance. Lovis was in the act of firing a fourth shot when McDonald ran into the kitchen and pluckily jumped at the would-be murderer. He seized Lovis by the throat, breaking his hold on Mrs. Lovis' neck, and attempted to take the pistol away from the rum-crazed man. Lovis, however, managed to aim and fire, and this bullet struck Mrs. Lovis in the back. Then McDonald dashed the pistol from Lovis' hand, and proceeded to beat him with his fists to quiet him.

McDonald took the pistol and hurried around to station 4 on Lagrange street, and Captain Warren sent officers and the ambulance to the house. Mrs. Lovis was sent to the city hospital, where the physicians said she was not dangerously wounded. Then the officers set out to find Lovis. A dozen policemen from station 4 who knew Lovis were sent out to search the barrooms in the South End. Half a dozen inspectors from headquarters were also detailed to aid in the search. About 6 o'clock Officer Brazier received word that Lovis had been seen on Cortes street. But that was the last trace of him the officers could obtain.

IN A BLAZE OF GLORY.

War Veterans Wind Up Their Meeting and Ladies Elect Officers.

LOWELL, Mass., Feb. 14.—The 30th annual encampment of the Massachusetts department, Grand Army, was brought to a close yesterday in Huntington hall. Mayor Courtney welcomed the guests on behalf of the city, and spoke of the proud share borne by the sons of Lowell in the Civil War. Governor Greenhalge, who was too sick to attend, was represented by his private secretary, Colonel Henry A. Thomas.

Commander-in-Chief Walker of Indianapolis delivered the principal address. He spoke strongly in favor of restricted immigration, made a stirring plea in favor of pensions and pledged the support of the Grand Army to the maintenance of the Monroe doctrine. The climax of the address was a glowing tribute to the memory of Abraham Lincoln. A notable feature of the banquet was the presentation of a past commander's jewel to Commander Joseph W. Thayer and a gold watch to Assistant Adjutant General Hubert O. Moore.

At the session of the Women's Relief Corps the following officers were elected: Mrs. Helen A. Brigham of Hyde Park, department president; Emilie L. W. Waterman of Boston, senior vice president; Mrs. Josephine A. Burdick of North Adams, junior vice president; Miss Mary E. Elliot of Boston, secretary, and Mrs. Sarah E. Fuller of Boston, treasurer.

The Ladies of the Grand Army elected officers as follows: President, Martha F. Gilmore, Lynn; senior vice president, Margaret F. Rowell, Lynn; junior vice president, Martha Stevens, Salem; chaplain, Ruth P. Knowles, Salem; treasurer Hattie F. Perkins, Salem; council of administration, H. Maria Ward and Jan Whittemore, Salem; Armina Davenport Lynn; councillor, L. H. Laughton, New Bedford; delegates-at-large, M. S. F Negus, New Bedford; alternate, Jennie Teel, Salem; delegate, Hattie F. Perkins, Salem; alternate, Jane Whittemore.

On Beacon Hill.

BOSTON, Feb. 14.—There was much disquieting information brought out at the hearing upon the bill for the regulation of bakeshops and of labor therein; and Charlestown petitioners asked that the projected new bridge to Charlestown may go over Causeway street, so as to prevent grade crossings with steam railroads, but Commissioner Crocker objected to the plan on account of increased expense. It was shown that there is a serious reason for asking for the registration of chiropodists, and there were several other hearings not wholly devoid of interest. In the house there was another lot of petitions upon various subjects, and the metropolitan park commissioners sent in their annual report for 1895.

Tragedy at Worcester.

WORCESTER, Mass., Feb. 14.—The first deliberate murder that has taken place in this city in years ocurred in the Armenian quarter yesterday. Mesak der Sahgian, a native of Tarsus in Armenia, 28 years old, and who had been in this country only a little over three months, was stabbed to the heart as he lay sleeping in his bed, and the murderer made good his escape before any of the other inmates of the house were aroused. Bagadasar Shervonian, 42 years old, and a native of Harpoot in Armenia, who occupied a bed in the same room with the murdered man, quarreled with him Wednesday, and no trace of him has been discovered since the crime was committed.

Young Rockefeller Pardoned.

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 14.—Excitement is intense at Brown university over the expulsion of seven juniors from the university grounds for the remainder of the college year, because of alleged dishonesty in rhetoric. Thirteen juniors were called before President Andrews, and for some reason six were pardoned, and the edict promulgated against Samuel Adams of New Haven, Vt.; Cyril C. Armstrong of Woonsocket; Ralph B. Harris of Salem, Mass.; Howard B. Briggs, A. M. McCrillis, Sidney D. Humphrey and William V. McCready of Providence. Of those pardoned were John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and his roommate, Lefferts M. Dashiel of Lakewood, N. J.

May Escape Punishment.

BOSTON, Feb. 14.—The case of Willis S. McCornick in the municipal court yesterday was continued two weeks. Mr. Pierce, the letter carrier, appeared in court looking very little the worse for his experiences of Friday night, and both he and his counsel agreed that, as Mr. McCornick is under bonds to appear before the United States court, and so is in danger of two punishments for one affair, the case might be continued. It is understood that neither Mr. Pierce nor his counsel have any desire to push the matter criminally in the courts, as they feel that the penalty will be very severe for what was really the result only of a boyish escapade.

Stopped by the Police.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Feb. 14.—The 25-round boxing match between Dave Ross of Cambridge, Mass., and "Young Sisto" of Providence was stopped after four rounds by the police, before 400 sporting men at the rooms of the Alpha Athletic club of Central Falls. Sisto forced matters from the start, but the sparring was not a clean, straight exhibition, as the men indulged too frequently in clinching. Ross was very weak, and could not have lasted another round.

Gilbert Not Insane.

BOSTON, Feb. 14.—Medical experts appointed by Governor Greenhalge to examine Angus Gilbert in regard to his sanity have reported that he is not insane. Thus Gilbert's last hope goes down, and unless his friends succeed in securing special clemency for him from the governor, which is thought by many persons in a position to judge to be wholly improbable, the convicted murderer will be hanged one week from today.

Licenses Issued Promiscuously.

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 14.—The joint committee of the city council gave the first hearing last night in the license commission investigation recently instituted by a petition of the citizens. It was shown that licenses had been granted after remonstances had been filed; that licenses had been granted on votes of 3 to 2, when the law requires a 5—3 vote, and that no records were kept excepting those of applications and grants.

Dastardly Deed.

WESCOTT, R. I., Feb. 14.—Bertha, the 10-year-old daughter of Mrs. Eugene Parkhurst, was kidnapped yesterday, and after a long search by the villagers was found in the woods, her hands tied so tightly behind her that her wrists were cut and her hands were black, while her hood had been tied tightly over her head. She was almost dead from exhaustion, and was unable to give an account of herself.

Rev. Isaac Newton Phelps, formerly pastor of the First Baptist church at Newport, R. I., who was converted to the Episcopal faith, and confirmed by Bishop Hall last Sunday, has been appointed assistant rector of Grace church, Providence.

Hattie Hutchinson, a 14-year-old schoolgirl, disappeared from her home in Hartford on Monday. Her mother asserts that from letters she has found she is convinced that the girl has gone with H. H. Chase, a married man. Mrs. Chase denies that her husband went with the girl.

A MODERN COLUMBUS.

Scientists Astounded at the Announcement.

Resume of the Voyage and the Obstacles That Have Been Surmounted.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—The scientists of this great metropolis are discussing the news which has come to them from St. Petersburg that Dr. Fridtjof Nansen, the intrepid Norwegian explorer, who for nearly 2½ years has been roaming about and through the ice fastnesses of the Arctic ocean, had overcome the astounding difficulties of the northern wilderness and had discovered the North Pole.

The scientists are so astounded at this remarkable announcement that the doubters of its authenticity are even more numerous than its believers.

The reported discovery is much discussed in the press this morning both here and elsewhere, and the general opinion seems to be somewhat skeptical, without denying the possibility of the truth of the report.

But this report is held to at least indicate that Dr. Nansen is safe and is returning. The Royal Geographical society's officials consider it strange that they should have received no word, as Dr. Nansen promised that the society should have the very first news, and they have as yet received nothing.

The Times prints various conjectures on the subject, and concludes that if the news is true, Dr. Nansen has accomplished the task more rapidly than was expected.

Outline of Nansen's Voyage.

Dr. Nansen left Norway in the Fram in June, 1893, and on July 24 of the same year a telegram from Berlevang, on the north coast of Norway, reported his program to be as follows:

To the New Siberian islands, and thence directly north until the Fram should be imbedded in the ice and drift along with it, following the west coast of any land that might be met with northwards.

On Aug. 23, 1893, Dr. Nansen sent a dispatch from Vardo, which he had written at Charabowa, in the Yugorski strait, on the 24 of the same month, announcing that he was about to sail into the Kara sea, and that the Fram had behaved splendidly. Dr. Nansen's reputation as an explorer depends on his very remarkable and successful trip on snowshoes across southern Greenland. He tried to discover the North Pole by a route and under conditions which presage great suffering and probable disaster.

Undeterred by the drift of the Jeannette and the ultimate destruction of the ship by the Siberian ice floes, Nansen sought the conditions which the Jeannette long in vain strove to avoid, and hoped to pluck safety and success from the very nettle of danger.

He started in a specially constructed ship, which, however, failed to commend itself to any Arctic explorer, and plunging into the ice floes to the northeast of Kara sea with his courageous companions, expected to drift across or very near the neighborhood of the North Pole.

They trusted entirely to favorable ocean currents, which Nansen estimated would carry them across the unknown regions of the Arctic zone into open waters between Spitzbergen and Greenland.

He figured on the average speed of the whole current as two nautical miles a day, and contemplated an absence of two or three years.

It will be noticed that he totally disregarded the accepted axioms for successfully navigating an icy region, of keeping near a costline and insuring a reasonably safe line of retreat.

Whatever measure of success Nansen may attain—and his courage merits much from fickle fortune—his plan is condemned by most all voyagers of experience as extremely rash and inadvisable.

Suggestions Sneered At.

PRETORIA, Feb. 14.—The Staats Courant publishes the reply of President Kruger to the dispatch of Colonial Secretary Chamberlain. Mr. Chamberlain's dispatch proposed to President Kruger certain reforms which he deemed should be adopted by the Transvaal government, and invited President Kruger to London to discuss the subject. The Staats Courant complains that this dispatch is embarrassing to the government, and announces that the government will not suffer interference with its internal affairs, and considers that the situation has been greatly aggravated by Mr. Chamberlain's suggestions.

Passed Off Quietly.

TROY, N. Y., Feb. 14.—The most extraordinary funeral that Troy, or perhaps any other town, ever knew, was yesterday given to "Bat" Shea, the murderer of Robert Ross, who was killed by electricity at Dannemora prison on Tuesday. The funeral was held a day ahead of the time originally arranged, so as to prevent trouble. The authorities anticipated a riot as the result of intense partisan and religious prejudices, but were agreeably disappointed, for, while the funeral was attended by dramatic and unusual incidents, the regular police force were perfectly able to hold the crowd in check.

An Unnatural Mother.

CHATHAM, N. B., Feb. 14.—A most shocking case of infanticide has come to light here. Mary Dwyre, a domestic, gave birth to a child. When a doctor was called to attend her, he asked where the child was, and she replied that she had none. Search resulted in the finding of a body of a boy baby with its throat cut. The coroner's jury have returned a verdict that the child was born alive, and that its throat was cut by its mother.

Sympathy For Army Nurse.

CONCORD, N. H., Feb. 14.—The state Grand Army encampment voted to send a telegram of sympathy to Harriet P. Dame, the famous army nurse, who was recently discharged from the treasury department. The reception of the national commander last night was largely attended. State Commander Buzzell presided.

REED FOR PRESIDENT.

Should he be Standard Bearer of Republican Party

An Interesting Debate of the Quincy Debating Club

Strong Arguments Pro and Con as to His Candidacy.

The subject debated by the Debating club Thursday night was: "Resolved,—That Mr. Reed should be the standard bearer of the Republican Party."

Mr. W. S. Sampson in opening the debate said—Mr. Reed has been called the autocratic ruler of the 51st congress and the unterrified leader of the 52d congress. It is an easy thing to find the equal of an ordinary man but to find the equal of Tom Reed is to set him before a mirror. Let us see if these are mere idle boasts or if they are facts. In college Mr. Reed proved himself an able scholar. He then taught for several years, at the same time studying law. In '68 began his public career and in all the different steps to his present proud position he has proved himself a worker and a great common-sensed man. He was the youngest attorney-general that Maine has ever had and yet he was the best. In Congress even in his first year, though shoved on an unimportant committee, he made his fellow members feel that he was a power. His position today is only the logical result of the man.

Mr. W. W. Parry was the opening speaker for the negative. It has been said that any man would be a good President if loyal to his party, and Mr. Reed is certainly loyal to his party. But is this enough? Mayors and Governors are being chosen more and more on the basis of ability and so should the President. There should be a trained career which Mr. Reed has not had. He has never been mayor; he has never been Governor; and though he has been Speaker this is an executive position far different from that of President. Mr. Reed is great only as a partisan; he has never made any great speeches; he has never studied any question deeply. He has prevented the filibustering of the minority but this was only a party triumph, as when he was in the minority he had resorted to the same tactics. And in the last Congress when there was need of treasury relief Mr. Reed prevented any relief measure in order that the country might go from bad to worse under Democratic control. Do we want to elevate such a partisan chief to this office, the greatest in our gift?

Mr. E. F. Southworth, speaking on the affirmative replied. The gentleman has said that Mr. Reed has never studied any subject deeply, that he has never made more than six set speeches in his life; but he has made many off-hand speeches full of wit and epigram; speeches of influence, speeches that men would listen to. The gentleman says that Mr. Reed is only a partisan, but though a partisan he is the leader of the Republican party in a way that none other of the Presidential candidates are. And why? Because he is a man rich in good old New England stock, the kind of stock that fights its way to the front. It may be said that as Mr. Cleveland represents the East, our next President should represent the West, but Mr. Reed, is not a man of any one place. He is Mr. Reed, the speaker; he is Mr. Reed, the Republican leader; he is Mr. Reed, the best man for the Presidency.

Mr. C. R. Tucker however did not agree with this. He thought that McKinley was a man who belonged to the country equally with Mr. Reed. Tariff, revenue, is now one of the greatest questions of the day, and who is so prominently with this as McKinley. The President should not be primarily for the Republican or Democratic party, but for the United States. He should not give up his individual judgment. Mr. Reed too is against harbor and river appropriations.

This ended the discussion of the principal desputants and the debate was then thrown open for five minute speeches from the floor.

Mr. King thought that while the partisanship of Mr. Reed might do harm when he was in the minority, as witness his opposition to the treasury relief, yet that when he was in power, as his partisanship was of the strictly honorable kind, it would had to be a vigorous effective policy.

Mr. Reed has hesitated to commit himself on the great question of silver was Mr. Faxon's argument while Mr. Morton had come forward openly in favor of sound money. Besides this Mr. Morton has a splendid preparation, the Governorship of New York and the Vice Presidency of the United States.

Mr. Craig agreed with Mr. Faxon that you could not tell exactly what was Mr. Reed's position. There are three great divisions in our government, the legislature, the judiciary and the executive. Three wheels are working together but separate. If then the President is merely a partisan, merely a representative of the dominant party in the legislature, the essential distinction of these three departments is at once annihilated.

Reed, Allison, McKinley and Morton are the candidates said Mr. S. Southworth but Morton is not a man equal to the other three though he may make a showing under the guidance of Platt. McKinley is my choice. There is no man whose record is so clean and pure as his. A gallant soldier, a zealous congressman, an able governor, and a very great man if we could only see impartially.

Mr. Colton said that as a son of the Buckeye state he could not but endorse the words of the last speaker. His fearless character, his stainless record you know, but it is those who know his private life that can best appreciate his real greatness.

The debate was then closed and an important business meeting was held.

The subject for debate Feb. 27 is: "Resolved, That Massachusetts should hold her elections biennially." The speakers will be: Affirmative, E. C. Litchfield and H. B. Faxon; negative, A. M. Craig and E. D. Gourd.

AFTER HER PROPERTY.

And She Got Most of It Too by Persevering.

The police were called upon Thursday noon to assist Mrs. Fred Gore in obtaining her property which was in the possession of her husband at 18 Main street, which he refused to permit her to take.

It seems Mrs. Gore who has not lived with her husband for some time, came on from Camden, N. J., with a relative to get her property. They first went to the house and demanded the property, which Gore refused to give up. Then acting upon advice of a lawyer they applied to the police and Inspector McKay accompanied them on their second trip.

When the party arrived with the officer, Gore had changed his mind and Mrs. Gore obtained about $300 of her property, consisting of clothing, pictures and fancy china. Mrs. Gore claimed that there was $500 of solid silver which had been given her by her relatives when she was married but this could not be found. Gore claimed that he had mortgaged the silver but would not tell where or to whom it was mortgaged, and no record could be found at the City Clerk's office.

It is not known whether Mrs. Gore will take any action to recover the silver.

LAST NIGHT'S COMMOTION.

The Whistle Shrieks for a Large Fire at Braintree.

Many in Quincy were startled shortly before 8 o'clock Thursday by a long and short blast from a steam whistle which was at first supposed to have been in the quarries at West Quincy. It proved, however, to be a locomotive whistle at South Braintree, giving the alarm for a fire in a large shop of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R., used by the bridge department and also as a carpenter's shop and store house. The fire was a brisk one and the building was practically ruined before the flames were extinguished.

In the building were several kits of tools belonging to the workmen, railroad bicycles, etc., all of which were destroyed.

The loss on the building is estimated at $1500, and on the contents $2,500, which is nearly covered by insurance. The fire is supposed to have been caused by an overheated stove.

St. Valentine's Eve Dance.

For a good social dance the one given by the young people of Christ's church on Thursday evening, at Faxon hall, will easily carry off the honors, for it was one of the prettiest and most enjoyable of the season.

The matrons were Mrs. Walter Russell Breed, Mrs. C. Theodore Hardwick and Mrs. Frank Brewer. The ushers: Miss Pauline Wilkins, Miss Edith M. Cote, Miss Annie Chamberlain, Miss Mabel Oxford, Miss Mollie Brewer and Miss Sadie Thomas.

The music was by Mr. William Wilson, pianist and Mr. Joshua Hanson, violinist.

Ices and cake were served during intermission, the young ladies furnishing the cake and Wales the ice cream.

All pronounced the affair a great success and regrets were to be heard on every hand that there are to be no more at present as Lent commences on Wednesday.

Democratic City Committee Favorable to Mr. Burns.

Reasons Why Mr. Baker Does Not Favor a Change.

"Dissertation Upon Wollaston's Toleration Senseless By-Play."

Editors of Daily Ledger:

The article in Thursday's LEDGER relative to the Wollaston post office fight is so biased, and contains so many statements intended to injure the candidacy of Mr. Burns as to warrant a reply from one conversant with the whole matter.

Mr. Wilde is not backed by the whole Democratic committee, since Mr. Burns' endorsement bears the signature of every member of the Democratic City committee (who by the way have the final disposition of the matter) with the exception of six members of the Ward Five committee, and one member states that he signed the petition circulated by Mr. Baker acting upon the supposition that no other candidate was in the field.

Though there may have been no attempt at misrepresentation on the part of Mr. Baker, still the concealment of his labors up to the within the past few days, would indicate that he for one would not be a contestant in a fair fight. Neither are Water Commissioner Baker or Collector Brasee looked upon as nestors of the Democracy in Ward Five or elsewhere, and they as well as any one else know that their actual influence counts for but very little when working in the open.

The statement made that Postmaster Wilde succeeded a Democrat, but not on account of politics, is a peculiar statement in face of the fact that Mr. Bass, a survivor of the war of the rebellion, was deposed from his office upon the assumption of power by the Harrison regime. Does this fact bear out the statement that a tacit understanding had obtained or was a practice between the Democrats and Republicans.

That "tacit understanding" was indeed pleasant to Republicans, since only one Democrat has ever served as postmaster, and he only for four years, being compelled to give way to Republican greed. Mr. Wilde is furthermore a Republican in good standing and also a partisan, as he resigned from membership on the Ward Five Republican committee upon assuming the duties of postmaster, a compulsory step.

Mr. Burns does not base his claim to the office upon any service that his wife may have rendered, and the person who would make this statement deserves something stronger and more salutary than mere censure, that he may be brought to a realization of what in common decency may be permitted to be said against any man, and to what bounds he may carry his malignant spite. Mr. Baker has always been hostile toward Mr. Burns, but it was never thought that either as a man or as a member of the Democratic City committee he would allow his personal animosity to test the capabilities of a man for public office. Mr. Baker is an intimate friend of Mr. Wilde's, with all that that may imply, and has also a pecuniary interest in his retention—which may not unreasonably be taken as his chief reason—in that his son is at present employed in the postoffice.

Mr. Burns does not seek to drag A. P. A.-ism into the contest, for the method of that organization are preferable to the means being taken by Mr. Baker and his cohorts to defeat Mr. Burns. Mr. Burns is a capable young man and would administer the affairs of the office commendably, and Mr. Baker or any man are dared to speak one word against him.

Your correspondent's dissertation upon Wollaston's toleration is a bit of senseless by-play, which will not be taken seriously by anyone. More especially by those who know the ins and outs, the intricacies and peculiarities of Wollaston Democrats—and others. As a reminder and food for reflection upon the subject of Wollaston's toleration, your correspondent should be reminded that Ward Five was the only ward in the city to place A. P. A. candidates in the municipal contest, one on the Republican side, and the other—hide your blushes of shame—on the Democratic side.

Mr. Wilde may have made a good postmaster, but the complacency of your correspondent on this matter is not shared by many of Wollaston's worthy people, and it is rather amusing to see Mr. Burns's words of courtesy taken as an endorsement of Mr. Wilde.

Messrs. Baker, Brasee & Co. should also be reminded that Edward A. McLaughlin was deposed from the clerkship of the Massachusetts House of Representatives for no other reason than that he was a Democrat and did any Republican start a petition for his retention. And why this magnanimity on the part of so called Democrats? Surely one must concede these gilded Democrats a peculiar species.

So it can readily be seen that this fight does not appear so very strange after all. Mr. Burns instead of fighting the whole committee, has the whole committee fighting for him. After Mr. Burns receives his appointment, the matter of confirmation will be attended to, so that Mr. Baker need make no threats, or cherish any hope that they will be regarded.

THOMAS J. MCGRATH.

HOME RULE SENTIMENT.

Anti-Parnellite Healy Boldly Declares His Disloyalty to England.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—T. M. Healy, anti-Parnellite, during the debate on the queen's speech in the house of commons yesterday, admitted his disloyalty to England. He said he had been sent to parliament to secure the establishment of a native Irish parliament, and his endeavor, therefore, would be to harass, attack and thwart in every way those who refused to grant Ireland home rule.

The particular matter under discussion was the amendment offered by John Dillon, member for East Mayo, declaring that the absence of a bill providing for the self-government of Ireland had aroused discontent among the Irish and increased the difficulties existing in foreign affairs.

Sir William Harcourt, leader of the opposition, said it was the belief of the opposition that the discontent prevailing in Ireland would not be extinguished until the demand of the Irish for local self-government was satisfied. They would never cure the disorders of many centuries unless they went to the root of the evil. The government had said that they would never grant home rule.

"Never" was a word which in the Liberal interpretation was an unwise word, especially in the mouth of the occupant of the office of chief secretary for Ireland, and he would advise the chief secretary to modify the expression to "hardly ever." The future of home rule, he said, depended much upon the course pursued by the Irish members. Home rule certainly did not get a great deal of encouragement from John Redmond, whose policy, Sir William said, appeared to be to attack the home rulers wherever he found them.

Sir William, continuing, said that nothing had occurred to alter the home rule policy of the opposition, and they continued to adhere thereto as they had repeatedly declared.

A. J. Balfour said he believed that when the Irish at home and abroad realized that parliament was sincerely and earnestly desirous of giving to Ireland a full and generous measure of justice, a change of opinion would occur, removing at once and for all time the dissensions between the two nations.

Here Mr. Healy made the remarks previously quoted, after which Mr. Dillon's amendment was rejected by a vote of 273 to 160.

Seeking Uitlanders' Release.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—In the house of commons yesterday, Mr. Chamberlain, secretary of state for the colonies, said, in reply to a question, that only three of the Uitlanders arrested in Johannesburg and taken to Pretoria were now in jail at the latter place, and it was his belief that if any of them were or should fall sick, they would be released in a manner similar to that in which John Hays Hammond, the American mining engineer, was set at liberty. In view of the fact, however, that the inquiry into the cases of the men arrested has been adjourned without date, he was considering whether it would not be proper to suggest to the Transvaal government that they be released on bail.

Yale May Hold Her Trainer.

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 14.—Michael Murphy, Yale's popular trainer, who has received a flattering offer to accept a similar position at the University of Pennsylvania, stated yesterday that he had not yet made up his mind whether he would accept the offer or not. The Yale Athletic association have received despatches from many parts of the country urging them to retain Murphy. It is believed an attempt will be made to increase his salary, even if the increase would not make it as high as that offered by the Philadelphians. Mr. Murphy is a personal friend of Coacher George W. Woodruff of Penysylvania, and he has always been friendly to the university.

Who Owns Trinidade?

LONDON, Feb. 14.—In the house of commons, George N. Curzon, under secretary for the foreign office, replying to a question as to why Great Britain had proposed to Brazil that the dispute regarding the possession of the island of Trinidade be decided by arbitration, said that Great Britain occupied Trinidade in 1781 and abandoned it in 1782 on the representations of Portugal. The late government, Mr. Curzon added, reoccupied the island. Because it had been abandoned for a century, the government proposed arbitration as the best means of settling the question of the ownership of the island.

A Rare Occurrence.

NIAGARA FALLS, Feb. 14.—For the first time in half a century the American falls practically ran dry yesterday. By the formation of an ice bridge or dam, extending from Schlosser's dock, on the American bank, about half way across the river, the water was almost entirely diverted to the Canadian falls. It was possible for a time for a man with a plank to have walked from the mainland to Goat island without wetting his feet, and indeed, to walk between all the islands inside of Goat island.

Sand In Peter's Eyes.

EL PASO, Tex., Feb. 14.—There is every probability that the Maher-Fitzsimmons fight will be postponed for two or three days. Buck Connelly, one of Maher's seconds, has just reported that, because of trouble with Maher's eyes, he will be unable to enter the ring. It is said that Maher, while out walking two days ago, got some sand in his eyes, and that they are now so badly inflamed as to be practically sightless. The postponement asked for will, without a doubt, be granted.

Getting Ready For Baptism.

SOFIA, Feb. 14.—Count Kutusoff, representing the Czar of Russia, has arrived here in order to attend the ceremony of the conversion and baptism of Prince Boris, eldest son of Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria, into the Othodox church. The count was met at the railroad station by Prince Ferdinand, and they drove together through the streets, which were profusely decorated with flags, to the palace, where the czar's representative was received with the highest honors.

Emperor's Policy Sustained.

BERLIN, Feb. 14.—Dr. Hammerstein, in the reichstag yesterday, speaking in behalf of the National Liberals, praised the government for the attitude which it had assumed toward the Transvaal, and declared that Emperor Wilhelm's message to President Kruger, congratulating the latter upon having suppressed Dr. Jameson's raid, responded to the feelings of all Germans.

Blessed In Old Age.

CHATTANOOGA, Feb. 14.—Sallie Beckwith, colored, 60 years of age, gave birth to a quartet of healthy infants, three boys and one girl. The babes weigh about six pounds each. One of the boys has a double row of fully developed teeth.

It now looks as though the new county court must again stand fire, and also the current expenses of Norfolk county. The City Council has requested City Solicitor Blackmur to look out for the interests of Quincy at the Legislative hearing, and Thursday evening's Journal had the following:

"Hon. Asa French, the prominent lawyer, does not like the idea of the Norfolk County Commissioners asking the Legislature for permission to raise in that county, a sum equal to that of last year, and to a Journal reporter expressed a very decided opinion that the business methods of the Commissioners should be investigated by a legislative committee.

"In response to the Journal man's inquiry as to what he knew about the business methods of the County Commissioners Judge French said: 'As I understand the matter, the Commissioners are going to petition the Legislature for an act allowing them to raise the sum of $135,000 again this year in Norfolk County, the same as last year, a most unreasonable amount. The Quincy City Council has, I believe, instructed its solicitor to fight any such appropriation, and rightly I think, too. Now, I firmly believe that when the board presented the list of what sums of money were needed for Norfolk County last year there were many sums named far above the amounts that were actually needed for the stated purposes, and I am also of the opinion that as soon as the Legislature gave the required sanction to the list many of the amounts were tranferred, and the money was spent on the new Court House at Dedham.

"It looks to me as though they were going to try the same thing this year, and I sincerely hope that some member of the Legislature will fight the thing from the floor of the House and ask for a committee of investigation to look into the methods of the County Commissioners.

"The expenditures of the Commissioners in the construction of the new Court House have been very heavy. Originally they only asked for $75,000 to repair the old building,; but now they have expended between $300,000 and $400,000 upon a palace of a building. Everything in the new Court House is most elegant; the furniture even was made to order.

"The architect has received a handsome sum of money for his services, $18,000, I believe, and the Commissioners made a contract for several thousand dollars' worth of handsome curbing without giving the Quincy men a show.

"Judge French mentioned to the writer his cross-examination of the Chairman of the board before a legislative committee last year. Mr. French said that "his examination proved rather unpleasant for the Chairman, and upon the second day of the hearing the Commissioner refused to subject himself to cross-examination."

WHO WILL REPAIR THE LOSS.

Watches and Diamonds Given to a Stranger to Repair.

Mrs. Jane L. Shaw keeps a little store on Hancock street, Atlantic. Last week a young man possessed of an oily tongue walked into her store and informed Mrs. Shaw that he lived on Cypress street, Neponset. That he was formerly in the jewelry business, but owing to depression in business he had given up his store and was about trying to pick up a little repairing to do. Mrs. Shaw was favorably impressed with the young man and gave him two gold watches and a diamond ring to repair. After the young man had gone she felt sorry that she had let the young man have her property and as day after day passed and the young man came not she felt more sorry. Inquiry showed there was no street named Cypress street in Neponset and as she could find no trace of the young man it dawned upon her that she was $200 out.

Grandmother's Garden.

Words, Assault, Arrest.

Karl Gustaf Winquist and John Lawry, Jr., are stonecutters employed by the Craig & Richards Granite Co. Thursday afternoon they had a dispute over some blocks, and when Winquist left work for home he found Lawry waiting for him. Another wordy war was immediately commenced which finally ended in blows, and they were giving a miniature exhibition of a Fitzsimmons-Maher, when friends interfered and separated the men.

This morning Winquist swore out a warrant against Lawry for assault and later he was arrested by Officer Sandberg. The case will be heard in court Saturday morning.

Wollaston Sociable.

The regular monthly sociable of the Wollaston Congregational Society was as usual a very enjoyable affair and attracted a large audience. The vestry was profusely decorated with evergreen trees through the courtesy of the Lewis and Baker boys.

The entertainment consisted of shadow pictures, a guitar and banjo duet by Miss Dickey and Mr. Fenton and a flute solo by Mr. Albert E. Rhodes.

The committee in charge consisted of Mrs. John Thompson, Mrs. A. L. Baker, Mrs. C. E. Snow, Mrs. Campbell and Mrs Mary T. Taylor.

KINGSTON, Jam., Feb. 14.—The American schooner Cora M, Captain Mitchell, from Wilmington, N. C., Jan. 25, for Kingston, was sighted off the eastern extremity of Cuba by a Spanish cruiser. The officer in command of the cruiser apparently notified the Spanish consul at Jamaica to search the Cora M here. The search proved entirely unsuccessful, so far as finding any contraband of war went. The schooner sailed yesterday on her return trip.

AGAINST FREE COINAGE

House Strongly Protests the Senate Substitute Bond Bill.

Tariff Bill Postponement In the Senate.

Urgent Deficiency Appropriation Bill With Amendment Proves Successful.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—The house committee on foreign affairs did not consider the Cuban question at any length. Only a portion of correspondence sent in from the state department has been printed, and so much remains that it was thought best to defer any discussion at present. There were remarks made which indicated that members of the committee would be very likely to push for a resolution looking to a recognition of a state of war in Cuba.

Most of the time of the committee was taken up by a discussion of the resolution introduced by Representative Fischer (N. Y.) relative to the firing upon the schooner Henry Crosby, while at anchor at Azua, Santo Domingo, Dec. 10, 1893. This matter was finally referred to a subcommittee.

Mr. Hitt (Rep., Ills.) reported from the committee on foreign affairs a resolution calling on the president for the correspondence with Hayti, respecting the claim of Bernard Campbell of Boston for damages because of injuries inflicted by an assault committed in an attempt to force him into the naval service of Hayti, and it was agreed to.

The consideration of the bond free coinage bill was then resumed in committee of the whole, under the five-minute rule.

Mr. Dingley said that the amendment was open to the objection that it was not in place upon this bill, and that it was in no sense a solution of the problem of free and unlimited coinage of silver. It was rejected—41 to 118.

Mr. Brumm (Rep., Pa.) offered an amendment to the senate substitute providing that whenever the commercial ratio of the two metals varies from the coinage ratio the seigniorage of the bullion presented for coinage shall be retained by the government. After some debate this amendment was lost—39 to 85.

Mr. Towne (Rep., Minn.) offered an amendment committing the United States to the free coinage of silver at the ratio of 15½ to 1 when the mints of Germany and France shall have been opened for that purpose. He said the bill was agreed upon by a conference of economists in Europe last summer, and was to be offered in the English parliament, the German reichstag and the French chamber of deputies.

Mr. Dingley opposed it, and its passage failed—52 to 146.

On Mr. Crisp's motion to agree to the senate substitute without amendment the vote was: Yeas, 80; nays, 190. It seemed that half of the Democrats voted against their leader. The demonstation of overwhelming strength was greeted with applause by the victorious side.

The chairman announced that the result was the committee agreed to recommend to the house non-concurrence in the senate substitute.

Tariff Bill Repulsed.

The friends of the tariff bill met an unexpected repulse yesterday, when, by the decisive vote of 21 yeas to 29 nays, the senate defeated the motion of Mr. Morrill, chairman of the finance committee, to take up the tariff bill.

The negative vote which defeated the motion was given by Democrats, Populists and four Republican senators, viz.; Teller, Mantle, Dubois and Carter. The affirmative vote was entirely Republican, but its total at 21 is less than half of the aggregate Republican strength.

Mr. Morrill's motion had been anticipated for some days, but it was not pressed, pending consideration of the urgent deficiency appropriation bill. This measure was disposed of at 4 o'clock, and the fight to advance other measures began.

Mr. Morrill was hurriedly summoned from the finance committee room to submit his motion. In the meantime Mr. Call had secured the enforcement of an agreement entered into some days ago that the Cuban question should be taken up. Mr. Morrill was not deterred by the agreement, however, and pressed his motion to take up the tariff.

There was a hurried assembling of senators who remained at the Capitol, but this was considerably short of a full vote. The result of the vote left the Cuban resolutions as unfinished business, although these have been yielded temporarily to the military academy and other bills.

Consideration of the urgent deficiency bill was then resumed. The bill was passed substantially as reported. It carries about $6,000,000—a considerable increase over the bill passed in the house.

Immediately there was a skirmishing to advance various measures. Mr. Teller sought to take up the military academy appropriation bill.

Mr. Call insisted that the Cuban resolutions had the right of way by an agreement entered into Tuesday last, and this was sustained by consulting The Record. This made the Cuban question the unfinished business. Mr. Call yielded to Mr. Teller to proceed with the military academy bill.

In the meantime, Mr. Morrill had entered the chamber and vigorously protested against further delay on the tariff. He had waited, he said, two days, and had come to the senate at much personal inconvenience to urge that the tariff be taken up. He would insist on this, and he moved that the senate proceed to the consideration of the tariff bill.

This precipitated an unexpected tariff vote. The vote proceeded amid considerable excitement. There was some delay while pairs were being arranged and the fullest possible strength registered.

This left the Cuban resolutions as the regular order. Mr. Call yielded to Mr. Teller and the military academy bill, and the latter in turn gave way to Mr. Pettigrew (Rep., N. D.) for a speech in support of his resolution to foreclose the mortgages on the Pacific roads. Mr. Pettigrew opposed a further partnership between the government and the "dishonest men" operating these roads.

The free ship bill, "to encourage American shipping," was reported adversely and was indefinitely postponed.

A bill making "Jackson's birthday" a legal holiday was introduced by Mr. Hill (Dem., N. Y.) and referred.

The house bill to incorporate the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution was passed.

The resolution declaring Alonzo H. Stewart chosen assistant doorkeeper of the senate, and Bernard W. Layton, acting assistant doorkeeper, was agreed to.

HARD WORK ENDED.

League of American Wheelmen Finish Up Business and Adjourn.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 14.—The representative men of the League of American Wheelmen have gone home after an assembly which for hard work and its effect upon the future of the league and of bicycling in general will long be remembered. Among the most important of its results are: The abolition of class "B;" the determination that the league shall retain control of cycle racing; increasing fees for sanctions, which it is hoped will result in forcing outside clubs to join the league; the adoption of numerous wise rules for the better regulation of racing, and a general strengthening up all around in the league's position.

This has been done without the creation of any hard feeling among the members, and the meeting was marked by a notable absence of anything in the shape of acrimony. The old administration gave way most gracefully to the new and those who were unable to accomplish what they came here to do, pocketed their defeat with a smile and promised to do the best they could anyhow.

By leaving it to the executive committee to adopt a plan looking to the selection of the place for the annual meet without leaving it to a vote of the convention, the disturbing element has been eliminated from future gatherings of this nature. From the talk in the convention during the discussion of the motion, it seems probable that the executive committee will decide to leave the selection of the place for the meet to a vote of all the male members of the league, the ballot to be cast in January of each year.

The mantle of charity was thrown over the shortcomings of Titus and Cabanne, and almost the final action of the meeting was the practical reduction of their sentence from life supension to suspension for one year.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 16. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—Loyalty to our church.—Ps. lxxxiv, 1-12. (A review of the history of your own denomination suggested, to be led by the pastor.)

The Christian Endeavor movement is interdenominational, yet it has always emphasized the importance of denominational loyalty. This is undoubtedly the correct attitude for the society to assume. We may be intense denominationalists, and yet this need not prevent us from having fellowship and spiritual union with all the followers of Christ in the world. Organic union seems impracticable and impossible, but union in fellowship and spirit is not.

This topic may suggest to us the question, How may we increase loyalty to our various denominations? Several answers suggest themselves:

1. Loyalty to our church may be increased by increased familiarity with the history of our church. There is nothing like a glorious history to arouse fidelity and loyalty. When as Americans we look back at the glorious history of our country, although it is yet comparatively young as a nation, how our hearts swell with pride, and with what loyalty we thank God that we are Americans! If our young people were as familiar with the history of their church as they are with the history of their country, the effect would be the same. There is not a prominent Christian denomination but has a history and testimony peculiar to itself, and a knowledge of these things cannot but increase our denominational loyalty.

2. Loyalty to our church may be increased by increased familiarity with the general work of the church. All our churches are at work in causes of benevolence and in the great causes of home and foreign missions. If the members of the various churches are brought into touch and sympathy with these great methods of work, their interest and pride in these things will be aroused, and increased loyalty will result. Many of our churches are doing noble work for God and humanity, of which the members at large know practically nothing, and they need this knowledge to stimulate their fidelity and loyalty to the church.

3. Loyalty to our church may be increased by increased knowledge of the Biblical foundation for the church. We believe that our denominational doctrines and methods are founded upon the Bible. If we have Biblical proof for the faith that is in us, it will increase our respect for our church and loyalty to it.

4. Loyalty to our church may be increased by increased personal work for the church. We are always loyal to that in which we ourselves have a part.

"Washington '96" Flag.

The design for the "Washington '96" flag, which, with the national colors, will form the chief feature of the decorations at the fifteenth international convention of Christian Endeavor at the national capital July 8 to 13, is artistic and original. It consists of a red and blue field, the upper half red and the nether blue; on this field is a large white star in the center of which is a blue monogram, C. E., of the well known characteristic design, and across the upper portion of the field of the flag the red part, and over the star is swept in a semicircle of white letters the legend "Washington, '96."

WELCOME TO WASHINGTON, '96.

[Tune, "America."]

To all who love the Lord,
Resting upon His word,
Welcome we bring.
In Christian charity,
Freely we offer thee,
Love in its sanctity,
As now we sing.

As we Endeavorers meet,
In such communion sweet
From day to day,
While we to God appeal
May each His spirit feel,
May God Himself reveal,
To all we pray.

Welcome to heart and home,
Welcome to Washington,
Welcome this day.
God grant you peace and rest,
Make pure each loyal breast,
Be in each heart the guest,
With you alway.

Wave, wave, our colors wave,
Those which our fathers gave
At freedom's birth;
Red, blue and white, the three,
Love, truth and purity,
Mighty in unity,
For all the earth.

One glad, united band,
Be quick with heart and hand,
For Christ to do.
Search for the strayed and lost,
Rescue the tempest tossed,
Save men at any cost,
To God be true.

—Carlton Hughes.

NO HOPE OF RECOVERY

Lynn Policeman the Victim of a Mad Dog's Fearful Bite.

Strong Guard Watching Over Him at the Hospital.

LYNN, Mass., Feb. 15.—Lieutenant Nelson H. Doe of the police department of this city, who was bitten by a dog about six weeks ago while on duty as a patrolman, is confined at the Lynn hospital, suffering from hydrophobia of the most pronounced type. All the skill that physicians could apply has failed to prevent the development of the disease.

Lieutenant Doe first felt the effects of his present affliction on Wendesday night about 10 o'clock, when he complained of a slight headache, and about two hours later decided to go to his house and sleep it off. During the night his condition became more serious, and at 5 o'clock yesterday morning, when Dr. Newcomb was called to the house, he noticed symptoms of the disease, which, despite his efforts, continued to manifest themselves.

Throughout yesterday the victim had frequent attacks of spasms, and late last night they increased in frequency and violence, until it was deemed necessary to remove him to the hospital.

No Hope of Recovery.

The physicians say that the patient cannot recover, as the disease is already too pronounced to permit of relief. A telegram was received from the Pasteur institute in New York city, in reply to one sent from Lynn, asking if anything could be done for the sufferer, stating that if spasms had manifested themselves there was no hope of staying the disease.

Lieutenant Doe is one of the largest officers in the department, standing about 6 ft. 2 in., and a strong guard is required to care for him.

The affair which brought about Lieutenant Doe's present condition occurred the evening of Dec. 31, while he and Patrolman McBrien were standing at the corner of Amity and New Washington streets. Both officers noticed the dog as it came along the street, but did not observe anything strange about its actions. Suddenly, and before Lieutenant Doe could avoid it, the dog sprang upon him and bit him in the right hip, inflicting a wound which bled freely. Lieutenant Doe thought lightly of the matter, however, as he did not believe the dog was mad, and after the wound was dressed returned to his beat.

A Remarkable Coincidence.

The following night he did not respond at rollcall, and remained off duty for six nights. Jan. 6 he was assigned to station 2 as lieutenant, and was on duty there up to Wednesday night. A strange coincidence in connection with the affair is that the dog disappeared immediately after biting Lieutenant Doe, and has not been seen since. It was of the Scotch collie breed. There is no doubt in the minds of the physicians that the animal was mad at the time, and that it has since died as a result of the rabies.

Lieutenant Doe is one of the best known officers in the department. He was appointed special policeman in 1875, and served as such until 1880, when he was made a regular patrolman, serving until 1890, when he was appointed lieutenant, and served four years, being reduced in rank in 1895, and again promoted to lieutenant in January of the present year. He is 51 years old, and has a wife and four children.

ON BEACON HILL.

Petitions Concerning Boston's Street Railways Presented to the House.

BOSTON, Feb. 15.—Another big batch of petitions were introduced in the house yesterday, a considerable number of which related to the regulation and operation of street railways in the city of Boston. Some of the petitions contained matter not before reported, while in some cases the subject has been given to the public. The hearings were of no great consequence.

The house passed to be engrossed the bills to exempt the Collateral Loan company from the provisions of chapter 497, acts of 1895; to authorize Fall River to incur indebtedness for a public library; to permit foreign burglary insurance companies to transact business in the commonwealth; to incorporate the Gardner Syndicate corporation; for an additional water supply for Pittsfield. Also resolves providing for the care and furnishing of the Fall River armory, and for completing the index of the war records in the office of the adjutant general. The bill to allow paternal beneficiary associations was rejected.

In the senate the committee on water supply reported a bill authorizing the town of Adams to issue bonds, not exceeding $30,000, to increase and improve the water supply of the Adams fire district.

The bill concerning the damage caused by railroad locomotive sparks came up from the house referred jointly to the committee on railroads and insurance. On motion of Mr. Galloupe the bill was referred in non-concurrence to the committee on railroads.

Whalen's Sound Advice.

SACO, Me., Feb. 15.—The York corporation, employing 1600 hands, where a strike occurred yesterday for increased wages, will be shut down for an indefinite period, from all appearances. Officers have been stationed at the mill gate to preserve order and prevent an outbreak of a troublesome nature. The afternoon closed with no trouble, however, although large numbers of operatives had gathered to discuss the situation. A mass meeting was held in St. John's hall. President Whalen of the Weavers' union made the principal address. He asserted that Agent Page was a tyrant, but advised the strikers to go in on Monday, as they were not prepared for a big strike.

Fisherman Drowned.

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., Feb. 15.—Frank Oliver and Antone Gaspe, fishermen, were capsized while coming ashore from the fishing grounds. Oliver was drowned. The upset was 100 yards from shore, and Gaspe swam the distance, leaving Oliver clinging to the overturned boat. Although greatly exhausted, Gaspe came into town for help. The boat was secured later, but Oliver had disappeared.

Indignant Church Goers.

DANIELSONVILLE, Conn., Feb. 15.—A mass meeting of the French-Canadian residents here was held last night in Music hall to protest against the action of Bishop Tierney in not allowing them a priest of their own blood. Dr. Le Claire of Danbury deplored the action of the bishop. Dr. O. Barlbault of New Haven said that he always thought citizens had the right of free speech, and surely they had the right to say who would be their pastor. He asked the audience to stand out for a French-Canadian priest, and in the end he was sure they would be successful. The meeting voted unanimously to accept no priest but one of their own nationality.

Desmond's License Bombshell.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Feb. 15.—Lawyer Desmond has issued a statement that every liquor license granted by the commissioners last September is illegal, he raising the point of law that licenses shall be granted in the month of April, and that privileges accruing from the increase of population could not be operative until the month of April, 1896. It is said that the legality of 14 licenses granted recently will be tested before the district court. Mr. Desmond's claim has made a stir, as in many cities of the commonwealth additional licenses were granted based on the result of the census.

Army Veteran Missing.

LOWELL, Mass., Feb. 15.—George Goodwin, aged 54, was undoubtedly drowned in the Merrimac Thursday night. About midnight his wife heard him shouting from the river bank opposite the house. She advised him not to cross on the ice. He said he was on the bank and wanted help. She summoned a neighbor, but when they reached the river no trace of him could be found. Yesterday tracks in the snow were found leading to a hole in the ice. Goodwin was a veteran of the Civil War.

Victim of Peculiar Accident.

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 15.—Owen Goff, a contractor, died at his home at Arctic Centre from injuries received by being thrown from his wagon last Monday. Goff was sitting on the seat beside the driver, John Mulholland. The horses started up suddenly, and the wagon came in collision with a large rock by the roadside. Both men were thrown from the seat. Mulholland was almost beheaded by the wheel, which passed over his neck, and Goff was injured internally.

Ball Players at Work.

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 15. — The baseball men at Brown university have begun practicing in the cage, under the direction of Coach Tenney. Dunn of Brooklyn, Sedgewick of Andover, Ives of Exeter and Miller of Providence will train as pitchers. Casey of Exeter will play first base; Phillips, from Fiskburn military academy, Virginia, will catch or play shortstop, while Williams of Brooklyn and Hopkins of Vermont military academy will play in the field.

Trouble Not Ended.

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 15.—Ten more sophomores and juniors were called before President Andrews of Brown yesterday, and it is generally understood that the complaints emanated from Professor Lamont. It is feared more severe sentences are impending.

Old Offender Sentenced.

BOSTON, Feb. 15.—Mrs. Ella L. Bates, 60 years old, convicted of being implicated in a fatal criminal operation, performed on Mrs. Keyes of South Boston, has been sentenced to seven years' imprisonment in the women's reformatory at Sherburne.

THE WEEK PAST.

The preponderance of evidence the past week has been in favor of antitoxin. On Monday there was a favorable report from the Boston City Hospital, on Tuesday and Wednesday communications, and on Thursthe statement of a Philadelphia physician. Friday is generally the stormiest or pleasantest day of the week, and the word antitoxin was not mentioned.

The above excitement has apparently given way to the controversy over the postmastership of Wollaston. Thursday's article gave the impression that the Democratic aspirant stood no show, but it seems that while Wollaston has only a Baker's dozen of Democrats that there are others in the city who are interested and propose to get Wilde out or Burn their fingers. It would seem as if Josiah was too busy in Boston "turning out the rascals," to take a hand in this movement.

The grocers mean that the people shall hear from their association occasionally. They realize that a little newspaper publicity of the fact that the association is strong, and looking sharply after the dead beats, will have a salutary effect on many, and that bills will be paid more promptly. But the Old Colony Association are building air castles, and expect before another year to have more money than they will know what to do with, which is said to be the situation of the Boston association today. The latter made thousands of dollars at their food fair a couple years ago, and the Old Colony Association expect to surpass them.

If anyone in Quincy has more money than he knows what to do with he should build a large hall in this city. The spectacle of holding grand balls in furniture stores, and first class entertainments in "way back" little halls, makes Quincy the laughing stock of the towns arround. Few realize perhaps the many good times they are missing. The city needs a grand large hall to help local business, to enliven Quincy, to make it possible to give entertainments which will be a financial success. Should not this be one of the first subjects for the consideration of our new Board of Trade. It will make trade and bring trade.

The parkway hearing has also been announced and it is another improvement which will be of great benefit to the city. Few projects have awakened such an interest in Quincy, and the hearing promises to be very largely attended.

St. Valentine has shared with Lincoln the honors of the week, and George Washington will have his innings next week. It will be a Saturday holiday.

Tom Reed appears to be one of the big guns too. He blossomed out on Lincoln's birthday, and the next evening the statesmen of the Quincy Debating club seriously considered his candidacy for the Presidency.

To go back on the award of the judges at the High school prize speaking could hardly be expected, and the public generally discourage the criticism. No one questions but the young man who expected a higher prize, did excellently. For his work on translations and in essays he also took prizes. He still continues a member of the school, and it is such young men that the Quincy High wants.

Seldom have the fire companies been reorganized with less friction. Of course there was some; there always will be.

The county appropriations are likely to receive some attention. The expenditures of 1895 have been criticised.

Guild Concert.

The concert given last evening under the auspices of the Guild of the Great Teacher was a great success. The programme was arranged and managed by Mr. Harry W. Porter which was a sufficient guarantee of something good in the music line. Every participant was recalled several times and most generously responded. Those to take part were; Miss Towle, contralto soloist; Miss Florence Emery, soprano soloist; Miss Marion Sherman, reader; Mr. Waterhouse, tenor soloist; Mr. Coonly 'celloist; Mr. Robert Porter, violinist.

FIREMEN'S BALL.

Tenth of the Relief Association a Grand Success.

The Coliseum Was Nev r as Elaborately Decorated.

Large Attendance, Pretty Gowns, Good Music, Souvenir Badges.

It was a perfect night that greeted the Firemen's Relief Association last evening at Guy's Coliseum, on the occasion of its tenth annual concert and ball, and it is hardly necessary to add that the affair was an unqualified success in every way.

The hall itself never looked more inviting, for during the day the New England Decorating Co. had been hard at work and had transformed it into a scene of beauty; the sides and ends of the room were resplendent with flags and bunting which were tastefully draped and arranged, forming a pretty background for the many pictures of fire scenes and portraits of exengineers of the Quincy fire department, which were hung upon the walls.

Besides these there was a large painting in the rear of the hall representing a relief committee visiting the sick, and at the back of the orchestra platform was hung another large painting representing a fire scene. On the left side of the hall facing the platform was a motto reading: "Quincy Firemen's Relief Association," while on the right side was one reading "Welcome to our 10th."

The platform, upon which was seated Hanson's orchestra, looked very pretty. In the centre of the front was a large hydrant, loaned by the Coffin Valve Co., from which were run three lines of hose loaned by the Boston Woven Hose Co., which were neatly coiled in front; on each end was a hand chemical extinguisher. These represented the implements of warfare used by the firemen.

Besides these there was tastefully arranged a number of handsome potted plants, which were kindly loaned by Mrs. Packard.

At the side of the platform there had been erected a grand stand for the use of the invited guests and these were also decorated with flags and bunting. On the posts of this grand stand were two highly polished play pipes from the nozzles of which there protruded two handsome bouquets of fragrant cut flowers from the conservatory of Mrs Packard.

If anything was needed to complete the decoration of the interior it was furnished by two handsome silver trumpets which hung suspended from the chandlier in the centre of the hall. Each of these trumpets has a history and furnishes the connecting link between the past and present fire departments of Quincy. One of these trumpets is the the property of Chief Williams. Years ago it was presented by the citizens of South Quincy to the Tiger Engine Co., and was retained by them until the company was disbanded and the old hand tub sold, when the trumpet was presented by the company to the foreman, who was Peter J. Williams the present chief of the department. The other trumpet was years ago presented by the old Niagara Company to Mr. Michael Walsh, since deceased, who had served as foreman of that company and also as district engineer, and this relic was kindly loaned by Mr. Walsh's family.

From 7 to 8 o'clock the Columbus band, which during the day had been advertising the ball in the several parts of the city, gave an open air concert in front of the hall, and at 8 o'clock Hanson's orchestra commenced the promenade concert, which was to precede the ball, and from this time out the reception committee which consisted of Chief Williams the assistant engineers and ex-Chief Walter H. Ripley, were kept busy looking after the wants of the guests who were constantly arriving.

Each guest as he arrived was presented with a neat badge of red ribbon held in position by an eagle, and while speaking of badges it would not be out of place to mention those worn by the several committees. That of Mayor Adams was very elaborate. It was of white silk ribbon suspended from a white enamel bar, upon which appeared the word "Mayor." In the centre of the badge was a rosette with blue background edged with gold and in the centre a white button with the monogram "C. F. A. 2d," in metal letters; from the rosette hung two gold tassels. On one of the ends of the bow was the word "Quincy" and on the other the letters "F. R. A."

That of the marshal was of blue ribbon with the metal letters "Q. F. R A.," the floor director and assistants being of lavender, and those of the aids of blue.

It was but a few minutes past 9.30 o'clock when ten blows were struck on the large gong at the rear of the hall which was a signal for the inauguration of the grand march. The march was a very pretty affair and was participated in by over 100 couples. It was lead by Chief Engineer Williams and Mrs. Williams. Mrs. Williams wore a handsome black silk with a short sleeved changable silk waist, trimmed with cream silk ribbon bows and cream lace.

Following close to Chief Williams came floor director William F. Powers and Miss Margaret Sheehan; assistant floor director, Walter H. Ripley and Mrs. Ripley; Mayor Adams and Miss Mary White, the aids and others.

Once in motion the festivities of the occasion went on uninterruptedly until late this morning. At midnight there was a brief intermission, during which Caterer Nash served one of his popular suppers.

The invited guests included Mayor Adams, the heads of the several city departments, President Bryant, all of the ex-engineers of the Quincy fire department, the chiefs of the departments of the neighboring cities and towns and others.

The committee in charge of the affair and to whom much of the success of the affair was due were: W. F. Powers, chairman; John P. Thomas, treasurer; James F. Morrisey, secretary; P. J. Williams John A. Mahoney, John H. Newcomb, M. W. Cunniff, James A. White, E. F. Drohan, M. P. Barry, W. H. Ripley, Stephen H. Edwards, P. S. Morris, Wm. A. Gavin, J. R. Harris.

An Inharmonious Board.

The Board of Managers of Public Burial Places, from all appearances, is not as harmonious a board as it should be. Last year the members of the board got into a deadlock over the election of a superintendent of Mt. Wollaston cemetery which required several meetings to straighten out, and this year the board struck a snag at its very first meeting when it attempted to organize, over the election of clerk.

All members were present when the meeting was called to order and the board immediately proceeded to organize. John Hall was the unanimous choice for chairman, but Mr. Hall had evidently had all the experience in that capacity with this board that he desired and he declined the office. The board then elected Mr. Vogel.

The next office to be filled was that of clerk and it was soon apparent that there was to be a contest as there were two members who desired to hold the only salaried office on the board.

Mr. Elijah G. Hall the clerk of last year's board was a candidate for re-election and Mr. Fred F. Green also wanted the office, and it was over the election of a clerk that the deadlock was caused, and although four ballots were taken the result was not changed.

The vote on the first ballot was: Elijah G. Hall, 3; John Hall, 2; Fred F. Green, 1.

The next three ballots remained the same with the two Mr. Halls the odd ballot being given to Mr. Maxim, Mr. Wilson and Mr. Green in turn.

A FAVORABLE COMPARISON.

What Secretary Herbert Thinks of Our Naval Shipbuilding Facilities.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—Secretary Herbert was before the house committee on naval affairs for two hours yesterday, going over many questions of naval armament and outlining his views on desirable features of naval appropriations. The secretary submitted tables showing the relative cost of warships in the United States and foreign countries.

They disclosed that the United States is now able to build better ships at less cost than any country in the world, save Great Britain, and the latter country is but slightly ahead. It was also made evident that the cost of building warships in the United States had been greatly reduced in recent years.

Mr. Herbert was questioned by Chairman Boutelle and others of the committee concerning the need of additional battleships, torpedo boats, etc. The secretary made it clear that he desired the largest allowance for the various classes of vessels that congress felt warranted in giving, but he did not fix exact limits on the number of ships, although it was the general understanding that three battleships instead of the two recommended in the secretary's annual report, would be very acceptable to the naval authorities.

The discussion took a wide range as to the relative merits of battleships, cruisers, torpedo boats, etc. The secretary's answers indicated that while considering battleships and torpedo boats of more immediate need than cruisers, yet that he did not rate one class as superior to another, regarding each essential in its particular line.

Secretary Herbert's written data made an interesting comparison between types of American and British ships, for type, showing that our ships were equal to the best afloat. Orally, also, the secretary stated in most emphatic terms that American-built warships, such as the Indiana, were equal to or superior to the best craft afloat under other flags.

Keeping Close Watch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—Senor Romero the Mexican minister here, gives no credence to the story that Dan Stuart had obtained a concession of land from the Mexican government upon which the fight could be pulled off without danger of interference from either the United States or the Mexican authorities. Under the Mexican constitution state officials are inhibited from disposing to a foreigner any land within 20 miles of the border without the written approval of the president of the republic. The federal authorities here are inclined to the opinion that an attempt is being made to throw the officials off their guard, and that telegrams have been sent cautioning the authorities not to be misled by appearances, and to keep a strict watch on all the movements of the fighters and their friends.

Defiant Filibusters.

WILMINGTON, N. C., Feb. 15.—Steamer Commodore, the alleged filibustering vessel which has been detained here for some time, received her clearance papers and sailed yesterday. She is supposed to have arms and ammunition for the Cuban insurgents, and her probable destination is Charleston. The departure of the vessel was made without any effort at secrecy, but, on the contrary, she sailed away blowing her whistles and with other evidences of demonstration. This action is in accordance with the statements of Counsel Kerr of the Hart line of steamers, to which the Commodore belongs, who said that the vessels of his line would sail with arms and ammunition.

Died to Cover Guilt.

ROME, N. Y., Feb. 15.—The inquest into the suicide of Cashier Barnard has been completed. A note left by Barnard was produced, which exonerated Bookkeeper Sillenback and placed all the blame for the bank's condition upon himself. Sillenback said that Cashier Barnard never told him of any irregularities, and that if the bank examiner had investigated the bank last year, as he was supposed to do, the irregularities would have been uncovered. President Utley testified that he believed the direct cause of Barnard's suicide was due to the notes of the J. Winslow Jones company of Baltimore. The jury returned a verdict of suicide.

Peace In the Wigwam.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—The Tammany executive committee met at the Wigwam last night to hear the final report of the committee that had the arrangements of the recent Croker dinner in hand. The resolution was introduced by Mr. Skillings, seconded by County Clerk Purroy and unanimously adopted.

Opposition Held In Check.

LONDON, Feb. 15.—The Times says that for diplomatic reasons the leaders of the opposition in parliament will withhold their criticisms of the Venezuelan question during the discussion of the amendment offered by L. Atherley-Jones (Radical), deploring the absence from the queen's speech of an assurance that the whole boundary dispute with Venezuela will be referred to arbitration, in accordance with America's suggestion.

General Weyler's New Move.

HABANA, Feb. 15.—General Weyler is convinced that the force of volunteers in Cuba is not as large or as effective as it can be made, and he is devoting a great deal of attention to plans for enlarging this arm of the service and employing it in active service. He proposes now to mobilize the native volunteers in a very short time and dispatch them to the field.

Working Hard For Mrs. Maybrick.

Kentucky Bank Embarrassed.

FLEMINGSBURG, Ky., Feb. 15.—The Exchange bank of David Wilson & Co. assigned here to Rolla K. Hart and Robert Sourlee. The estimated liabilities are $70,000, with assets of over $100,000. Slow collections are the cause of the assignment.

It is conceded that shirt waists will lose none of their past favor and those young enough to wear them will have several in their next summer's outfit. Fashion does not repeat herself from year to year so the waists for this summer must differ as much as possible from last summers. A shirt waist must be plain and of mannish cut and finish.

W. P. Howland of Central street, Braintree, returned last Saturday after five weeks of business in Maine. He reports fine weather there; no snow.

* * *

Mr. Arthur Newhall Johnson of Cambridge was in town this week being the guest of the Misses Cote, and attended the dance given by the young people of Christ's church on Thursday evening.

* * *

Present indications seem to prophesy that big sleeves will still be popular for the spring, though less stiffly lined and droop less from the shoulders than they have done this winter.

Harold Curtis is seven years old today and this afternoon is entertaining several little friends at the residence of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse F. Curtis on Goffe street.

BRAINTREE.

Evangelist Greenwood has been secured by the Braintree Baptist church, to hold special services commencing Sunday at 2 P. M. and 7 P. M. Services will be held daily through the whole week, with the exception of Saturday, to all of these meetings everyone is invited. We extend through these columns, a special invitation to all pastors of this town, with their respective congregations, to attend as many of the services as can be made practicable.

A citizens' caucus will be held in the Town Hall, Feb. 28th.

Excavating for the foundation for the new power station at East Braintree has commenced.

The Thayer Academy base ball nine is now in daily practice under the direction of George H. Arnold.

The Owl Whist club met at the home of Mrs. George Williams on French's avenue, Wednesday night.

The grocers and butchers held their annual meeting in the Town Hall, Tuesday night, and elected the old officers for another year.

Professor Stanley will lecture on "God's footprints in the Orient," in the Union church, Weymouth, tomorrow evening, at 7.30. He resided many years in the East, is an eloquent, interesting speaker, and the meeting will be a profitable one.

The financial statement of the town shows:

| | |
|---|---|
| The liabilities to be | $349,938.47 |
| The assets, | 55 0 5 89 |
| Net debt Dec. 31, 1895, | 294,882.58 |
| The collector's report shows: | |
| Balance of tax uncollected, 1893, | 2,919.32 |
| Balance of tax uncollected, 1894, | 1,122.64 |
| Balance of tax uncollected, 1895, | 19,099.12 |
| The treasurer's report shows: | |
| Balance in the treasury of | 22,473.52 |

The appropriations have been overdrawn in the following departments: Schools, poor, salaries of town officers, incidentals, highways and the collection and abatement of taxes. The report is full and complete and we recommend its careful perusal.

The orators are getting loaded up for the coming Town meeting. Many are already "full to the chin" and are practicing at home and on the street corners, and there are indications of an interesting campaign.

Among the names mentioned this week for selectmen at the south end of the town are Caleb Thompson, L. B. Hollis and T. R. Fitch, these of course in addition to Mr. Clark. Mr. Clark has many friends but there is a feeling that a change would be beneficial.

Just how strong this feeling is remains to be seen. The way the electric light has been managed has not helped his chances and it has given his enemies something to work upon.

There is no doubt much would be gained by having a separate board of assessors, and there are some that want to see a radical change in the whole management of town affairs. They feel that things have fallen into a rut and like the deep ruts in the streets, after a muddy spell in the winter, they can not be improved until we have a "thaw."

At the eart part of the town there is no special opposition to Mr. Hayward but you ask any man there about local politics and you are likely to get this answer:

"Who are they going to run at the south end?" There is a rumor that Mr. Scollard may run.

At North Braintree Mr. L. W. Morrison seems to be the strongest opponent of the present incumbent. He was a candidate last year, but the friends of Mr. Mayhew did not wish to retire him a "yearling." This year Mr. Morrison's friends will make a strong fight for his election. Mr. J. Franklin Bates is also talked of.

In regard to town clerk there may be those who would like to see a younger man in that office, but there will be no opposition to Mr. Bates, as every voter recognizes the faithful and valuable work he has done. The report that will soon be in the hands of the voters will give the taxpayers matter to talk about.

DUN'S TRADE REVIEW.

January Exports Show Slight Increase Over Those of Last Year.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—R. G. Dun & Co., in their weekly review of trade, say: The weather still hinders business. January exports of the principal products increased, except for cotton, and were in value $59,797,193, against $59,030,900 last year.

The treasury has been placed on a safe basis for a time, the fears of silver agitation have been removed and foreign nations have been impressed by the spirit and power of the people, displayed in the purchase of bonds. The British government virtually assures peace with regard to Venezuela, and apprehensions of other foreign difficulties distinctly lessen.

Pig iron at the east and at Chicago has not advanced, southern competition continuing at prices so low that several Alabama furnaces have stopped, but bessemer is a shade lower at Pittsburg. The coke output is again much reduced. Copper is a shade firmer at 10¼ cents, while tin and lead are not active and unchanged.

The demand for boots and shoes is still disappointing, several factories have closed and few are working full time; belief in lower prices still prevail, although further reductions have been made in most lines, amounting since Jan. 1 to 6 per cent.

Textile work shows little change, though the cut in print cloths to 2.75 cents, and general concessions in brown and bleached staples, averaging for the whole list quoted 6 per cent since Jan. 1, induced more buying, which the known accumulation of goods ahead of demand has hindered.

Sales of wool have been small for two weeks of February, 9,320,700 pounds, against 10,260,750 last year, and 12,502,550 in 1893, but higher prices abroad, sustained by heavy shipments of goods to this country, incline holders of wool here to make no concessions, so that manufacturers have the more difficulty in meeting competition.

Wheat has declined ¾ cent, with western receipts 3,022,306 bushels, against 875,199 bushels last year, while Atlantic exports for two weeks have been only 3,639,195 bushels, against 2,721,544 bushels last year. Corn is a shade lower, and both pork and lard a little lower.

Cotton receipts at this season, never large, still indicate a supply for the current crop year, including stocks brought over, much in excess of the world's needs, so that the prospect of increased acreage has the more power to depress prices, and spot cotton has declined ⅛ cent for the week.

Warning to Navigators.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—The disabled British steamer Moorish Prince has arrived here, in tow of the tugboat Storm King of the Boston Towboat company, for repairs. She sailed from Boston on Tuesday, bound for New York and Brazilian ports. When off Gay Head, Vineyard sound, she is thought to have struck some submerged obstruction, as her propeller suddenly dropped out of its place and was lost. So far as is known the steamer sustained no other damage.

Gentry Sells For $7600.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—John R. Gentry, champion pacing stallion, was sold at auction in Madison Square Garden yesterday to William Simpson of this city for $7600. The stallion was sold to dissolve the partnership of Messrs. Holt & Scott of the Alamance stock farm of Graham, N. C. Gentry has a record of 2m. 3¾s, and his late owners and many well known judges think that he will yet go the mile in 2m. He is by Ashland Wilkes, dam Dance Wood.

In the Interests of Harmony.

LONDON, Feb. 15.—Timothy Healy has written to Thomas Sexton urging him, on the ground of party needs, to reconsider his refusal of the chairmanship of the party and offering to withdraw from the party if that will purchase Mr. Sexton's acceptance, or the heartiest cooperation of the Healyites, whose only wish, he says, is to make Mr. Sexton's tenure of the chair agreeable and honorable.

Burglar's Bloody Work.

DALLAS, Feb. 15.—A negro burglar entered the house of Jefferson Smith last night. Smith grappled with him and was stabbed in the back three times, and is believed to be fatally injured. His wife tried to assist him, and the assassin crushed her skull with a blow from an ax. She is unconscious and cannot recover.

Castle Square Theatre, Boston.

The second week of "Iolanthe" opened Monday evening at the Castle Square Theatre under even better auspices than the initial performance. Not only was the beautiful auditorium crowded but enthusiasm ran high throughout the evening. The beauty of the production, the taste and harmony of costumes and lights and before all and beyond all the eveness of the cast and the zest with which each member entered into the spirit of the opera were he subjects of universal praise. It was a happy thought that induced Mr. Rose to give the public a change from the heavy music of Verdi and Gounod to the lighter vem of Gilbert and Sullivan. For Monday evening, Feb. 17th, Mr. Rose announces a double bill that is in itself extraordinary. "Pinafore" will be the opening piece and everyone seems to be anxious to renew acquaintance with the old favorite. On the same evening Mascagin's Grand Opera "Cavalleria Rusticana" will be given. A bill of this kind was never before given and it is an undertaking which no opera company has ever dared attempt but the Castle Square Opera company has established a reputation for audacity and they have redeemed all pledges made to the public since the opening of the season on May 6th, 1895. For the personal convenience of his patrons, Mr. Rose announces that special cars will leave the theatre at the close of the evening performances for all railroad stations.

Vesper Music.

The program of music at 4 o'clock vespers at the Uniterian church is:

"The Grace of God that Bringeth Salvation." Barnby
Christian the Morn Breaks Sweetly O'er Thee," Kelley
"O Sacred Head now Wounded," Liszt-Kelley
"Consider and Hear Me," Pflueger
Bass Solo, "In Heavenly Love Abiding," Bachelder
Solo, tenor, "Be thou Faithful," St. Paul-Mendelssohn

Sisyphus was the ancient hero condemned by the gods to push a big boulder up-hill forever, lest it should roll down and crush him. When the myth-makers got up that story they must have been thinking of dyspepsia; for there is certainly no other trouble on earth that keeps you so everlastingly struggling against being crushed into utter despair. Anything that cures dyspepsia lifts about half the weight of misery that crushes mankind,—and womankind.

The trouble with most of the so-called dyspepsia-cures, is that they don't cure. They give only temporary relief. Indigestion usually extends all through the digestive tract, from the stomach clear down to the large intestine; the liver too is frequently involved in the trouble being torpid and inactive. For a thorough, radical, permanent cure you must have the whole digestive organism set right.—Not violently stirred up, but regulated. Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets will do it. They stimulate the digestive juices of the stomach; invigorate the liver and help it to actively secrete the bile; and act gently on the bowels to promote a regular healthy movement. This means a complete and lasting cure of digestive troubles.

The "Pellets" are not a severe cathartic. They act on the bowels naturally and comfortably though surely. The dose can be regulated to your needs, and when the "Pellets" have done their work they can be discontinued. You don't become a slave to their use, as with other pills. If the druggist suggest some griping pill that gives him more profit, think what will profit you most.

Senate Free Silver Substitute Doomed by the House.

Refused to Concur by an Immense Majority.

Talbert Scathingly Rebuked In the Private Pensions Bill Discussion.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—The last stage of the debate upon the financial question as involved in the senate free coinage substitute for the house bond-revenue bill was on in the house at the opening of the session yesterday.

Mr. Crisp (Dem., Ga.) began the closing speech in favor of the free coinage of silver, and was given as much time as he desired.

The majority against silver, when the final vote was taken, was larger than that of Thursday in committee of the whole. Yet the motion to concur was defeated—190 to 80, a majority of 110; yesterday it was beaten 215 to 90, a majority of 125.

The vote was a record-making vote, and counting the pairs, but 37 out of 365 members were unaccounted for. Perhaps a few absentees dodged, but most of them were unavoidably absent and were unable to secure pairs. The silver men were again disappointed. The "sound money" leaders had been disposed to concede the silver forces 100 votes. An analysis of the vote shows that 184 Republicans and 31 Democrats voted against concurrence, and 68 Democrats, 25 Republicans and 7 Populists for concurrence.

The debate which preceded the vote was of an interesting character, but devoid of any sensational features. Ex-Speaker Crisp presented the closing argument for the silver men, and was replied to by Mr. Turner, a Democratic colleague from Georgia, in a two hours' speech. The personal rivalry between the two leaders of the opposing factions of the Democratic side of the house added to the interest of the occasion. Mr. Dalzell (Penn.) closed in behalf of the Republicans. The partisans of the respective champions missed no opportunity to acclaim their approval when telling points were made, and at the close the honors seemed even.

Mr. Dalzell, a member of the ways and means committee, brought the house back to the question whether it should abrogate its duty and judgment to the senate—whether the house should abandon its bill and accept that of the senate.

Indulged In Personalities.

A very exciting row was only prevented at the night session of the house, which was devoted to the consideration of private pension bills, by the good temper shown by Mr. Talbert of South Carolina whose utterances at the night session two weeks ago caused Mr. Barrett of Massachusetts to offer a resolution to censure him for "treasonable and seditious" language.

Mr. Talbert was opposing a bill to pension a soldier's widow, who had subsequently remarried and had been divorced from her second husband, when Mr. Hardy (Rep., Ind.) arose and made a savage personal attack upon Mr. Talbert. "South Carolina," he said, "had always been raising her voice in opposition to the Union. We have heard from South Carolina," said he, "year in and year out except the four years when she was out of the Union. She has caused more trouble than any state in the Union from the time when John C. Calhoun tried to nullify the statutes of the United States in 1832, and Jackson threatened to hang him for his pains, up to the present time, when the gentleman from South Carolina appears in this body and a gentleman with similar propensities appears at the other end of the Capitol. Her record here is without a parallel. I am here to vote for every pension bill presented to this house, despite South Caroina, which has not sent an honestly-elected representative to Congress since 1872."

Mr. Talbert was evidently suffering under great excitement while this attack was being made, and an outbreak was expected, but he restrained himself with difficulty and turned the attack with a pleasant reference to the fact that Canada had been heard from. (Mr. Hardy was born in Canada). Mr. Talbert said that he himself had served in the Confederate army throughout the war. Mr. Hardy did not serve in the Union army. "I have noticed," concluded Mr. Talbert, "that those who are invincible in time of peace were generally invisible in time of war."

Will Revolutionize Surgery.

TORONTO, Feb. 15.—In Grace hospital yesterday the value to surgery of Professor Roentgen's discovery was again demonstrated. A woman patient, whose foot had caused her intense pain, was submitted to the cathode rays, and the photograph revealed the presence of a needle. Professor Wright of University college, who conducted the experiment, pointed out to the surgeons the exact location of the foreign body, and an operation at this point proved the photograph to be a true one.

Railroads Make Concessions.

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 15.—The Minneapolis and St. Louis railroad announces that it will make as long a time limit on the tickets for the Grand Army encampment at St. Paul as any other road running into the Twin cities. This makes three roads that have agreed to a 30-day limit, and it meets the requirements of the commander-in-chief of the Grand Army. The other roads are the Wisconsin Central and Chicago Great Western.

Damaging Evidence Against Husband.

CHICAGO, Feb. 15.—John Kochler, who is locked up, charged with conspiracy to murder his family, may be called upon, the police say, to explain the death of his first wife, who died from poison over two years ago. The second Mrs. Kochler had her husband held in $10,000 bonds on a charge of conspiracy to murder her and her three children.

Ready to Fight.

EL PASO, Tex., Feb. 15.—Quinn, the backer of Maher, telephoned from Las Cruces that Peter's eyes are 25 per cent better, and that he would surely be able to be in the ring Monday. In the meantime concessions have been secured for a big bull fight in Juarez tomorrow.

Death of a Noted Jurist.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 15.—Judge Alexander Davis breathed his last at the Baptist sanitarium yesterday, surrounded by members of his family and friends. He was 64 years old. Judge Davis was the jurist whose name was immortalized by Mark Twain in "Roughing It."

AS VIEWED BY PEARY.

Thinks Nansen Will First Be Heard From a Siberian Point.

What Other Authorities Have to Say on the Matter.

Great Praise Due the Norwegian Government and Citizens For Aid Rendered.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—Lieutenant R. E. Peary, U. S. N., delivered a lecture here last night under the auspices of the Commercial society, in which he described his first voyage last spring from Whale sound to Independence bay, Greenland. At the close of the lecture, Lieutenant Peary was asked by a reporter his opinion of the report that Dr. Nansen had discovered the North Pole.

"Anything in this world is possible," observed the lieutenant, "and it is probable that information has been received of the present whereabouts of Dr. Nansen. I doubt it, however. Word is supposed to have come from the Siberian coast of the doctor's whereabouts. That was practically the starting point of his journey, and if he has been heard from it means that he started out on his journey and was forced back by the ice.

"It will be remembered that last spring the Paris Figaro printed a report that Nansen had been heard from. This proved to be untrue. Then the scientific world heard that word from him had reached Norway through the medium of carrier pigeons. This also proved to be a canard. I think the present rumor bears the same status."

"A fact against the possibility of getting news from Nansen just now is that this is the bad season—the season when Arctic explorers are likely to be completely hemmed in by the ice. I have no fear of Nansen's safety, and believe he is still in the land of the living. He will probably lose his vessel, but get back with his men all right.

"If Nansen's current theory is correct, and he has reached the North Pole, he will first be heard from not at a Siberian point, but somewhere on the coast of Greenland. If he has reached the pole, he will be fully able to scientifically demonstrate his discovery on his return."

Opinions of Other Authorities.

Evelyn D. Baldwin of Naperville, Ills., the meteorologist of the Peary expedition—1893-94, was asked yesterday what he thought of the reported discovery of the North Pole by Dr. Nansen.

"I think it highly probable. It is the result of well calculated plans and not unexpected. Dr. Nansen has certainly, it would appear, accomplished that for which he has striven for at least the past five years.

"The voyage of the Jeannette, under De Long, until the crushing of the vessel in latitude 77.15, and longitude 155 E, indicated that the near approach to the North Pole was to be made by a well equipped and properly constructed vessel from that direction—by the New Siberian islands.

"The Jeannette had drifted through two long Arctic nights in that region, and this would indicate that, if it is possible for a vessel under ordinary conditions to endure so long, it is to be expected that one of special construction, as Dr. Nansen's, would succeed in going much farther.

"Dr. Nansen's absence since June 24, 1893, has given him time to make at least very close approach to the North Pole, and I think it highly probable that with favorable conditions he has succeeded in arriving at the long-coveted point. Since communication with the New Siberian islands at the month of the Lena and Delta is continuously had by means of the traders and hunters of that region, it is not probable that Dr. Nansen has had means of sending dispatches to the Russian settlements in Central Siberia, and thus home. So I think the report is not at all improbable.

"The appropriation made by the Norwegian government, and supplemented by private subscriptions, so abundantly equipped Dr. Nansen that he has been unhampered so far as his ship is concerned, and the conditions have been altogether favorable. It was, however, expected that the first news from him would chronicle his arrival off the north coast of Greenland, as it was his theory that his vessel would drift with the ice north of the New Siberian islands, nearly, if not directly, over the North Pole, and thence southward to the coast of Greenland. It seems, however, that instead of drifting south after once having arrived at the North Pole he has returned southward by way of the outward voyage, as did DeLong after the crushing of the Jeannette."

Julius R. Fredericks of Indianapolis, who was a sergeant in the Greeley expedition that reached latitude 83.24, 394 miles from the pole, thinks it is in the bonds of possibility that Nansen had reached the North Pole, but it was improbable that he reached it and started on the return down the east coast of Greenland. Sergeant Fredericks thinks it probable that the pole is on land, and said:

"We went up the west coast of Greenland, while Nansen went up the east coast, following the course of the Jeannette expedition. The two courses converge north of Greenland. When we were at out highest latitude, we were on land, and as far as we could see through glasses, we could see only land. I am inclined to doubt it, but Nansen may have found a more open season than we found, and by means of dog sledges may have made his way to the pole. If he did, it seems, as I said, that he must certainly have started homeward along the west coast of Greenland, after taking to the water, so as to have the advantage of the currents."

Edison's Success With the Rays.

ORANGE, N. J., Feb. 15.—As a result of the experiments which Edison has been making for the past two weeks with fluorescent tubes and Roentgen rays, that inventor announced last night that within 24 hours he expected to have so far perfected his tubes as to be able to make snap shots of photographs through any substance of medium thickness except steel or iron, and that he was nearly ready to attempt his experiment of photographing a human brain, and that after he had done that he would stop his experiments and leave further developments for others.

Conley's Life In the Balance.

HAMILTON, Ont., Feb. 15.—John Conley, bookkeeper for Tuckett & Sons, tobacco manufacturers, while returning from the bank with a satchel containing $1500 with which to pay the employes' weekly wages, was attacked by two men who, after rendering Conley insensible by a severe blow on the head, relieved him of the money and escaped. It is doubtful if Conley will recover.

A VICTIM OF RABIES.

Lieutenant Doe Relieved From His Sufferings by Death.

An Attendant Inoculated by a Scratch on the Hand

And Sent to the Pasteur Institute at New York For Treatment.

LYNN, Mass., Feb. 17.—Lieutenant Nelson H. Doe died at the city hospital at 6:05 o'clock last night of rabies. Before dying he inoculated Patrolman Russell, who was assisting in placing the unfortunate lieutenant in a strait-jacket. The patient scratched him on the left thumb with a froth-covered hand. The wound was immediately cauterized, and Mr. Russell, accompanied by City Physician William B. Little, went to the Pasteur Institute, New York city, for treatment.

LIEUTENANT NELSON H. DOE.

The attending physicians say that Russell was almost certainly inoculated, and Marshal Wells insisted on his going to New York at once for treatment at the expense of the city.

Early yesterday morning Lieutenant Doe's condition became worse. Dr. Harris decided to place him under chloroform and in a strait-jacket. The united efforts of 10 stalwart officers were required to hold him while the fluid was being administered. It required a longer time and more chloroform to produce partial insensibility than was ever used on any three patients ever treated at the hospital.

From that time on the patient was practically in a spasm, until about noon, when he became more quiet. All this time he was rapidly growing weaker and frothing from the mouth.

All day long his moans and cries resounded through the hospital grounds, and half a square away they could be distinctly heard.

Medical Science Unavailing.

The entire hospital staff of physicians were in attendance. It wasthought that the electrical current might be applied again, and Herman Lemp, Professor Thomson's assistant, was prepared to repeat the trials. The apparatus was in readiness, and at 4:30 a reporter who called at the hospital was told that, while the lieutenant was weaker, the end was not near, and that a last trial to save his life would be made.

A few minutes before 5, however, a change for the worse came, and Dr. Harris notified Marshal Wells that Mr. Doe was dying.

Up to 5:45 he was working hard. Then he became quiet and was at ease until, with a smile, he passed away. In attendance were the physicians and hospital attaches, Marshal Wells, Patrolman Frank Swain, a life-long friend, and Patrolman Edward Smith. No member of his family was at the hospital, nor did any call during the day, at the request of physicians.

No funeral arrangements have yet been made. An autopsy will probably be held.

It is understood that at the meeting of the city council tomorrow evening, an order will be presented requesting permission of the legislature to vote a sum of money, probably $1000, to the widow and children, Mr. Doe having been injured while on duty.

Accounts Were Crooked.

EPPING, N. H., Feb. 17.—A sensation that aroused every citizen within the borders of this town followed the announcement of the death of Senator Charles E. Folsom, which took place Saturday. For 21 years he had held a place on the board of selectmen. Facts have now leaked out which show that he had in various ways misappropriated funds of the town. It appears that he forged the name of Town Treasurer John Q. Pike, and borrowed money on town notes in sums from $500 to $1000. The discovery was made in November last that he was misappropriating cash belonging to others, and he agreed to stop it, and paid a number of claims. His death is rather suspicious, and the physician's statement that he died from paralysis of the brain is discredited by many. He leaves a father aged 78 years, who is frantic with grief.

School Investigation Ordered.

MERIDEN, Conn., Feb. 17.—The trustees of the state school for boys here have received a communication from Governor Coffin, directing an investigation of the rumor regarding Rev. Samuel Thatcher, superintendent of the school. The governor states that he has been informed that the superintendent has employed a disreputable woman, and also that female officers of the school frequent private rooms at saloons in the city. The trustees are summoning the parties to appear before them next Friday for examination. Resident Trustee Davis says it is a plot by Republicans to remove Thatcher, who is a Democrat.

Saco Mills Threatened.

SACO, Me., Feb. 17.—A sensation was created in this city yesterday when it was learned that threats had been made to burn the York corporation, where the big strike is in progress. The story came to the ears of a watchman Friday, since which time they have kept close watch on the factory. Mill officials think it is some outsiders who are making talk and take little stock in it, but they will appoint an extra corps of watchmen while the factory is shut down.

Strike Still Hangs Fire.

HAVERHILL, Mass., Feb. 17.—The shoe council held a secret session yesterday, but nothing definite was accomplished. There is a decidedly better feeling in regard to the situation. The agreement of several firms to post the "turned list" will defer the trouble which several firms expected today, and it is hoped that when the trouble comes it will be confined to the contracting shops and a few of the smaller firms. There also will be a delay because of the fact that a protest, made by the concerns which have refused to accept the list, will be sent back to the board of conciliation for readjustment. The protest will be based upon a technicality in regard to the width of the toe.

Freight Trains In Collision.

HARTFORD, Feb. 17.—A rear-end collision between two extra freight trains bound for Springfield, on the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, occurred at 11:30 last night at Parkville, two miles south of this city. One brakeman, who was in the caboose of the first train, was injured. The caboose caught fire and threatened to destroy several loaded cars. The fire department was promptly called and extinguished the fire, with the loss of one car. It is claimed that the engineer of the rear train passed a signal which had been set to warn him.

Claims He Is Innocent.

WORCESTER, Mass., Feb. 17.—Bagadasar Shervonian, an Armenian, charged with having killed his fellow countryman, Mesak der Sahagian, while he slept, by piercing his heart with a knife, has been captured. The murder was committed late Wednesday night. Shervonian refused to make any admission in regard to the crime, but did not attempt to deny his identity. He claims that Der Sahagian killed himself. He was held without bail until tomorrow.

Boston's Good Bond Showing.

BOSTON, Feb. 17.—The new bond issue closed at the sub-treasury here Saturday. The only bids unaccepted were $100,000 at 114; $100 at 120 and $200 at 112, and these may have been taken through New York or Washington. Of the 198 bids allotted to Boston, 105 were paid in full, 61 paid 20 per cent and 12 paid 40 per cent. The Boston allotments amounted to $7,691,289.07, of which about one-sixth were transferred to New York. The total amount paid in was $8,833,733.79.

Creditors Fail to Agree.

LACONIA, N. H., Feb. 17.—Judge Fellows of the Belknap county probate court at Tilton, on Saturday, appointed Edwin E. Jones of Manchester as assignee of Dr. J. C. Moore. The creditors failed to agree. The liabilities are $300,000 per schedule filed. The schedule of assets has not been filed. Dr. Moore thinks that with proper management the property and equities should pay 30 per cent.

Sensation in Football Circles.

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 17.—The announcement that Mr. Camp, Yale's football authority, and Mr. Deland, Harvard's head football coach, are jointly going to write a book on football affairs at the two institutions during the past two years, has aroused keen interest here. The general opinion is that the two men will clear away the difficulty that exists between the two institutions.

Death of an Editor.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Feb. 17.—E. P. Dyer, 56 years old, managing editor of The Union, died yesterday of pneumonia, complicated with organic heart and kidney trouble, after a two weeks' sickness. Mr. Dyer was born in Stowe, the son of Rev. E. P. Dyer, a well-known Congregational minister in the eastern part of the state, who was descended from an old Puritan family.

Lincoln Sunday Fittingly Observed.

BOSTON, Feb. 17.—Lincoln Memorial Sunday was generally celebrated here, the preachers taking their texts from incidents of Lincoln's life, and various associations listening to addresses on his life and work. Ex-Governor Long delivered an able lecture on the life of Abraham Lincoln before an appreciative audience at the Y. M. C. U.

Mrs. Manley's Life Despaired Of.

AUGUSTA, Me., Feb. 17.—Joseph H. Manley said Saturday that he felt some hope for Mrs. Manley, who has been dangerously sick for three days with pneumonia. Her recovery, he said, was a question of strength. However, Mrs. Manley's condition is critical, and the painful announcement is made that the worst is feared.

Caused by Defective Flue.

A union social for the young people will be held on Wednesday evening, at the Wollaston Baptist church a very pleasing entertainment is being provided.

The Board of Managers of Public Burial Places will try to complete its organization tonight, and it would not be surprising if some resignations from the board followed after the meeting.

A PROMPT REPLY.

Chairman Morrell of County Commissioners

Answers the Charges of Hon. Asa French.

Claims That the Board Has Not Exceeded Authority.

The Journal has interviewed M. P. Morrell of Hyde Park, the chairman of the Norfolk County Commissioners, and asked him if he had seen the criticism on the actions of the board recently made by Judge Asa French, in which Judge French expressed it as his opinion that the business methods of the commission should be investigated, especially in connection with the building of the new Court House at Dedham.

"Yes," replied Mr. Morrell, "I have seen the reported interview with Judge French relating to the actions of the Commissioners of Norfolk County. The opposition to the Commissioners is most political, but it hardly seems possible that Judge French could have let his imagination run quite so wildly as he did when he knew that what he said was intended for publication.

"He says," Mr. Morrell continued, "that the Commissions have asked the Legislature to allow them to raise the sum of $160,000 for the coming year. The amount actually asked for is $132,500, as will be seen from the official statement which I will furnish you. This statement will show the items in detail, and it will be seen that the greater portion of the estimates is for the support of the House of Correction, payment of costs of court, and other expenses required by law to be provided for.

"Judge French intimates that there should be an investigation into the action of the County Commissioners. Nothing would suit the Commissioners better.

"The County of Norfolk has a good Court House and good public buildings. Buildings as well constructed and finished have never been built by any other board at as low a price, and they cannot now be duplicated for what they have cost the county. The in building the Court House is made for political effect.

Charge of Extravagance

"Judge French charges that the Commissioners had the furniture of the new Court House made to order. If Judge French could have referred the Commissioners to any place where they keep court house furniture in stock, the Commissioners would have been very glad to have had the information.

"Judge French also makes complaint about the granite curbing put in around the Court House lot. This curbing was included in a clause in the contract with Mr. Willcutt, the builder. Whether this was a good contract or not for the county may be judged from the fact that the contractor paid more for the stone and the cutting than he received for the entire job, which included a deep foundation of granite and an expensive setting. The granite, it is true, did not come from Quincy. The Commissioners had had a little experience with a contractor in Quincy and found it an extremely difficult matter to make him fulfil the contract that he had made. It is possible that this granite contractor may have had a little personal feeling on account of the extra work that he was obliged to do by orders of the Commissioners in order to fill his contract according to the specifications which he had signed.

"As for the amount paid the architect," said Mr. Morrell, "it was the customary price received by all first-class architects.

"Mr. French is reported to have said in his interview that his 'examination proved rather unpleasant for the Chairman, and on the second day of the hearing the Commissioner refused to subject himself to cross-examination. The difficulty seemed to be with the Judge himself, who did not realize that a hearing before a Legislative Committee was and one where the custom did not permit of the bulldozing that is usually practised by criminal lawyers in that class of courts.

"Our critic, when he says that a number of citizens appeared before the Committee on County Estimates to object, when we asked for the money we needed last year forgets to add that for everyone who came to criticise there were a dozen present to commend. Among these I am glad to be able to say there were such men as John R. Bullard, Hon. Elijah A. Morse, Daniel Brown, the Representative in the Legislature from Wrentham, J. L. Whitaker, Herbert W. Thayer, David Marr of Hyde Park, Selectmen Mason of Franklin and a great many others. The statement that the Selectmen of Brookline were present to oppose is entirely incorrect.

"The Commissioners exercised their best judgment in asking the Legislature for money to pay for the various purposes required by the county. Last year, although they asked for $20,000 for highways, if the Commissioners had laid out all the highways that were called for by petit sandamages would have probably mem- double that amount. le was 64 the jurist

"So far as what is called by Mark 'padding' is concerned, the Commissioners have done as all Boards of County Commissioners of Norfolk County have always done. When there was a balance above expenditure in one department it has been transferred to another department when necessity required. This has not only been the universal practice, but is directly authorized by law in section 2, chapter 482, of the acts of 1895, and is in accordance with an opinion given a former board by no less eminent an authority than

The late Judge Hoar.

The former Chairman of the board before the legislative committee last year testified that, that had always been the custom of the board. With the custom and the statutes of the Commonwealth both justifying the Commissioners in their act, they do not have great fear of a legislative investigation. The Commissioners have never expended a dollar that was not authorized by law, and they have had authority granted by the Legislature to raise money which they have not exercised. They are proud of the public buildings at Dedham, and desire that every person in the county shall visit and examine them.

"The correct table of

Estimates for the County

for the coming year, which I have referred to above," said Mr. Morrell, "is as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| Interest on county debt, | $ 7,300 |
| Reduction of county debt, | 10,000 |
| Salary of county officers and assistants, | 13,000 |
| Salaries of judges and clerks of district and police courts, | 6,000 |
| Salaries of jailers and masters and assistants in jails and houses of of correction | 7,500 |
| Support of prisoners in jails and houses of correction, in excess of receipts, | 8,500 |
| Criminal costs in superior court, in excess of receipts, | 8,500 |
| Civil expenses in supreme and superior courts, | 11.000 |
| Expenses of district and police courts, | 7,000 |
| Trial justices, | 5,000 |
| Transportation expenses of county and special commissioners, | 300 |
| Medical examiner, inquests and commitment of the insane, | 2,700 |
| Auditors, masters and referees, | 2,500 |
| Repairing, furnishing and improving county buildings, | 6,000 |
| Care, fuel, light and supplies in county buildings other than jails and houses of correction, | 5,700 |
| Highways bridges and land damages, in excess of receipts, | 15,000 |

| Truant schools, in excess of receipts, | 3,000 |
| Miscellaneous and contingent expenses, in excess of receipts, | 2,500 |
| Total, | $132,500 |

"In addition to this," Mr. Morrell continued, "I want to quote an extract from the report of Mr. Charles R. Prescott, the Comptroller of County Accounts, from which it will be noticed that Norfolk County has the per thousand. Here are the figures as given—the rate per thousand being figured upon the estimated expenses for 1896 as furnished by the County Commissioners of the various counties specified:

Lowest Tax Rate

| | Valuation. | Est. Exp. 96. | Rate per $1000. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Barnstable | $24,800,217 | $24,000 | .96 |
| Berkshire | 51,174,990 | 80,000 | 1.56 |
| Bristol | 170,682,508 | 270,000 | 1.58 |
| Dukes | 4,012,210 | 7,500 | 1.86 |
| Essex | 261,480,591 | 225,000 | .83 |
| Franklin | 23,923,963 | 35,000 | 1.46 |
| Hampden | 124,939,003 | 165,000 | 1.32 |
| Hampshire | 32,165,226 | 50,000 | 1.55 |
| Middlesex | 466,205,179 | 496,000 | 1.06 |

| Worcester | 220,201,780 | 250,000 | 1.13 |

County Debt.

"The debts of the various counties are as follows: Barnstable, $8000; Berkshire, $156,000; Bristol, $445,000; Dukes, $8000; Essex, $160,000; Franklin, $36,500; Hampden, $302,000; Hampshire, $82,000; Middlesex, $490,000; Norfolk, $120,000; Plymouth, $110,000; Worcester, $125,000.

"I would be glad," said Mr. Morrell, in conclusion, "if the limits of this interview would allow me to quote a letter published two weeks ago by Mr. James L. Little in the Brookline Chronicle, commending the new Court House in the strongest terms. This letter was quite unsolicited, and shows the opinion of one of the heaviest taxpayers in the town. I will repeat, however, only one sentence, that in which Mr. Little closes with these words: 'My advice to my fellow townsmen is to go and inspect this building, and see if our money has not been well invested.'"

PARKWAY HEARING.

Quincy Well Represented at the State House Today,

And the City Presents a Good Case For Improvement.

A Brief Report Today But a Longer One Tomorrow.

The LEDGER figured close today upon giving its readers a report of the parkway hearing at the State House, but the fire at the Old Colony depot delayed the 1.15 train which our special messenger was to take and therefore our report today will necessarily be short, but tomorrow will be given at length.

There was a large representative gather- of city officials and prominent citizens, and a good case was presented.

Among those present were: Mayor Adams, President Bryant, Councilmen Sprague, Rice Parker, Field and Nickerson, William N. Eaton, John R. Graham, Herbert T. Whitman, Henry M. Faxon, S. O. Moxon, Henry W. Reed, J. Frank Faxon, W. W. Adams, R. J. Tisdale, Mr. and Mrs. Titus, John F. Merrill, W. A. Hodges, John A. Duggan, Andrew Milne, Rev. D. M. Wilson, George H. Brown, ohn C. Randall, Dr. J. A. Gordon, Dr. J. H. Gilbert, E. H. Dewson, Representatives Thompson, Newcomb and Flint, John Galvin and representatives of the DAILY LEDGER.

Those to speak in favor of the parkway were Mayor Adams, ex-Mayor Hodges, H. T. Whitman, John C. Randall, Mayor Quincy, City Solicitor Bailey, Charles Elliot and Sigourney Butler of Boston.

The opposition came from City Solicitor Barnard of Somerville and Representative Manchester of Winchester.

The opposition from Somerville was that they were constantly contributing for these things but got no benefit while that of Representative Manchester was that he thought this was part of the duty of the Metropolitan Park Commission and it was establishing a bad precedent.

Chairman Lescasle of the Park Commission spoke but not for or against the petition.

The city presented a strong argument and the hearing will be reported in full in Tuesday's LEDGER.

Sunday at Memorial Church.

Rev. Mr. Webster of Neponset preached at the Memorial Congregational church, Atlantic, Sunday morning, having an exchange with the pastor, Rev. Edward Norton. Owing to the inclemency of the weather the attendance was smaller than usual. Mrs. W. F. Cummings sang a solo with the assistance of the choir. The Y. P. S. C. E. meeting in the evening was led by the pastor as was also the evening preaching service. The evening sermon was the first of a series to be given by the pastor on Sunday nights on the "Lord's Prayer," taking for his text "Our Father who art in Heaven." A quartette of young ladies consisting of Misses Moxon, Briggs, Coe and Hall favored with several selections.

C. T. BAKER REPLIES.

He Tells of His Pecuniary Interests in Wollaston Post Office.

Editors of Daily Ledger:

I dislike very much to participate in a newspaper controversy, but as Mr. Thomas J. McGrath, in Friday's LEDGER, has taken the trouble to attack me personally for my position in the Wollaston Post Office matter, and to make so many false statements, and insinuations, which are worse if possible, that I should like a little space in your columns to reply.

He insinuates that "Mr. Baker and his cohorts" have been working in the dark. This will make people who know my usual method of working smile, I imagine. My position and action in the matter have been open and above board from the beginning and open to the inspection of any one who cared to look into the matter. If there has been any concealment it has been on the part of the friends of Mr. Burns.

Let us see. The Wollaston Post Office is an office entirely distinct from the Quincy office and the city committee of Quincy has no more to do with that office than the city committee of Boston. When Mr. Wilde asked me what we were going to do about the appointment of post master I told him I thought the Committee of Ward Five were well satisfied with his conduct of the office and that I did not think they believed in turning out a good official simply to give the place to some one else.

The chairman of the State Central Committee stated to me that if the local committee recommended anyone, he would endorse it. Now the local committee of Wollaston Post Office district is the Ward Five committee and not the whole city committee. I therefore presented the recommendation to the committee and six of them signed it without any urging on my part. Mr. Burns and two other members refused to sign it, and neither of them indicated to me then or since that Mr. Burns was an aspirant for the position. In fact I only heard of it, and then only by rumor, until several days after the recommendation of the six members of the committee had been placed in the hands of Judge Corcoran for his endorsement, and it has been there nearly three weeks waiting for the friends of Mr. Burns to present their case. If there has been any concealment it is not on my side, but would seem to be on the other.

Mr. McGrath should have conferred with Mr. Burns and got the facts before insinuating that there was any attempt at misrepresentation on my part. If one of the six members of the Committee "stated that he acted on the supposition that there was no other candidate in the field," which I very much doubt, he has reaffirmed his first opinion by signing another within a few days and long after the candidacy of Mr. Burns was well known.

The statement that "Mr. Baker has always been hostile toward Mr. Burns" is a statement utterly false and without the least particle of foundation. Another "that Mr. Baker is an intimate friend of Mr. Wilde with all that that may imply" is another false statement. Where did Mr. McGrath get his information or rather did he try to get any? I was never an intimate friend of Mr. Wilde and have always been as much of a friend of Mr. Burns as of Mr. Wilde.

And now Mr. McGrath makes a true statement at last. It is a very small one and hardly deserves mention, but as it evidently indicates the calibre of the one making it, it should receive a little attention. He states "Mr. Baker has also a pecuniary interest in his retention, which may not unreasonably be taken as his chief reason (ye gods and little fishes:) in that his son is at present employed in the post office." My son is a student at Adams Academy, and against my wishes, as I thought it might interfere with his studies, he assists in the post office certain hours in the day. How many I don't know, and what his compensation is I haven't the slightest idea. It is his own affair and so long as it does not interfere with his school work he may keep on. As he finishes at Adams this summer. It will make no difference to him who is post master as he will be out of it then if not before. This is my "pecuniary interest" in the matter. I had no idea that Quincy had anything in the line of peanut politician quite so small as this, but perhaps it is only others striking through him.

In closing Mr. McGrath says "Mr. Baker need make no threats," etc., another false insinuation to gain sympathy evidently. I have made no threat of any kind whatever. Mr. McGrath seems to have got the the correspondent of the LEDGER and myself mixed. The statement of that correspondent, that if Mr. Burns was nominated this committee would prevent his confirmation, has no foundation. We have no idea of interfering in that part of it, and it surely would avail nothing with a Republican Senate if we had. In fact all the "threats" and "fighting" has been done by Mr. McGrath and his "cohorts," if he will allow me to use his expression.

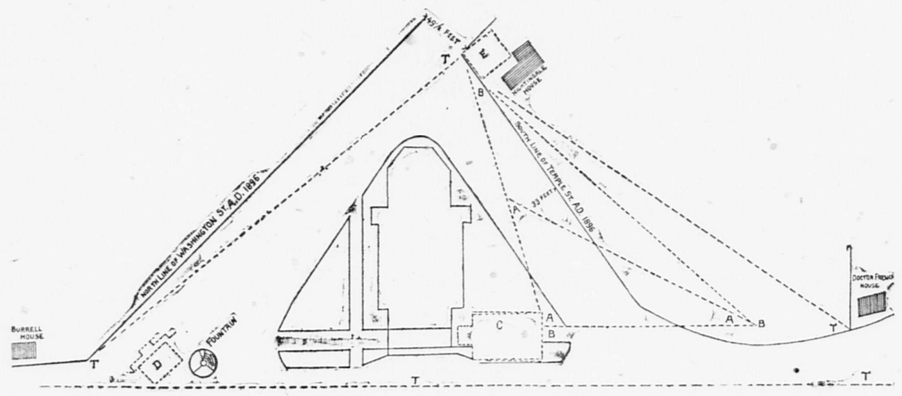

If he and some others desire to restore "harmony" in the Democratic party of Quincy they are going to work the wrong way by attacking and questioning the Democracy of those who were Democrats before he was born almost, because they do not think as he does, that "to the victors belong the spoils," and "put none but Democrats on guard" without regard to qualification. The Quincy Historical society held an important meeting Saturday afternoon at its rooms in the Adams building. Fifteen new members were admitted and Mr. Edwin W. Marsh was appointed to write a memoir of George L. Gill.

The following letter from Hon. Charles Francis Adams to Librarian Spear was read:

Jan. 31, 1896.

My Dear Sir:

Referring to our conversation of two days since, I would say that it seems to me proper, as it would be interesting, that some simple monument such as you suggest, in memory of Abigail Adams, should be placed on top of Paynes hill.

A cairn of rough stone, like that erected by Mrs. Titus to commemorate the landing of Miles Standish at Squantum, would best answer the purpose. It should also contain a tablet with a brief inscription. This portion of the monument I shall be happy to supply as my contribution. The monument would be interesting, as it would indicate the spot from which Mrs. Adams and her young son, John Quincy, then a boy of less than eight, watched the smoke and listened to the guns of the battle of Bunker Hill on the 17th of June, 1775. You will find a reference to it in my "Three Episodes of Massachusetts History."

The incident was one which made impression on the mind of J. Q. Adams, and to it he subsequently made frequent and feeling reference.

A proper memorial of that incident would, therefore, hardly be otherwise than interesting.

Believe me, etc.,

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS.

W. G. SPEAR, ESQ.

The society voted to build the cairn, the date to be decided upon later.

Abigail Adams was the wife of John Adams, the second president of the United States. She was the second of three daughters of Rev. William Smith, the settled minister for more than 40 years of the Congregational church at Weymouth. She was born in Weymouth Nov. 11, 1744, O. S. The advantages of acquiring an education during that period were few and owing to her delicate health she did not enjoy those few opportunities, and the knowledge gained by her was rather the result of the society into which she was thrown than of any elaborate instruction.

October 25, 1764, then nearing her twentieth year she married John Adams and for the ten years following this union she passed a quiet and happy life, having her residence in Boston or Braintree.

During the second ten years of her married life she was left much alone with her children, her husband being absent upon public duties. In June, 1784, she sailed for London to join her husband, then the American Ambassador to the Court of St. James, and she was the first representative of her sex from the United States at the Court of Great Britain.

At the expiration of President Adams term of office she returned to Quincy (which had been set off from Braintree) and from 1801 to the day of her death October 28, 1818 she remained uninterrupted in Quincy, retaining her faculties to the last.

At the conclusion of the meeting, the society adjourned to the First church chapel, to listen to a paper by Mr. Elward H. Dewson, entitled "The history of Hancock street and the Training Field, past and present, covering a period of 257 years."

Hon. J. White Belcher of Randolph presided at the chapel gathering and introduced Mr. Dewson who occupied nearly one and one-half hours in the reading. It was a very interesting paper and was listened to with interest by the large number present. It will be published in the PATRIOT from week to week.

THE ARK SAVED.

Old Colony Depot, Boston, Threatened With Destruction.

Shortly after ten o'clock this morning the DAILY LEDGER received and bulletined the news that the Old Colony depot in Boston was on fire and threatened with destruction. Four alarms were given and for awhile it looked as though the element of fire was to remove the old ark and surrounding buildings and make room for the grand new union station.

The fire started in the freight department or office occupied by the New York and Boston Despatch Express company, and originated from an explosion. The train shed, it will be remembered, was in two parts—the older near the depot proper and the new further out. The new shed was destroyed and also the roof of the old, and a few cars were burned or damaged.

All outward trains were discontinued for two hours and the first of the afternoon the South Boston station was being used as a terminus for both outward and inward trains.

News of the Boston fire and a mixed false alarm in Quincy, caused considerable excitement in this city. The central fire station apparatus run to Atlantic for nothing. With the bad travelling and bitter cold it was a hardship on firemen and horses. But our firemen take no chances and are to be commended for responding at all times and not allowing the doubt to rest on the wrong side.

LOOKS LIKE A FIZZLE.

Maher's Backer Claims His Man Is In No Condition to Fight at Present.

EL PASO, Tex., Feb. 17.—There will be no fight today. That much is certain, no matter what comes later in the week. All of the small fights have been declared off. Maher's eyes are still improving, but he is in no condition to enter the ring.

"Buck" Connolly came in from the Maher camp at Las Cruces yesterday to attend the conference arranged between Julian and himself. His train was late, however, and Julian, in common with about everybody else, was at the bull fight at Juarez. Late in the day Connelly met him and asked him to agree to a postponement until Friday. Julian would agree to nothing.

"Maher simply cannot fight Monday," said Connolly, "his eyes are better, but he is not able to endure a strong light, let alone the glare of the sun. I told Julian it would be of no use for him to claim a forfeit, for if he attempted it, I would have Peter at the ringside and prevent him from getting the money. He cannot get any forfeit if Maher appears at the ringside.

"The articles say the forfeit can only be claimed if one of the men fails to appear. They do not say that a man must fight in order to prevent the payment of the forfeit. If I have my man at the ringside there is no show for Julian to get any forfeit, and I tell you he will not get it. We will take Maher to the ringside, blind as he is, and then refuse to fight if Julian insists on claiming forfeit. He will have appeared at the ringside and fulfilled all conditions for the violation of which any forfeit can be claimed. What good is it going to do Julian to claim anything?"

Russia's Underhanded Move.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—The Times prints a dispatch from Kobe today, which says: News from Seoul, Korea, proves that Russia made a remarkable coup on the night of Feb. 10. On that night 200 Russian marines, with a field gun, were landed at Chemulpo and marched to Seoul. The king secretly left the palace for the Russian legation, whence he proclaimed his ministers guilty of treason. Two of the ministers were arrested and executed, and the others fled. The father of the king is a prisoner at the legation. It is reported that the Russian minister declares that Russia was not responsible, and that he merely afforded protection at the king's request. But it is believed that this preludes a Russian protectorate over Korea.

Smuggling Scheme Unearthed.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 17.—As a result of the arrest of Captain Loesewitz of the steamer Rhynland, for the alleged smuggling of a package containing about $10,000 worth of diamonds, and his subsequent detention under $3000 bail for court, what is thought to be one of the most gigantic diamond smuggling schemes ever in existence is about to be unearthed. Herman Keck of Cincinnati, the head of the largest diamond cutting and dealing establishment in this country, has been arrested and held in $3000 bail, charged with being concerned in the smuggling.

'Frisco's Scandal Case.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 17.—Mrs. Mary A. Davidson was arraigned in the superior court Saturday, charged with extorting $500 from Rev. C. O. Brown, pastor of the First Congregational church. The defendant moved for a dismissal of the case, alleging irregularity in the information. The motion was taken under advisement until next Friday. If overruled, the case will then be set for trial. In the meantime, Dr. Brown will be tried by the Congregational council for his alleged acts of immorality.

Queen Victoria's Bereavement.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—A message from the queen to the nation was issued last evening. In it her majesty expresses her thanks for the sympathy extended to her on the occasion of the death of her son-in-law, Prince Henry of Battenburg, and says: "This new sorrow is overwhelming. I lose a dear, loved and helpful son, whose presence was like a bright sunbeam in my home, and my daughter loses a noble and devoted husband, to whom she was united by the closest affection."

It Gives Us Pleasure to Publish the following Announcement.

All women suffering from any form of illness peculiar to their sex are requested to communicate promptly with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women only.

A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established the eternal confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America. This confidence has induced more than 100,000 women to write Mrs. Pinkham for advice during the last few months.

Think what a volume of experience she has to draw from! No physician living ever treated so many cases of female ills, and from this vast experience surely it is more than possible she has gained the very knowledge that will help your case.

She is glad to have you write or call upon her. You will find her a woman full of sympathy, with a great desire to assist those who are sick. If her medicine is not what you need, she will frankly tell you so, and there are nine chances out of ten that she will tell you exactly what to do for relief. She asks nothing in return except your good will, and her advice has relieved thousands.

Surely, any ailing woman, rich or poor, is very foolish if she does not take advantage of this generous offer of assistance.

Never in the history of medicine has the demand for one particular remedy for female diseases equalled that attained by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and never in the history of Mrs. Pinkham's wonderful Compound has the demand for it been so great as it is to-day.

Iron's Good Showing.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 17.—The influence of the tremendous revival of activity in the iron industry during the last half of 1895 manifested itself very strikingly in the commerce of Baltimore, for the imports of iron at this port, which fell to 66,055 tons in 1894—the lowest point reached in a generation—increased to 217,376 tons last year.

NATION'S LAWMAKERS.

A Great Deal of Important Business For Both Branches.

Foreign Affairs Stand Chance of Lively Discussions.

Ambassador Bayard's Case and Cuban Recognition Scheduled For Consideration.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—The prospects are for a busy week in the senate, but outside of the Monroe doctrine and the appropriations bills no definite forecast of the proceedings can be given.

Senator Davis' speech is expected to be a strong and logical expression of the views of the more advanced advocates of the Monroe doctrine.

There are three of the appropriations bills on the senate calendar, but it is not believed that any of them, unless it be the consular and diplomatic bill, will arouse any prolonged debate. This bill affords an opportunity to discuss foreign affairs generally, and it is very rarely allowed to pass without senators availing themselves of this opening to discuss diplomatic questions. It is also possible that the pension bill will be taken advantage of to discuss the question at some length.

The military academy bill will be the first of the series to be taken up.

The Cuban resolution has been given the place of precedence after the appropriations bills, but it is not yet certain that this subject will be taken up seriously until the senators who may wish to speak upon it shall have opportunity to prepare themselves. Senator Call will speak on the subject if he succeeds in getting it up, and possibly one or two other senators will be heard.

The senate committees have been unusually active since the holidays, with the consequence that there is an accumulation of business sufficient to cover 27 pages of the calendar, embracing subjects in which all the senators are interested. There is, therefore, a general desire to get to work on the calendar, and the probabilities are that with the appropriations out of the way the calendar will be resorted to and a large number of bills of minor importance acted upon.

There continues to be more or less discussion of a private nature among senators as to the probabilities of getting up the tariff bill in some form, but this depends almost wholly upon whether the friends of the bill can obtain assurance of success in whatever move they make.

The reports of both the majority and the minority of the committee of privileges and elections on the Dupont case, the former favoring the seating of Mr. Dupont as senator from Delaware and the latter opposing that course, will be made to the senate today, but the debate which is sure to occur on this question will be postponed until later in the session.

There is beginning to be a great deal of talk in the senate of an early adjournment. If it is made evident that there will be no tariff legislation, many senators think that an adjournment by June 1 will be possible.

Business Before the House.

Most of the time of the house this week will be taken up with the consideration of appropriations bills. The agricultural bill, which was taken up Saturday, will be disposed of today, unless a prolonged debate should be precipitated on the question of seed distribution by the agricultural department.

The Indian and army appropriation bills are ready, and the appropriation committee expects to have the executive, legislative and judicial bills reported by Wednesday.

The foreign affairs committee will call up the resolution to censure Ambassador Bayard as soon as those in charge of the appropriation bills, which have the right of way, afford an opportunity to do so. This committee is also working on a Cuban resolution, and it may possibly be reported to the house this week. The trend of opinion in the committee favors a resolution expressing it as the sense of congress that a state of war exists in Cuba and requesting the president to issue his proclamation recognizing the insurgents as belligerents.

The report on the contested election case of Van Horn vs. Tarsney, from the Fifth Missouri district, which has been submitted to the house, can be called up by the committee at any time, as it is a matter of higher privilege than an appropriation bill. The report is in favor of the contestant, but a minority report will be filed tomorrow, recommending that the case be recommitted and the testimony reopened.

Cathode Rays' Rival.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 17.—J. F. Eline, electrician of this city, who formerly worked with Edison in the latter's laboratory, has demonstrated that the ordinary calcium light, known better to scientists as the Drummond or lime light, would produce results similar to the cathode rays. In the first experiment Mr. Eline tried with calcium light he focused the rays through a board one-eighth of an inch thick and through an ordinary photographer's plate made of a paper composition, which is entirely unaffected by ordinary rays of light.

President Cleveland Consents.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—The president has consented to serve as arbitrator between Italy and Brazil in the settlement of certain questions that have been pending for several years, growing out of the claims of Italians for indemnity for ill-treatment at Rio during the Brazilian rebellion. The arbitration is to include all questions that remain open between the countries after the expiration of the next two months.

Plunger Grannan Broke.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 17.—A local paper prints a story to the effect that Riley Grannan, the young plunger, has lost $100,000 since he came to California this winter, and has gone broke. Grannan, who was formerly followed about the betting ring by big crowds who followed his plays, is now regarded as a "Jonah," and his plays are "coppered."

Double Shooting Tragedy.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 17.—Barbara Kossel, a German girl, about 19 years old, shot and killed John Rohlfing, her lover, and then with the same weapon, a cheap revolver of 32 caliber, fired a bullet into her own brain, dying instantly.

DAMAGING TESTIMONY

Against the Prisoners Held For the Murder of Pearl Bryan.

Walling Fully Identified by a Colored Driver.

Picked Out of a Crowd as the Man Who Rode With Him That Fateful Night.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 17.—The murder of Pearl Bryan has been intensified by the astounding developments made Saturday night. No outbreak is anticipated, and a successful one here would be out of the question with the present efficiency of the police and the military. While the feeling is of the explosive sort, the external restraint is sufficient to prevent an explosion.

It is now probable that the prisoners, Jackson and Walling, will be taken to the Covington jail, which is very strong and also well situated to resist a siege. The jail in Newport is weak. The detectives have a clew to the surrey that was employed to carry the murderers and their victim to the scene of the slaughter. They think they have found the surrey on Walnut hills, and they are trying to identify it.

The special circumstance that gives weight to the testimony of George H. Jackson, the negro who drove the surrey to Fort Thomas, is the high name he bears among all his employers. Mr. Rebstock, a liveryman for whom he worked four years, says: "He is the best, truest, all-around negro I ever knew. I would trust him with anything."

Major Widdekind of Mount Auburn, the negro's present employer, says: "George H. Jackson is highly intelligent, very reticent, has no habits, never drinks liquor or uses tobacco, is competent, trustworthy and efficient as an employe, and is an active member of Zion Colored Baptist church. He take two daily papers, and is a man of more than ordinary intelligence. I have the most complete confidence in his veracity and integrity."

Another circumstance in his favor is that there is an offer of a reward of $500 for the discovery of the cab driver. Jackson has not made any claim for this reward, nor has he even spoken of it.

What a Search Revealed.

In his statement, he said he found that in the surrey, instead of a round hitching weight, a piece of railroad rail about a foot long, while waiting for the return of the two men who had gone away with the girl at the place of the murder. It had two holes through it. A leather strap was fastened to one of these holes. That he used for a hitching weight, and then ran away as fast as he could run until he was home.

Right here is a point in the chain of circumstances. It was just precisely such a piece of railroad iron that was wrapped up in Jackson's bloody coat when it was fished out of a sewer catch-basin several days ago. What emphasizes this evidence is the fact that his coat being wrapped around a piece of railroad iron has never been mentioned in the newspapers.

Another circumstance that supports Jackson's story that the conveyance used was a surrey, and that he abandoned it in fright on that tragic night, is the fact that a gentleman of Newport, driving toward Fort Thomas in a buggy on that Saturday morning about 3 o'clock, met a surrey, drawn by a gray horse with two men on the front seat, and collided with it. He got out, and the men in the surrey drove on toward Newport at a furious rate. This man's name is not given, but he will be on hand when required as a witness for the government.

To clinch the matter, a procession of carriages containing policemen and reporters started at 12:45 to Fort Thomas Saturday night. George H. Jackson drove the leading carriage. The procession struck the murderers route at Vine and Third streets, and with Jackson for a guide, followed it to the bloody ground. A halt was made at the Newport toll-bridge to seek another link in the chain that binds these men to the guilt of Pearl Bryan's murder. Toll Collector Tarvin said he remembered the surrey driven by a colored man passing over the bridge about 1 o'clock on the morning of Feb. 1. It contained a man and a woman, and there was a white man with the negro driver on the seat.

Straightforward Testimony.

The procession was led by Jackson through unfrequented back streets in Newport, and by a long, circuitous route of mud roads in the darkness under a cloudy sky, and finally into the Alexandria pike near Fort Thomas. After driving a short distance, Jackson stopped just where a blind lane set out from the road and stopped. "Here," said he, "is where they took the lady out, telling me to turn the carriage around and wait." George H. Jackson has not been to the scene of the murder since it was committed. Where he stopped in the darkness was about 200 yards from the spot where Pearl Bryan was found dead on the morning of Feb. 1.

The examination of the 20 or 30 men in a semi-circle at the jail by the colored man Jackson was dramatic in the extreme. Walling stood near one extremity of the arc. The negro Jackson began his inspection at Walling's end of the line. He examined every one, man by man, till he got to the end of the line. Then he turned, walked briskly back and halted in front of Walling. All this time he had not spoken a word. Viewing Walling all around like a man examining a horse he was about to buy, he stopped in front of him and said: "That is the man who sat on the seat with me."

Jackson was identified as to size and partially as to the sound of his voice. The negro's extreme caution gives force to his evidence. He said: "I do not want to make any mistake," and then he took his time in making his examination. Jackson, when the thing was over, talked flippantly to his visitors. To one he said: "Call the jailer and ask him if he found a surrey in my pockets when he searched me." He tries to ridicule the multitude of clews that are followed. Walling is more sullen and reticent. He denounces the negro's statement as a lie.

Full Extent of the Shocking Disaster Not Yet Accurately Known.

TROY, N. Y., Feb. 18.—About 300 girls were at work yesterday afternoon in the shirt waist factory of J. Stetheimer & Co., and the collar establishment of Van Zandt & Jacobs on River street, when fire broke out, spreading so rapidly that the narrow stairway which was the only exit outside of the fire-escapes in the rear was almost immediately cut off, and during the panic that followed, five girls jumped from the windows, three of them to their death, and many others were injured. One was caught in a net by the firemen. Three were killed by the fall.

The fire started in the fifth story in the part occupied by Stetheimer & Co. at about 5:30, when a little boy who lighted the gas climbed up on a table for the purpose, and then threw the burning match to the floor, where it ignited a pile of scrap cambric.

From the outside of the high building the first notice of impending disaster was the sight of a body of girls as they rushed out upon the fire-escapes from the windows, those who were more fortunate crowding out the entrance. Following them and wrapped about them was a mass of smoke with flashes of hot flame.

Then the mass of frenzied humanity, finding the egresses too small for instant escape, began climbing over the sides of the escapes, and bundles of clothing, filled with writhing humanity, dropped at the feet of the horrified passers-by. Within 20 minutes after the fire started, there were three dead women laid upon the floor of an adjoining store, and at least a dozen burned and maimed girls and women taken to the hospital or to their homes.

It was just 30 minutes before closing hour in Stettheimers & Co.'s shirt-waist factory on River street, and the 350 girls and women were working rapidly to finish up. In the cutting-room on the fifth floor the 150 girls were closing up their day's assignments and preparing to leave when the whistle blew. Lillie Krelger, who was working near a machine, called to a small boy to light the gas over her work. The boy struck a match and threw the burning stub to the floor. It struck a pile of oily rags, and in an instant the girl was enveloped in flames.

With her clothes and hair burning, she rushed to the window, and in an instant the room became a struggling, shrieking mass of humanity, filling the windows, the fire-escapes and the only stairway. Jamming and pushing, tearing each other's clothes from their backs, turning in narrow corridors to find a sister, or mother, or friend, the number in the exits augmented every minute by those from the other floors, these girls and women fought for their lives to get away from the fiery flames that seemed to grow to monstrous size.

Policeman Farrell, who was on the street, seeing that in the panic a number were liable to jump, let down the awning over the entrance. Barely was it down when two or three forms came flying down from the fifth and sixth stories, and, bouncing from the awning, fell to the sidewalk. Lillie Kreiger, over whose machine the fire started, was one of these. She struck the awning, fell on her back and bounced to her hands and knees on the sidewalk. She got up and staggered about until people helped her to her feet again.

A Terrible Scene.

By this time nearly every window had a female form dangling from it, and when the firemen arrived there was a hustle to get the ladders up. At the center window on the sixth floor a woman hanging by her hands was forced out by the flames licking her face. With a last shriek she let go and came tumbling over and over until she struck the pavement. When picked up it was found that she was Mrs. Herberscher. Her spinal column was forced through into her brain.

Just below her on another window hung a woman turning appealing glances to the crowd. The black smoke was pouring from the window, but as yet no flames were visible, and the crowd yelled encouragingly to her to hold on, but a higher red flame reached out just then and licked her face, and in an instant her body was rebounding from the pavement. She was Mrs. Foley, a widow, and when picked she was dead.

On the same floor, hanging from another window, was a woman, and salvation in the shape of a ladder was almost within her grasp when her strength failed, and she went whirling down to death. She was Mrs. Kane.

The firemen and policemen worked like heroes, and to their energy was due a great saving of life. At least a dozen women and girls were carried down the ladders or dragged out of the corridors, the officers and firemen going into the midst of the flames.

The fire burned so fiercely by this time no detailed search of the building could be made, and from what can be learned there were many girls and women on the three upper stories, either lying in fainting fits or else overcome by smoke. It was this fact that led to the rumors that there were at least 20 women dead, and the story even now does not seem improbable.

Quick Work of Flames.

The flames ate down through three floors so quickly that the Western Union Telegraph company, Jessup & Coopener, crockery company; Van Zandt & Jacobs, collar manufactory, had no time to save anything. One hour after the fire started small buildings on the south caught. About 8 o'clock the firemen heard shrieks coming from the two-story building on the south. They discovered an Italian peddler named Joseph Rossl, who kept a stand in front of the building, pinioned by the legs under a heavy beam.

Three policemen started to assist him, and with a fireman worked for three-quarters of an hour. They had just about gotten him loose when, with a roar, the great south walls came crashing down, and the horrified spectators saw the brave little group buried from view. When the smoke and dust had cleared, there was a rush of willing workers, and in a little while the men were taken out. All were injured and had to be removed to the hospital. The Italian will probably die, but the policemen, while badly hurt, will recover.

Superintendent Willard of the police force says that he saw a number of girls at windows who never came out, but fell back into the flames.

One fireman, who was working from the rear, saw three girls with their arms wound tightly about each other, turn in their frenzy and jump back into the flames. Some of the women who escaped tell of stumbling over prostrate bodies, and are positive that a score of girls perished. The girls who did escape live in various suburban places, and hurried away, so that until the roll is called, the exact number of missing will not be known.

Lottie and Nellie Hull, sisters, grasped each other tightly by the hands and started down the stairs from the sixth story. At the landing of the fifth floor they encountered a wall of flame and smoke. Nellie had on only her corsets and skirt, having been making her toilet. Lottie, who was only partially dressed, threw her dress over Nellie's face, and together they went through the flames. Lottie's hair was burned completely off when she reached the sidewalk, but Nellie was burned only about her bare arms.

Superintendent of Police Willard says: "The returns from the various precincts show that there are at least 15 people missing, and with the five already known to be missing will make 20 lost in the ruins. I imagine that there are many more, for it seems to me impossible that all the people in that building should escape. A great many people would not report to the police at all."

The total loss by the fire is from $250,000 to $300,000, with about $100,000 insurance. At least 500 people are thrown out of employment. The firemen worked with the thermometer down below zero, and suffered very much.

The coroners were summoned and a jury were impanelled to care for the dead.

Nearly all the glass eyes used in the world are made in Thuringia, Germany.

THE PARKWAY HEARING.

Quincy Enthusiastic for Improvement—But Little Opposition to the Petition.

A parkway or boulevard from Boston through Quincy along the shore front to the Blue Hills Reservations seems almost an assured fact. Seldom has this city pleaded a cause so ably at the State House, and it is a pleasure to note the hearty co-operation of Boston in the movement. The arguments pro and con at the hearing Monday are reported at length below.

Mayor Adams was the first to speak for the bill, which he said was to secure the sea front along Quincy bay for public uses The sea front should be for the public. More and more is this land being taken by private persons. The chance which this gives the public to enjoy itself is a sufficient argument in its favor and the south side of Boston had as much reason to protect its sea front as the north side. This parkway will connect the system of parks in Boston and make them accessible to the people. A parkway was necessary in this case as many were willing to give their land if it was built. If we wait a few years it will be impossible to get land on these terms, as it will be held by small holders. The land damages at the outside would not exceed $75,000 and the estimated cost of construction was $185,000. Add to this $30,000 for the marsh flats and we have a total cost of $290,000,and if a bridge is built across Neponset river it would mean $115,000 more which would make the total cost $405,000.

Herbert T. Whitman said he had been over all the land during the past two weeks and had seen all the land owners. The route was an economical and a perfectly feasible one. About two miles of it was over existing ways which it would be only necessary to widen. We have planned for 75 feet wide which, includes two sidewalks, where it follows the low lands and in these places along the shore we propose a sidewalk on one side with screen gravel top. We shall have about 4 4-10 miles of shore front, and a large percentage of this will be given. The land damage to a large extent will be in West Quincy where the holdings were small. In estimating the cost of land damage he had placed it at the highest estimate. There were no engineering difficulties to overcome.

Charles Elliot, a former civil engineer for the Metropolitan Park Commission, said he had examined the line but had no knowledge of land damages. Mr. Whitman's estimate of $25,000 per mile was correct. If a pleasant drive is desired, no better location could be found as it connects the old highway with the shore front and follows a stream from Merrymount Park to the Reservation. There were no railroads to cross at grade. There are two or three brook mouths to cross but they can be covered. He did not appear as a party advocate and would remind the committee that the original Metropolitan Commission mapped out a scheme on which he made a report that $5,000,000 could be well spent in Reservations and it would be of great advantage to purchase shore fronts, rocky hills and river banks. A river bank and shore front was not a park. They are the most economical places in which the Metropolitan Commission could invest its money, and from which the largest return in public enjoyment can be obtained.

J. Malcolm Forbes of the committee asked if it had ever been anticipated to take the large marsh at Crescent avenue. Mr. Elliot answered that he thought it was suggested by the Boston Park Commission.

Boston's Mayor Favors.

Mayor Quincy said he had been familiar for many years with the locality it was proposed to take. On the whole the City of Boston would derive a benefit from the carrying out this parkway. It would balance the amount provided for the north side at Revere beach. It was very desirable that the river banks should be preserved. Reservations of this character were very different from parks, as their natural wild character was their attraction and did not therefore demand the future expenditures as it does for parks. This locality is admirably adapted to a parkway of this character as it connects property of the city of Boston and Moon Island and forms an avenue which certainly makes one of the most attractive drives in the vicinity of Boston. In order to make the moon head proper accessible it needs just this parkway. There was no question but the city of Boston would derive a great benefit from it and as a connecting link from Franklin Park to the shore and Metropolitan reservation it would be a very desirable addition to the park system. Merry Mount park was one of the finest natural parks in the district, and the connecting by this driveway adds materially to the park system about Boston. Having got as far as Merry Mount Park, it is highly desirable to put in the remaining and connect the public reservation at Blue Hills. If it can be carried out at the estimated expense the city of Boston will be amply repaid for the amount it expends.

Ex-Mayor Hodges thought the ground had been well gone over. He was familiar with the proposed route and was in sympathy with it and could endorse all that had been said on the subject.

William H. Glennon endeavored to talk on the parkway from Braintree to Boston but was informed that matter was not under discussion.

Mr. Barnard, City Solicitor of Somerville appeared as

A Remonstant.

The bill was to build a parkway at an expense of not less than $400,000 the larger part of which was within the city of Quincy, which means including interest $800,000 to be paid out of the pockets of the taxpayers. Of this amount Somerville would have to pay $22,000. Now here is a boulevard to which the towns of the north shore will have no use but will have to bear part of the expense. These towns bore the expense in the past, not one cent of which was for the benefit of them. The only possible advantage we have is that by driving two miles we can reach this Middlesex Fells. He did not think it fair or just. He did not understand that Quincy offered to pay one single dollar for this magnificent boulevard. Places which will never see it are expected to come in and pay their share. If we are all to have a boulevard it will be different. The expense on the south has been far in excess of the north side. It was unfair to take up this Metropolitan Park matter in a fragmentary way. The whole system should be developed on paper and then brought in. You are spending our money while we have not one word to say how it shall be expended or in the selection of the Commission which is to expended it.

Representative Manchester of Winchester spoke against the bill. He said: You must remember you are asking today to establish a precedent that will revolutionize the past. When the Metropolitan Commission was appointed it was to devise a scheme for the whole district. They have employed careful and scientific men but have not given us a map connecting the various parks as they have not it completed as yet. Then how unfair to come here in a one-sided way and ask for this parkway. You have a commission who should be impartial and when you take this away from them, to be pulled and hauled, you are establishing a precedent that will destroy the whole system of the Metropolitan Commission.

Chairman Lescasle of the Metropolitan Commissions said there never was any general scheme to construct boulevards. It is entirely a new matter as relates to park. We have only considered this, that we should acquire the best river bank in the district. The Commission did not feel itself sufficiently informed in detail to say this particular case should be adopted. The money we had has been apportioned to the boulevard on the north side. The Commission has no plan for a general system of boulevards except in their individual minds. Of the $590,000 appropriated a larger part has been apportioned to the north than the south.

City Solicitor Bailey of Boston said the city of Boston favored the bill as it made a direct communication from Franklin Park to the Blue Hill Reservation. It should be advantageous for Somerville for if they can not get what they want they should perfect their system as Quincy had done and come here and ask for it. He thought Quincy adopted the right course to see that its water fronts should be taken and have devised the best method, and also relieved the commission. He did not believe there could be the slightest opposition to the bill. He questioned if Somerville should present a petition anyone could oppose. Having secured the reservation is not the great general work for each locality to look out for itself? It is right in the line of what we have already done, only in this case we have a guarantee that it is desirable to the city. The money you are appropriating in this way is for the building of streets and all you are doing here is the building of streets.

Sigourney Butler was the last gentleman to be heard. He said the opposition is entirely on general grounds, out of the growth of the Metropolitan system. Quincy has so far received nothing except to pay its share. On the other hand over $5000 of its taxable property had been taken from it. When Somerville brings in one one hundredth part of the argument this section has, then Quincy will come here as freely and help them out as Somerville comes here today to oppose it. Because Somerville has had to pay too much it does not alter the argument. The General Court has made appropriations for Charlesbank and Revere beach, and these are the precedents we want to follow. In 1893 the Metropolitan Commission marked out a whole scheme of which this is only a part. You have taken the rocky hills but what have we done for the water ways? With this you get nearly 4 miles of shore front. Eighty-six acres out of the 300 are offered for nothing. You may spend money enough to drown the whole Park Commission but you have only one shore. This $405,000 covers a park boulevard of nearly 10 miles. It goes around one of the most historic spots in the State. Here are the "Massachusetts fields" from which the State was named, also Squantum hill where Myles Standish landed. Here we come and make the promise of this valuable property. They do not want flower beds, statues or fountains; they are simple country folk and they never did anything freer than now. We have been told Quincy has contributed nothing. It makes no difference whether it is the city or the individual, the contribution is made. The Metropolitan Park Commission was asked to give them a hearing but did not and if their report of 1893 amounts to anything, they have considered it. We ask you if there is any doubt in your minds to take a view of those premises at the

"HANDS OFF."

Wollaston for Wollastonians—Able to Take Care of Its Own Affairs.

To the Editors of the Ledger:

I have read with interest the letter of Thomas J. McGrath of the Democratic City Committee, a resident of Quincy, in Friday's LEDGER, upon what he knows about the wishes of the inhabitants of Wollaston in regard to their choice of postmaster, "and who is conversant with the whole matter," in answer to an article upon that subject in Thursday's LEDGER.

Although admiring Mr. McGrath's great perspicuity and authority upon things political in Wollaston, I beg to differ with him upon a few points which he alluded to in his letter.

1. I wrote the article in question, having had charge of the Wollaston news of the LEDGER and PATRIOT for seven years.

2. Neither Charles F. Wilde, Martin F. Burns, Charles T. Baker or Watson H. Brasee saw the article before it was published, or had anything to do with its publication, or in any way, shape or manner inspired it.

3. The article was written up and used as a matter of news just as any other news article would be.

4. There was not a line in it which intended to reflect upon Mr. Burns. Mr. and Mrs. Burns are neighbors of mine and are people in whom I have the greatest confidence and respect.

5. Postmaster Wilde did not resign from the Republican Ward and City Committee to accept the postmastership. He served upon that Committee in 1889 and has not been a member of it since nor has he taken an active part in politics.

6. Postmaster Bass served two years under President Harrison and four years under President Cleveland.

7. I did not say that Mr. Wilde was "backed by the whole Democratic committee" as you intimate, what I did say was that "it represents the odd spectacle of the Democratic party in that place as represented by six members of the Democratic Ward and City Committee, out of a total membership of nine," etc.

With all due respect to Mr. McGrath's political influence, I ask him, a residence of Quincy, what business it is of his as to whom shall be appointed postmaster of Wollaston?

It seems to me that Wollaston is fully competent to settle her own postoffice difficulty without the intervention of outsiders. What would Mr. McGrath think if Wollaston should have the audacity to attempt to dictate to Quincy as to whom should be her postmaster, or to West Quincy as to what manner of a man should carry about her mail. There would be a howl go up at Wollaston's presumption that would cast any political fight which has ever taken place in this city into the shade.

When Wollaston is unable to take care of her own affairs then it will be time for Mr. McGrath and his friends to lend their good offices to assist run the place, appoint the postmaster, etc.

Until then it is "hands off" to outsiders. Wollaston for Wollastonians!

The rest of Mr. McGrath's letter is so full of false allegations, insinuations and mud slinging at citizens of Wollaston that it is a waste of time, as well as of space, to answer it. Its falsity is its own answer.

The Cemetery Board.

The Board of Managers of Public Burial Places held an adjourned meeting at City Hall, Monday evening. The meeting was called to complete the organization of the board, but the rumor that some member was likely to resign rather threw cold water on the meeting, as each was waiting to see who the member was that was to resign, and they therefore sat and looked at each other all the evening and indulged in a kind of smoke talk, the only vote passed being that Mr. Elijah G. Hall should act as clerk of the board until a permanent clerk was elected. The next meeting of the board will be held two weeks hence.

THE CITY COUNCIL.

Councilman Sprague Criticises Course of School Committee.

Charges Them With Favoritism for S. O. Moxon.

And That the Ex-Councilman Adopted Ideas of Others.

All is not harmony with this years Council on the proposed schoolhouses and it is possible that the much needed buildings will be further delayed. Certainly not much progress has yet been made, and there were dissension at the meeting Monday evening.

Councilmen Barker, Cleaves, Geary and Rinn were the absentees.

Communications.

The Mayor forwarded the petition of Henry Talbot for soldier's relief. To Committee on State Aid.

The Mayor forwarded the following appointments which were confirmed:

Weighers of Coal,—Herbert D. Adams, William W. Cushing, E. Frank Mitchell, George P. Mead, Frank S. Patch, Eben W. Sheppard, Frank W. Crane and George B. Pray.

Measurers of Grain,—Frank W. Crane and Charles H. Hersey.

Pound Keeper,—Franklin Jacobs.

Councilman Lamb presented a petition of West Quincy citizens asking for an appropriation of $1,000 for the draining of Cross street between Crescent street and Reardon's field. To Committee on Streets.

Councilman Russell presented a petition dated Dec. 23, 1895, calling attention to the muddy condition of Centre and Columbia streets. To Executive Department.

Petitions were received from Paul Revere Post G. A. R. for license to use Hancock hall for entertainments and from J. F. Costello for license to run four bowling alleys. To Committee on Licenses.

The Quincy Quarry Railroad presented a petition for the approval of its plans for a location from South Quincy to the North Common. Laid on the table. Later Councilman Anderson offered an order for a public hearing, March 2, at 8 o'clock, which was adopted.

The N. E. Telephone and Telegraph Co. petitioned for a location of poles on Beale street, Newport, Old Colony and Standish avenues. To Committee on Streets.

Report of Committees.

The Committee on Claims, on petition of Ellen A. Murphy for refund of tax overpaid, reported an order returning to her $11.46. Adopted.

The Committee on Licenses on petition of F. A. Rogers of Arlington street for license to keep four horses, reported leave to withdraw, as such license must come from the Board of Health. Adopted.

The same committee reported order granting F. C. Merrill an innholder's license also a license for a billiard and pool room, and granting C. F. Veazie a job wagon license. Accepted and adopted.

The Committee on State Aid, on petition of James F. Moran, recommended he be paid $6 per week dating from Feb. 1.

Councilman Holt said he had investigated this case and found the petitioner had a wife and two children; he was out of work and unable to do any work. The report was adopted.

The Committee on Finance reported ought to pass on order authorizing the Treasurer to borrow $250,000 in anticipation of taxes. Under suspension of the rules the order was passed to be ordained.

The same committee reported ought to pass an order appropriating $500 to present the city's case for a boulevard before the Legislative committee. Under suspension of the rules the order was passed to be ordained.

The Committee on Printing reported, ought to pass, on order authorizing the printing of the City Book. Under suspension of the rules the order was passed to be ordained.

New Schoolhouses.

At this point President Bryant said he had a communication which had been sent to him, which he had neglected to read but would do so now.

The communication was from the Chairman of the School Committee notifying the Council that it had approved plans of S. O. Moxon for two school buildings.

This brought Councilman Sprague to his feet and he proceeded to score the School Board.

He said he hoped after last year's experience there would be no call for an undue amount of oratory on this question. This year, that there might be no mistake, he had written all those interested in the schoolhouses of last year and had arranged a meeting with the School Board to look at plans. All of the architects were represented at this joint meeting and plans were presented and examined. These were the plans to be decided upon by the School Board. Mr. Moxon presented his plans which called for 8 foot corridors and walls 12 inches thick. I asked him if he considered these dimensions sufficient and he replied that he did. Monday, Feb. 10, a meeting of the School Board was called to approve plans and at this meeting a new set of plans were presented by Mr. Moxon and were accepted. In these plans were features embodied in the plans of other architects. He presented an entirely new set of plans and they accepted them. If Mr. Moxon has a right to present new plans, the other architects should. He considered it unfair and an unjust proceeding and he hoped others would have an opportunity to present new plans. He believed it a wrong proceeding, and he hoped the School Board would be required to further consider plans.

Councilman Badger offered an order appropriating $75,000 for the grading and fencing of land owned by the city at the Rail and Norfolk Downs and for the erection thereon of two brick school buildings according to plans of S. O. Moxon.

Councilman Field moved the order be laid on the table until council had seen plans and know what we are doing. The order committed us to one set of plans.

Councilman Badger said it was essential that these buildings should be ready for occupancy at the opening of the fall term and we have no time to defer, as all of the the contractors say it will require six months to erect these buildings. It has been stated that Mr. Moxon had presented plans he had no right to present. If he could conceive ideas which others did not he had a right to present them, and if the city can gain anything we should accept the plans the School Board has accepted.

Councilman Field could find no authority of the School Board to get up specifications. Do they expect the council to vote away $75,000 without having any voice. They are doing something they have no authority to do. They are simply to approve the plans we present to them. He was not ready to commit himself.

Councilman Rice said if he understood it right this did not originate with the School Committee. At the first inspection of plans Mr. Moxon's were the best. The changing was not until after consulting with the Committee.

Councilman Anderson thought the simplest way to get rid of the matter was to refer it to the Committee on Public Buildings.

Councilman Field's motion to lay it on the table was lost and the order was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings.

Councilman Rice offered an order appropriating $4,000 to regrade Adams street, between Furnace brook and Whitwell street To Committee on Streets.

Adjourned at 8 27.

MONEY BAG PARTY.

Young Ladies in Quaint Gowns—Old Fashioned Candies.

The "Money Bag Party" held Monday night at the parish house of Christ's church was a decided success. The chapel was tastefully decorated and in one corner of the main room, Mrs. Ricker, Miss Wilkins and Miss Brewer sold old fashioned candy and pop-corn.

During the evening a musical programme was rendered as follows:

Chorus, "Banks of Allan Water."

Solo, "Comin' Thro' the Rye," Miss Hastings.

Duet, "Heart and Home," Masters Warren Mitchell and Charlie Taylor.

Solo, Mr. Hersey.

Duet, "Larboard Watch," Mr. Bates and Mr. Hersey.

Solo, "The Bailiff's Daughter of Islington," Miss Hastings.

"John Peel," by Mr. Hersey and chorus.

Solo, "My Pretty Jane," Mr. Bates.

Chorus, "Duncan Gray."

During the intermission old fashioned cake, doughnuts, gingerbread and cookies with tea and coffee were for sale. Miss Flint and Mrs. Brewer presided at the tea-table while the coffee and cake were served by the young ladies of the guilds, and all were quaintly gowned in dresses of our grandmother's day with their hair done high and powdered. There were many striking costumes and we hope our grandmothers looked as pretty as the ladies did on this occasion.

The affair was under the management of Miss Perkins, Miss Wild, and Miss Howe and praises are due these ladies for a very enjoyable time.

ANTITOXIN VERSUS DIPHTHERIA.

Dr. Davis Should not be denounced for Standing by a Principle.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

Having read several articles regarding antitoxin that have appeared in the LEDGER, the one signed "A Parent" determined me to write some items in reply for the benefit of the laity generally. Inasmuch as it is supposed that any physician is already conversant with what I may state while laymen (the public) are not presumed to have had a physician's advantages, in access to testimony and experiments regarding disease and its treatment, whether it be diphtheria and antitoxin or the rejuvination of old men with Brown Sequard Elixir: the annihilation of consumption, by the Zergeon method of the chemist-baker, whom it was claimed cured his wife of that dread disease by "that method, after given up by all the doctors," a favorite expression. The writer well remembers that almost to a unit, the instrument and apparatus makers of this country went to manufacturing the paraphernalia for applying that method of cure. Every physician's office was flooded with literature relative to the method and the apparatus, and I venture the assertion that not one person in one hundred who may possibly scan these lines, has now even a remembrance of what the treatment consisted.

Later came Koch's injection treatment, for the same purpose, but like its predecessor, has gone the way of all the earth, but unlike its predecessor not until it had hastened numberless victims (of misplaced confidence in its landed virtues) into untimely graves. The Brown-Sequard Elixer performed the same service for its enthusiastic votaries, and so I might enumerate, what is well known, by the medical profession, as to these stupendous fakes and fads, that have in the past ran their course, had their demise and are buried, beyond resurrection by any trumpet sound.

Now all of these, each, and every one and others, had the endorsement of very many of most eminent physicians of the day, just as a parent claims is the case with this latest favorite, of the European plan now claiming our attention "antitoxin." Which brings us to our subject. And I want it distinctly undrstood, that what I may say, will be in a spirit of kindness toward all,—this is a subject, that merits having the best there is in us put forth in honest, earnest, painstaking investigations and no jumping at conclusions,—nor should indignation, righteous or otherwise, be a factor in the case either on the affirmative, or negative side of the question. And certainly none of the various articles I have had the pleasure of reading, should cause indignation,—for with this as with every question, both sides have, equal right to state, their evidence, and I feel as though it were superfluous for me to write at all, after the articles written by Dr. Kimball, for he gave a condensed statement of facts, as fully as the length of his articles would allow. They are in accord with my own reading as to the average results obtained with antitoxin.

It is never to my knowledge, as far as I have read, been depended upon alone, in the treatment, but always supplemented, by many other and powerful drugs and in varying proportions, combinations, and doses, according to the pleasure or judgment of the prescriber. Therefore who shall say to which drug, or drugs or combination shall be given the credit, for patients will die under each, and every treatment. Why? Because it is a law of nature, that no two things, no two beings, in this wide universe are created alike. No two individuals are sick with the same disease, in just the same manner, every individual is made ill, by any disease according to his or her own personality as an individual, distinct from every other individual, and what will cure one person or relieve, in a certain disease, or stage of a disease, will not necessarily do so in the same disease, in another person.

Further, a prescription, that has been compounded by the highest medical authority of the world, let alone, the U. S. M. Hospital or C. of B. Hospital, and found to work admirably in a certain epidemic either during that entire epidemic, or the first, or latter half of it, and yet fail entirely in the other portion, and certainly will more than likely (and generally does) prove worthless in combatting an epidemic of same disease in an adjoining town, or certainly an epidemic of same appearing later in the same town.

Doubtless many who may read this, whether physician or layman, will recall such instances, especially in regard to another of our dread diseases, scarlet fever. Further, will "a parent" or any one please inform the public why it is that a disease—scarler fever—for instance, will sweep over a town or city and scarcely one in 10, 20, 50, 100 will die, and hardly any sequelar, certainly anything serious will occur, yet the next visitation will hardly spare 2 in 10, these are facts, as under the former treatment or perchance any other they save, occurred and are occurring from time to time.

Therefore, careful, thinking, reading, physicians are loth to pin their faith on any one remedy as a certain cureall for every case of the same disease for the reasons above stated, via., individual idiosyncrasies and the ever-changing nature of diseases. The former has been well proven by the numberless deaths that have occurred from the use of antitoxin as a prophylactic, to avoid having diphtheria, as vaccination has been done to avoid having small pox, and the world is waking up to the fact that it has not only not protected (as much at least) as has been claimed for it, but that it has certainly been the means of sending hundreds into untimely graves and hundreds and hundreds more to suffer untold miseries, the balance of their lives, to which the perils of small pox are not to be compared.

This communication leads up to the local antitoxin discussion which will be considered tomorrow. C.

Stereoptican Lecture.

The lecture at Hancock hall Thursday evening by Henry G. Peabody under the auspices of the Quincy Yacht club is not a smoke talk but an interesting lecture superbly illustrated with the stereoptican. The lecturer takes one up Boston Harbor, by Minots light, and Nantasket beach giving a glimpse of the shipping of the port. It also takes one along the North Shore, including, Nahant, Marblehead, Gloucester, Isle of Shoals, across Penobscot Bay, and all the interesting points in this vicinity. Mr. Peabody spent several seasons with his camera along this shore and secured a large variety of views from which his illustrations are drawn.

He should be greeted by a large house and all who attend will be amply repaid.

Nearing a Solution.

SHELDON, Ia., Feb. 18.—This part of the state is in a fever of excitement over developments which bid fair to unravel the mystery surrounding the death of Maud Strawne, the handsome 18-year-old schoolgirl, whose lifeless body was found in her room at her married sister's home here Saturday. Late developments have entirely exploded the theory of suicide, and A. L. Bull and G. Morello have been arrested, charged with having criminal knowledge of the girl's death. While there is no outward indications of violence, yet there is proof of the girl having been outraged. It is also asserted by witness that Bull and Morello were seen in the house on the day Miss Strawne is supposed to have met death. Bull has of late been paying attention to the girl.

Terrell Doing His Duty.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—The state department has received a report from Minister Terrell at Constantinople in reference to the case of the American missionary Knapp, who was arrested at Bitlis by the Turkish authorities on a charge of inciting rebellion on the evidence of certain Armenians who are in prison. Mr. Terrell cables that he has secured a suspension of the proceedings against the missionary and a safe conduct for him to Constantinople, where the minister himself will examine into the case. Mr. Terrell had demanded that Knapp either be released or that he (Terrell) be permitted to try him, and this cablegram indicates he has succeeded in his purpose of removing the case from the Turkish officials.

EL PASO, Tex., Feb. 18.—The fight was on and off and on again all within the space of 30 minutes yesterday afternoon. It is now definitely set for Friday, and Buck Connelly has agreed to post for Maher $1000 additional forfeit if his man is not in the ring to fight on that day. It is by no means certain that Maher will be able to fight on Friday, although he says he will get into the ring no matter what the condition of his eyes may be. They are still badly inflamed.

THE DEFAULTED BONDS

Likely to Be Awarded to the Graves Syndicate of New York.

The Monroe Doctrine Discussed by Senator Davis.

Secretary Morton Finds No Sympathizers on the Seed Question.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—The question of what disposition shall be made of the bonds upon which the allottees have defaulted by failing to make the required payment of 20 per cent on receipt of notice of the acceptance of bids is now before the secretary of the treasury.

The amount of these defaults has not yet been ascertained, nor is it expected that the exact amount will be learned before the last of the week, when the reports from the several sub-treasuries are expected to be in. It is believed, however, that the bid of William Graves and his associates of New York city for $4,500,000 at $115.3391 is by far the largest, and it is probable that the aggregate will not exceed this amount by more than $1,000,000 at the most.

J. P. Morgan has filed with Secretary Carlisle a claim on behalf of himself and associates to all defaulted allotments under his bid of $113.6877, and has deposited in the sub-treasury at New York sufficient gold to cover them. The secretary within the last day or two has received a number of offers to take all bonds upon which default of payment has been made at figures considerably in excess of the Morgan bid, but he is undoubtedly inclined to the opinion that under the terms of his circular of Jan. 6 he is inhibited from accepting any bids for bonds after that date, and hence it follows that Mr. Morgan and his associates are very likely to get an amount considerably in excess of their first allotment. The secretary, however, has not yet made an official decision on this point.

Davis on Monroe Doctrine.

The speech of Senator Davis (Minn.), supporting the resolution, of which he is the author, enunciating the policy of the United States on the Monroe doctrine, was the event of yesterday in the senate.

It was a matter of observation, said Mr. Davis, that every year the foreign relations of the United States increased in difficulty, complexity and importance. The closer the relations of one government to another were, the more natural it was that the question of foreign relations should become one of increasing frequency of occurrence and difficulty of solution.

That fact explained why there were probably more questions now unsolved between the United States and Great Britain than between the United States and all the other nations of the world combined. It must be a matter, he said, of congratulation to everybody that conditions had been ameliorated within the last month. If that amelioration rested on a basis which did not concede a thing from the Monroe doctrine, but recognized and confirmed it in its entirety, it would receive the warmest approval of the American people.

But if, on the contrary, it was the result of any material concession of the principles announced by President Monroe (to which principles the American people were most warmly attached), that people would rise up in condemnation of it.

The Monroe doctrine, he said, might be fairly summed up as follows: That the American continent was not to be considered as subjects to future colonization by any European power; that the United States should consider any attempt on the part of such powers to extend their system to any portion of the hemisphere as dangerous to the peace and safety of the United States, and that any interposition by a European power for the purpose of oppressing any of the people on the continent should be considered as the manifestation of an unfriendly disposition toward the United States.

Seed Must Be Distributed.

The agricultural appropriation bill occupied the attention of the house. A great deal of criticism of Secretary Morton was indulged in on both sides of the political aisle, but as on Saturday no one arose to his defense. At last Mr. Pearson (N. C.) arose and asked if there was not some member—Democratic, Populist or Republican—who would raise a voice in his defense. His question was greeted with a chorus of "noes" from all sides of the house. An amendment was pending when the house adjourned, making mandatory the execution of the provision in the bill for the distribution of seed. It is understood that Mr. Couzens (Ia.) will offer an amendment directing the secretary of the treasury to withhold the payment of Secretary Morton's salary until this provision was executed.

Double Murder Confessed.

AUGUSTA, Ky., Feb. 18.—Robert Laughlin, who on Saturday morning reported his house burned by murderers, who attacked him with knives, and whose wife and niece were burned in the building Sunday night, has confessed that he was the murderer. The general theory is that he first assaulted his niece and then killed her and his wife to hide the crime, but he denies this, and says he could not tell what put it in his mind to brain them with a poker while they were asleep.

Against Amnesty.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—The debate on the address in reply to the queen's speech was continued in the house of commons yesterday. Timothy Harrington (Parnellite) moved an amendment to the effect that amnesty be granted to the Irish political prisoners. The Conservative leader, A. J. Balfour, moved the closure, which was carried by a vote of 270 to 107. Mr. Harrington's motion was then defeated by a vote of 279 to 117.

Not Badly Injured.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—The International Navigation company has received word from Newport News that the examination of the hull and engines of the steamer St. Paul has been completed, and it is announced that there is practically no damage to the hull. Portions of the machinery will be taken apart to clear away the accumulated sand, and the parts worn by working in the sand renewed.

No Choice Yet.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Feb. 18.—The rollcall for the 24th senatorial ballot showed the smallest attendance of the session, only 106 members being present; necessary to a choice, 54. The ballot resulted: Blackburn, 49; Hunter, 48; Holt, 8; Carlisle, 3; McCreary, 1; Cochran, 1; Bate, 1.

A man's life may be saved in many ways. A man may commit suicide in a great many ways. Shooting himself through the head is quicker, but it is no more certain than neglecting his health. If a woman saw her husband with a pistol to his head, she would take prompt and vigorous measures to save him; but the same woman might see her husband on the down-grade to disease and death without seeing the seriousness of it. One-sixth of all the people who die, die of consumption. Consumption doesn't come all at once. It is insidious. The seeds of it are seemingly insignificant. Most people do not know how it starts. Thousands of people are on the road to consumption and don't know it. Whenever there is loss of flesh—paleness—wasting away—look out. Consumption easily finds a foot-hold in a weakened body. Low vitality, impure or poor blood, imperfect digestion, nervousness, sleeplessness—all these lead to consumption.

Taken in time, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will prevent the development of the disease. Taken according to directions, it will positively and perfectly cure ninety-eight per cent. of all cases of consumption, whether incipient or fully developed. Consumption is a disease of the blood. The "Golden Medical Discovery" is a cure for all blood diseases, no matter in what part or how they manifest themselves.

If you want to know all about it, and what it has done for other people, send twenty-one (21) one-cent stamps to cover the cost of mailing only for a FREE COPY of Dr. Pierce's great 1008-page work, "Common Sense Medical Adviser." Every family should have a copy of this book for ready reference. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

ADVERTISE IN THE LEDGER

REED THE STRONGEST.

A Talk With General Alger Concerning Presidential Possibilities.

BOSTON, Feb. 18.—A Boston paper prints an interview with General Russell A. Alger of Michigan, in which the general says, referring to the presidential possibilities:

RUSSELL A. ALGER.

"Although I favor McKinley, still I think that Reed is perhaps the strongest man in the country today. But I see that Quay and Elkins are out as candidates," continued General Alger. "Then there is Senator Allison, who is thought well of by a great many people, and there are not a few people who think that Governor Morton would make a good, safe, hard-working and conservative president.

"You see, you can't tell anything about it at present. We all thought Blaine was going to be nominated, but he wasn't, and some dark horse may get in now."

"Protection will be an important issue in this campaign," he continued, "not, perhaps, in the form of the McKinley bill, but in some form that will recognize the differences in labor and wages between this country and foreign countries."

Insurgents' Daring Moves.

HABANA, Feb. 18.—Antonio Maceo is fairly within the province of Habana, and if he has not joined forces with Maximo Gomez, he is in a position to do so when he pleases. Large forces of insurgents are also within reach in Matanzas province, where they are overrunning the country and doing much damage. On Sunday Antonia Maceo, with his large following from Pinar del Rio, made known his presence at San Antonio de Las Vegas. His band, together with those of Miro and Catillo, were attacked at that town by a column of troops under Colonel Segura, and an engagement of some importance ensued. Colonel Segura, in his official report, relates that his forces took the town and dislodged the insurgents, who left 12 dead, besides 71 horses and some arms and a quantity of ammunition. They also carried off numerous wounded.

Uncle Sam Is Willing.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—A Washington dispatch to The Times, commenting upon the newspaper suggestion that Great Britain should appoint a commission of its own to examine into and report upon the Guiana boundary, asserts that the Washington government would propose a plan, if there were reason to believe that it would be accepted by England, to create a new commission of two Englishmen and two Americans, not to fix the boundary, but to ascertain the facts and report to their governments. If they should fail to agree, a fifth member could be appointed by the President of the Swiss Republic, or some other acceptable personage, the findings of the commission to be binding and to serve as a basis for subsequent direct negotiations to fix the boundary.

Too Much Dissension.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—In response to the letter addressed to him by Timothy Healy, Thomas Sexton has finally refused to accept the leadership of the Irish party, notwithstanding Mr. Healy's earnest appeal to him to do so and his promise of the hearty support of the Healyites. Sexton says that the same reasons which impelled him to retire from parliament, namely, the internal dissensions in the Irish party, have operated with irresistible force in deciding him to refuse the chairmanship. It is true, he says, that he was elected unanimously, but so was Justin McCarthy. He is therefore compelled to consider that the unanimity of the party is merely a transient phase of feeling.

Nearly $25,000,000 Involved.

CLEVELAND, Feb. 18.—Further developments point to the early consummation of the big street car deal in this city. At the board of control meeting yesterday B. Nahler, representing the Everett interests, presented a communication requesting the board to take no action regarding the application for a franchise to build a system of electric railways to be operated on a 3-cent basis pending the outcome of negotiations between Mr. Everett and representatives of the old companies. This is taken to mean that there is to be a general consolidation. The combined capital of all the interests involved is nearly $25,000,000.

A Washington Society Event.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—The most distinguished social event of the season here was the marriage last night of Miss Catherine Marten Weston Fuller, daughter of Chief Justice and Mrs. Fuller, to Theodore Smith Beecher, a young lawyer of Buffalo. The event was solemnized at St. John's Episcopal church, which was filled with prominent persons. The bridesmaids—sisters of the bride—were Mrs. Pauline Aubrey and Miss Jane Fuller. Miss Fannie Fuller was maid of honor. The bridegroom was attended by Richard Ware of Boston. The chief justice gave his daughter away.

A Grand Show.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 18.—Rex, king of the carnival, arrived yesterday afternoon on the revenue cutter Forward, with the largest retinue in his history. Besides his usual court, a largely-augmented column of local militia and an entirely new battalion of the naval reserve, there were three military commands from the interior of the state, crack companies from St. Paul and Minneapolis, and 500 Essenino knights rom Massachusetts and Kentucky. Many notables viewed the parade.

France Will Withdraw.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., Feb. 18.—Negotiations are almost completed in Paris whereby for rights granted France by Great Britain in Africa, the French will renounce rights to cure fresh fish on the west coast of Newfoundland. This will be a great boon to islanders who are now shut out of one of the best parts of the colony. Marquis Dufferin is conducting negotiations in behalf of Great Britain in Paris.

Real Estate

Having opened a Real Estate office in Durgin & Merrill's Block, we are prepared to show plans and give prices on some of the finest house lots offered for sale in this city in recent years. These lots are embraced in the following tracts of land:

PRESIDENT'S HILL.

This land was formerly the country residence of C. F. Adams. It overlooks the ocean, and the view both seaward and inland is unsurpassed in this vicinity. The grounds are covered with rare and costly shade trees, a very desirable feature of a lot, and the farthest portion of the property is within four minutes' walk of both electric and steam cars. Persons wishing a fine lot in a first-class locality would do well to inspect this property before purchasing.

CRANCH HILL,

Probably better known as Adams' Field, is situated in the heart of the city. The land is high and dry, and the streets through the property are wide and straight. The lots are good size, the prices moderate and terms very reasonable. No better lots for a man of moderate means have ever been offered in this city.

WEST QUINCY.

Land formerly known as the Dell estate on Willard street, borders on Blue Hills reservation; is handy to works, and is less than five minutes' walk to electric cars, West Quincy depot and schools. This property comprises about 80 lots.

HILLSIDE TERRACE.

On Grove street, near quarries and sheds; good lots, low prices; small amount down and small monthly payments. This property comprises about 70 lots.

Also a few lots off Bates avenue.

WOLLASTON.

☞ Will be on land at President's Hill every afternoon from 2 to 4. Parties desiring lots or any information on the above properties, please call at Room 12 Durgin & Merrill's Block.

Says Nothing, But Looks Wise,

And looks you know are not deceiving. There isn't a better looking range in the world than the Glenwood, but that's the point we seldom refer to. Glenwoods are wonderful bakers, that's half the battle of life in the kitchen. They save your time, your coal and patience, in fact what Glenwoods don't know about cooking isn't worth knowing. Then our price and liberality is simply astounding. $20 00 to $33.00 for a Glenwood. A written guarantee with every range, viz: Satisfaction guaranteed or all money refunded. A reasonable allowance for your old range, and a Glenwood on trial if you'll just say the word.

The honest pharmacist may, without flattery, be called a benefactor of humanity. He spends a number of years in the thorough mastery of his profession and is a man of broad views, liberal education, and wide experience. The honest pharmacist, although in a sense he is a merchant, does not sink his profession below the level of a trade.

It is impracticable for everyone to have an intimate knowledge of drugs and chemistry, just as it is impossible for every person to be an expert electrician or astronomer—it is all a matter of education and experience.

One Hundred and Thirty Counts In Indictment Against Murphy.

Sent to Jail In Default of $20,000 Bail.

His Counsel Admits a "Mistake," but Not So Great as Alleged.

SALEM, Mass., Feb. 19.—Clarence Murphy, the defaulting teller of the Salem Savings bank, pleaded not guilty to an indictment in usual form, enumerating 65 different counts of embezzlement, in court, yesterday afternoon. The sum total of his alleged peculations is $47,615. In the indictment are also 64 counts, charging the same offense in different form, and one alleging larceny of $500 from the bank.

Murphy was brought into court at 8 p. m. He had had his side whiskers shaved off, and looked almost precisely as he did when he left Salem some two years ago. He seemed cool and collected.

He was represented by Hon. W. D. Northend, who held a few moments' private conversation with him in the anteroom, after which Murphy returned to the dock and pleaded not guilty to all the charges.

District Attorney White then moved that he be requested to recognize in substantial bail, and stated to the court the circumstances of the case—that Murphy had been a trusted employe of the bank, and that on his misdoings being discovered in December, 1893, he had seized $500 from the drawer of the bank, and, leaping from a window in a toilet room, had left, and nothing more was heard of him until a few weeks ago he was apprehended at San Francisco, and had been brought back to answer to these charges.

He stated that Murphy, even after his arrest there, had attempted to escape. In view of his evident intent at the time he left, never to return, and his he felt justified in asking the bail to be fixed in a substantial sum.

Mr. Northend stated that as to the $500, the larceny of which was charged, Murphy had left a check on which the bank had realized—this Mr. White denied—as to the embezzlement he was informed by Murphy that nothing like the amount named had been taken.

Under peculiar circumstances which would considerably palliate the offense when stated, he had undoubtedly made a mistake and taken some money, but he had not left the country, and was engaged in an effort to retrieve his fortunes in order to make restitution at the time of his arrest.

He wished to say that the newspaper stories of a confession while on the way home, he was assured by Murphy and he was corroborated by the officers, never took place.

The court fixed the bail at $20,000, in default of which Murphy went back to jail. If he decides to stand trial the case will go over to next term.

ON BEACON HILL.

Bicycles as Baggage — Against Anti-Boxing Bills—Biennials Favored.

BOSTON, Feb. 19.—The house passed to be engrossed yesterday the resolves in favor of biennial elections. The vote in favor was virtually the same as on the question of ordering them to a third reading. There was unmistakably more than the two-thirds necessary. Only a majority will be required for their adoption in the senate.

The bill as passed means: That the governor, lieutenant governor, executive councillors and state officers, as well as the members of the house and senate, will be elected for two-year terms, commencing with 1898.

The committee on railroads gave a hearing on the bill for the prohibition of baggage charges on bicycles of passengers with no other baggage. President Elliott of the League of American Wheelmen said that 121 railroads and 11 steamboat companies in this country carry tricycles free of charge. He said that the trouble was that the railroads had made no provision for bicycles. If they did, there would be a great increase in passenger fares, for many of the wheelmen would ride on the trains oftener.

The committee on labor also had something new, namely, a bill to regulate the hours and general treatment of hospital nurses, and a bill to clip the wings of the chairman of the state board of arbitration. Among the other matters considered in committee were street improvements in Jamaica Plain, peddlers' licenses, decisions of the gas and electric light commissions, separate boards of trustees for the Lancaster and Lyman schools, and so forth.

A remonstrance against proposed legislation prohibiting public boxing has been received, signed by F. R. Peters, I. T. Burr, Jr., F. W. Hayes, F. W. Peabody, Jr., Oliver Ames, Charles Head, E. C. Hodges, Arthur Hunnewell and others. The remonstrants represent that they "believe that boxing is a manly sport, harmless to the public morals, and when properly regulated should be recognized as such."

Murder at Lawrence.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Feb. 19.—Mrs. Kate Weir died at the city hospital yesterday afternoon from blows inflicted during a row at her home on Elm street. Agnes Gibney, alias Morton, was arrested at a house on the Andover road this morning, and will in all probability be charged with murder. The trouble occurred Monday evening, during which the Morton woman is said to have beaten Mrs. Weir with a teapot. When Mrs. Weir's 15-year-old son came home he found his mother weltering in blood. A doctor was called, and he ordered her removal to the hospital, which was delayed until yesterday afternoon, and during her removal she died.

Fortune From Abroad.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Feb. 19.—Seven residents of New London yesterday received notification that they were heirs to £70,000, left by William Bindloss, mayor of Kendal, Eng., who died a few days ago. The will was probated last Saturday, and in addition to the amounts which New London people will receive, the oldest heir-at-law of the late mayor will receive about $45,000 worth of real estate in Kendal. This heir is William Bindloss of Mystic, this state.

Patriotic Utterances.

BANGOR, Me., Feb. 19.—The most interesting feature of the first day of the 29th annual encampment of the department of the Maine Grand Army was a great reception to Commander-in-Chief Walker in city hall last evening. Commander Walker said, in reference to the American soldier, that the Union armies were successful because they were composed of thinking men, and declared that the country's strongest defense was in its schools. His tribute to the flag and its famous defenders in the past century was eloquent.

A Happy Celebration.

BROOKLINE, Mass., Feb. 19.—Hundreds of friends testified to the esteem in which the veteran war correspondent and author, Hon. Charles Carleton Coffin, and his estimable wife, were held, by their presence at their golden anniversary at their home last night. A reception was held from 3 to 5 and from 8 to 10 p. m., to which over 1000 invitations had been sent out.

Vermont Train Ditched.

BELLOWS FALLS, Vt., Feb. 19.—A broken rail on the Vermont railroad caused a wreck about two miles north of Ludlow station, yesterday. The engine of a passenger train was derailed, and three coaches were thrown down a 50-foot embankment. Only three passengers were on the train. The train hands were all more or less seriously hurt.

Two Cases Disposed Of.

SALEM, Mass., Feb. 19.—In the superior criminal court yesterday, John Reed's plea of nolo contendere for manslaughter in causing the death of Xavier Genest, who was sick of typhoid fever, by giving him whisky, was accepted and the case filed. Daniel Lahey of Newburyport was found guilty of manslaughter in causing the death of John Cronin.

Want Cutdown Restored.

CHELSEA, Mass., Feb. 19.—A strike of stitchers, lasters, turners, edgesetters and McKay stitchers in the shoe factory of I. B. Noyes & Co. occurred yesterday for the restoration of the 10 per cent cutdown which went into effect last November. The strike was ordered by the Boot and Shoe Workers' union.

First Presbyterian Church.

On Sunday morning the congregation listened to a most eloquent and inspiring sermon by the Rev. Dr. Fredrick J. Stanley, lately of Japan. His subject was, "God's Footprints in the Accident and Orient." Monday evening Dr. Stanley gave his notable lecture on "The Marvelous Treaty of Peace between China and Japan," in the same church. Sunday evening a special Communion service was held, and the new members received since the January communion confirmed their confession of faith in the public covenant service. It ought to be explained that in the Presbyterian church members are received by the session. The pastor and elders, who examine each person as to his faith and Godly purpose, and if satisfied receive him by vote; the public reception does not constitute such a person a member but the previous act of the sesson; the public reception is optional with the pastor and elders of each church. So the expression "applications for membership" in a recent local item was a slip of the pen, for the forty-five were members, having been received by the session since the first of January. Two more were received before the services on Sunday, making a total accession of forty-seven to this church in January and February. The covenant service was very impressive. The new members standing in the front of the church answered each question as to faith and purpose put by the pastor, by the uplifted hand; and then the communicant members filling the centre of the church, rising in a body, by the same sign covenanted to watch over their new brethren and seek their spiritual welfare. The Lord's Supper was then adminstered, all the members present, and visiting christians of other denominations partaking.

If asked the question "Have you got a stomach?" it would be safe on general principles, to answer "Yes." But, if you are sure of it; that is, if you ever feel any distress after eating or any pains of whatever description in the region of the stomach, you have got something more than an ordinary stomach; in other words, you have got a diseased stomach. The stomach is a powerful muscle, and the proper remedy for a tired muscle is rest. Try the Shaker Digestive Cordial, for this product not only contains digested food, which will nourish the system without any work on the part of the diseased organs, but it aids the digestion of other foods as well. You can test its value in your case for the trifling sum of 10 cents. Sample bottles at this price are carried by all druggists.

Theophilus King understood that there was a petition in the City Council for a location for a freight railroad among the quarries on the North Common. He believed this a measure in which the Board of Trade should be interested. Others took a similar view, and it was referred to the Committee on Railroads and Transportation to report next week at a special meeting of the directors.

Ex-Senator Merrill thought the proposed parkway was another measure in which the Board of Trade should be interested, and it was referred to the Committee on Legislative Matters.

There were also informal talks as to the kind of industries to be encouraged, duties of the Committee on Municipal Affairs, and the best ways to obtain members.

A special meeting of the directors will be held next Thursday, Feb. 27.

ANTITOXIN VERSUS DIPHTHERIA.

And now a few words, as to the immediate cause, of all this local antitoxin discussion which as near as I can learn is because Dr. Davis (whom I have not even the pleasure of knowing,) did not, or would not, use this article called antitoxin, in his treatment of certain cases of diphtheria, and they died!—Ergo. The writer of the article states, that such a physician is of a class who believes, that when a person is sick, all that is necessary, is to believe themselves well, and presto, they are well.

Now if I am rightly informed Dr. Davis does not belong to any such class, unless the intention is to brand the adherents of homeopathy as constituting such a class, and the time has long since passed, for such insinuations, to be made by reading, thinking, intelligent men and women, especially here where we live in sight of Boston University.

Dr. Davis is a Homœopathic physician, as I understand, certainly that is the flag he nails, to the masthead, in his professional card in your city paper. Now, Homœopathy has a principle, or is rather a principle of itself, for treatment, of the sick. Dr. Davis, has simply stood by the declared principles, of this practice, boldly and manfully as opposed to an empirical practice, of using a preparation, called antitoxin without any guiding symptoms, for its use, except that the trouble is supposed to be diphtheria.

What! ye dwellers in this land of the Pilgrim Fathers and Puritan principles! Ye, who look back to your ancestry with pride, because they have fought, and bled, and died, for principle from the hour when their feet were first placed upon Plymouth Rock. On account of a principle, on through Boston Tea Party, the Revolutionary and Civil Wars, when your catechisms, yes, every book worth reading, in poetry or prose, inculcates this idea of living up to principle. And now when a man single handed and alone, has dared to stand up for his principles and principles withal, that are not for the harm, but for the best good of his kind.

Will you allow yourselves to denounce a man who has shown the courage of his convictions, by standing alone in defense of his principle, and that principle having the endorsement of as many eminent, and master minds, yea more, than does antitoxin, and no man is any more certain that these cases would have lived if antitoxin had been used than they are that others would have died if they had not had antitoxin. There is not only a chance for but there certainly exists a wide difference of opinion relative to the so called remedy. Let me quote one article relative to the subject, which has appeared in a New York paper. If the writer's memory serves him rightly New York was among, if not the first to endorse, the antitoxin treatment, and appropriated money for its manufacture and use. Behold the gist of the matter.

"During December, there were reported 706 cases of diphtheria, as against 544 in December, 1894. There were 175 deaths from this disease last month. These figures show that the disease is gaining ground and reveal the supineness of the Health department. The taking of cultures and the experiments with antitoxin are continued, yet they have never really got beyond the stage of experiments, and, so far as checking the epidemic is concerned, are of no practical value to the people."

Go to those who feel like denouncing a man for standing by a righteous principle, and read of Columbus, Galileo, Harvey, Hahnemann, and of hosts of others, even Jumer, the father of the vaccination racket, even in later times remember Grant the imperturbable, who was denounced by the masses at one period as being no general, and yet whose record places him today as having been one of the world's greatest generals. Remember also the bulletins of the eminent physicians who attended our lamented Garfield, and compare them with the final knowledge of the case from the autopsy. All of which proves that might does not make right, that majorities can be many, and very many eminent men even physicians can be mistaken.

Neither should those who use these experimental measures be denounced if used cautiously and with all the safeguards possible, to avoid disastrous results. For while human life is rather a precious and costly possession, to subject to the precariousness of experiments, yet there are those who prefer to have it said their illness is more severe than anyone else ever experienced, and that remedies ordinary mortals receive, have no effect upon them, and like "parents" want all the remedies used that are known to science, so that there are always subjects for experiments, and experiment is at the bottom of the grand achievements of the past. And there are those who are born experimentals, like the noted Edison, and what though, now and then one is killed by the electrical current, the greatest good to the greater number, will prevail, and live wires and trolley cars with the telegraph and telephone will continue.

Many men, many minds, therefore principles not men for the public good.

Again, in view of the foregoing facts which are substantiated by the records of the past, any treatment that has been used empirically (as the antitoxin of today is almost solely on the one supposition that the case is diphtheria,) has rendered the past replete with evidence, of countless loss of life, from such empirical treatment, as giving, or using measures simply guided by a name is denominated, as has been instances in the Bergeon, and Brown Sequard methods.

Not only Dr. Davis, but thousands of other physicians, and not all of any one school either, view with distrust, such empirical measures, and rightly, and justly, in view of the history of the past.—Pro bono publico. C

Are inseparably connected. The former depend simply, solely, solidly upon the latter. If it is pure they are properly fed and there is no "nervousness." If it is impure they are fed on refuse, therefore cannot be strong and healthy, and the horrors of nervous prostration result. The only sensible way to cure is: Feed the nerves on pure blood. # THE PARKWAY.

The Route through Quincy as Proposed.

Probably Not Well Understood by Our Citizens.

Course of Furnace Brook to be Changed at West Quincy.

As the route of the proposed parkway is not generally known or understood by the citizens of Quincy, and as the route has been somewhat changed from the original plan, the following description of the route as now proposed according to the map hung in City Hall may be read with interest.

Starting from Neponset bridge it follows Hancock street to Atlantic street crossing the railroad by the existing overhead bridge, which, however, will have to be widened. It then turns to the east and follows the shore to Squantum street, which it follows to Squantum Head.

Starting again from where the Parkway first intersects with Squantum street it follows the shore along Atlantic beach, Norfolk Downs and Wollaston Park to the Sailors' Home. It then turns and crosses the marsh over the dike at Pine island, going in the rear of Pine island, crossing a branch of Black's creek, and enters Merry Mount park.

Passing through the park it follows the course of Furnace brook to Hancock street, thence along Hancock street to Bridge street, then follows Bridge street, which it is proposed to widen and straighten, to Adams street, which it follows to the residence of Hon. William B. Rice.

Leaving Adams street it turns to the right and follows generally the course of Furnace brook until it again strikes Adam's street, to the left of Eaton's ice pond. It then follows closely the course of Furnace brook to West Quincy, crossing Reardon street.

After crossing Reardon street, it leaves Furnace brook and crosses Cross and Copeland streets passing in front of the Willard school to Miller street which it crosses and follows in this direction until it again strikes Furnace brook which it follows to Willard street, thence to the Blue Hills Reservation.

It is proposed to change the course of Furnace brook, beginning at Reardon street so that it will follow the Parkway.

Musicale.

One of the pleasantest social functions of the season at Wollaston was the musicale which was given by Miss Olney at her home on Grand View avenue on Tuesday evening. It brought together a most congenial company of musicians and lovers of good music.

Some of the best soloists in Wollaston took part. Mrs. Frank H. Sprague gave in most excellent taste "Thou Ring upon my Finger," from Schumann, and also "Good bye sweet day" by Vanner; Mr. Edward E. Bullock sang a magnificent tenor solo; Mrs. Amos Towle Leavitt played effectively a piano selection from Nevin as well as one of Helmund's minuets; Miss Bjorkman, the well-known violinist, gave a brilliant Romanza; Miss Caroline Raymond Lora rendered with skill a solo upon the piano; and Miss Olney, piano, Miss Edith Olney, violin, and Miss Bjorkman, violin, rendered with equisite finish a symphony.

After the music chocolate was poured.

Grammar or Language.

Passing along Hancock street, yesterday afternoon about 2 o'clock, we met two scholarly looking young women in the line that issues from the High and Woodward schools. Their arms were piled with books. "Fanny where was you Saturday," came to our ears. A little shudder crept towards our spine, for we remembered one old time rule. "The verb must agree with its subject in number and person," and "You is always construed with a plural verb.

Postoffice Controversy.

To the Editors of the Ledger:

Two letters have appeared in your paper in answer to my letter of last Thursday, and in justice to myself I cannot allow them to pass by without notice. I do not intend to take more of your space than is absolutely necessary, and with this answer my part in the controversy is ended.

My first attention shall be devoted to Mr. Whiting who boasts of the fact that he has for seven years had charge of the Wollaston news. The first thought that strikes me is that he should be able by this time to diagnose public sentiment impartially and not make his writings serve his political ends, as he has done in this case.

His other statement that the article in question was written without bias and had only the same value that any piece of news had, may be questioned. Why did he furnish a transcript of the article to all the correspondents of Boston papers, and why did only one publish ?

Was he not playing the role of a greedy Republican politician, and did he not take this means to create a prejudice against Mr. Burns. Was not his whole article suited to the tastes of himself, a member of the Ward Five Republican Committee, and two members of the Democratic committee?

Have I not a better right to engage in this contest than he has, since this is an affair on my side of the house. Not the right to intervene to prevent, if possible, a coalition between a hide-bound Republican and two? Democrats(!) Surely he must know that we do not countenance deals or compromises.

Mr. Whiting should remember that any citizen of Quincy is eligible for the office of postmaster of Wollaston, and I can cite numerous cases to substantiate this claim.

Wollaston for Wollastonians ! This is a circumscribed sentiment, and I would substitute : "Every post office in the land for Democrats ;" a trifle irritating perhaps to Wollastonians.

Mr. Baker takes exception to my charges, and endeavors to prove that they are incorrect, and further to give publicity to the statement that his acts have been without criticism. My principal charges were that Mr. Baker had interests in the retention of Mr. Wilde, and that he was hostile to Mr. Burns. These charges he denies. After a better and more thorough investigation, I reaffirm them, and that further the friends of the present incumbent brought every conceivable charge against Mr. Burns, in the hope that they might prevent his getting the appointment.

Mr. Baker seems to think that there are others working through me. Of course coming from such a gentleman there is no insinuation. But let me tell him that Mr. Burns has been supported on my part with the same spontaneity that I supported him when he was a candidate for public office, and that since becoming a member of a political organization I have considered it my bounden duty to support all candidates, providing of course that the one asking such support is without spot or blemish.

Ice Gatherers Busy.

Rogers Bros. have a large gang of men at work at their pond housing ice. The gang worked all day Tuesday and put in something like 1,500 tons, and it is expected the amount housed today will be 2,000 tons. The ice is from ten to twelve inches thick and is very clear and handsome.

At the Meadow Brook Ice Co. pond there is also a large gang at work getting in their second crop and this ice is also very clear and handsome. The snow that fell Tuesday and today does not interfere much with the work.

Shortly after commencing work at Rogers Bros.' pond this morning a part of the gearing broke which put a stop to work for a day or so, as the new parts have to come from New York.

At Eaton's pond the ice is about eleven inches thick and Mr. Eaton commenced cutting this noon. He will fill a new stack near his house and will also put 150 tons into the Hammond Beef Co.'s house, near the Dimmock street bridge.

Electric Lighting Plant.

The Committee on Manufactures will give a public hearing on Friday morning, at 10 o'clock, in room number 8, on house bill 729, that the City of Quincy may be permitted to establish an electric lighting plant, without purchasing any existing plant.

The Committee of Health will give a hearing for change of law as to registration in dentistry, on Thursday morning at 10.30 o'clock, at room 439, State House.

CARTER'S DECISION

In a Squabble Concerning Selection of Delegates to St. Louis Convention.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—Senator Carter (Mon.), chairman of the Republican national committee, has rendered a decision that will be of interest in every congressional district in the selection of delegates to the St. Louis convention. In the Tenth Ohio district a faction of the Republican party undertook to elect the two delegates from the district at a primary election.

The opposing faction, led by ex-Congressman Thompson, contended that the delegates must be elected according to the practice of selecting congressional candidates in the district, viz., at a convention of delegates chosen by primaries. To secure a decision upon the subject, Judge Thompson formally appealed to Chairman Carter, and was sustained in the following letter:

Replying to questions presented through Representative Fenton, you are informed that any departure in selecting delegates to the national convention from the usual proceeding followed in the district heretofore in nominating a candidate for congress would violate the rule prescribed in the call for the St. Louis convention. If the practice of nominating candidates for congress obtains in your district in district convention, any other methods of electing delegates to the St. Louis convention will be clearly irregular.

Nothing New For France.

PARIS, Feb. 19.—The cabinet council yesterday made future arrangements as though no crisis existed. M. Bourgeois makes no secret of his opinion that the time has arrived to brave the senate and to appeal to public opinion against it. He will not resign if the majority remains constant. Should it fall away he will come forward to read a radical agitation against the senate, and taking his stand on the security of the wage-earners' investments he will have powerful popular support. One of the immediate effects of the crisis is a movement for banquets throughout the country in honor of the anniversary of Feb. 24, 1848, the day universal suffrage was proclaimed. M. Bourgeois will attend the banquet in Paris, and the committee which are organizing it make no secret of their intention to make it a demonstration against the senate.

A Brooklyn Tragedy.

BROOKLYN, Feb. 19.—Crazed with jealousy because his wife and sons had left him, Franz M. Schwab, a German laborer, 55 years old, last night visited the home of his married son, Bernard, this city, and fired four shots from a 44-caliber pistol, two of the bullets lodging in the body of his wife, Kathrina, 53 years old, killing her instantly. The third ball struck his grandchild, 9 weeks old, over the heart, and the fourth struck the son, Bernard, in the right eye. Schwab, after the shooting, made his escape to the street, but was subsequently placed under arrest. He seemed to glory in the fact that he had caused excitement. The police officials consider him insane. Bernard Schwab and the injured child will probably not recover.

A Romantic Story.

SANDUSKY, O., Feb. 19.—In 1862, E. H. Bowne went to the war, leaving his bride of three months at her home here. At the end of the war Bowne did not return. His wife gave him up for dead and removed to Hartford. Some time since she learned that E. H. Browne had obtained a pension. Correspondence with the pension bureau resulted in locating the pensioner, and Mrs. Bowne arrived here a day or two since. The meeting was a happy one, and the reunited couple are now domiciled in this city.

A WICKED YOUNGSTER.

William Adams an Expert Safe Cracker at Age of Eighteen.

Responsible For Recent Explosion at Newton, Mass.

Planning a Bank Robbery at New Orleans When Arrested.

BOSTON, Feb. 19.—Two burglars—one a large, powerful man and an alleged professional "cracksman," the other a mere boy—started from Boston 10 days ago on a safe "cracking" campaign. They took with them a formula for the manufacture of a most powerful explosive, the invention of the younger man.

The night before they departed they blew open the safe in the office of the Metropolitan Insurance company, Newton, to get funds, and secured $700.

Plans had been laid to wreck several national banks in the southern and western states, and the burglars believed that they would reap a harvest.

Both men are now locked up in the Tombs in New York city. After careful investigation Detectives Taylor and Pepperted have facts in their possession which lead them to believe that they have in custody two of the most dangerous bank burglars in the country.

The men in custody of the detectives gave their names as William F. Mason, 18 years old, and Thomas Stevens, 40 years old.

When arrested, in Stevens' room were found some 5 per cent railroad bonds, unsigned, and $500 in cash.

Mason is regarded as one of the cleverest criminals that have come to this town. He is well educated, and evidently has been used to refined surroundings.

He has found a new way to crack the most thoroughly burglar proof safe with chemicals. The detectives do not think that he has ever served time in any prison.

Stevens is a man weighing probably 250 pounds, has powerful muscles and is of fine physique. He is supposed to have furnished the experience for the pair.

A third man at least has been connected with the case. He was an old-time bank burglar of the name of L. W. Moore.

Mason and Stevens had lived at 34 East Twelfth street. Mason was arrested while trying to procure a half pound of nitroglycerine at a druggist's. He was heavily armed. Stevens was arrested at his room, while in bed. He had a revolver and a

Dirk Under His Pillow.

Mason and Stevens were taken before Chief O'Brien by Detective Taylor yesterday, and there Mason made a full confession. To begin with, Mason told O'Brien that his real name was Adams, and that his father was a jeweler at 10 State street, Boston, and a prominent citizen of the Hub. He said that for two years he had worked in a safe manufacturing establishment, and while there had made a study of safe-blowing.

He got hold of a book on safe-blowing, written by L. W. Moore, He experimented some with it, and decided that he had the greatest method ever known for blowing safes. It was by the use of nitroglycerine and other chemicals.

The only trouble, he said, was in regulating the explosions so as not to blow up the building when the work was being done.

Adams found Moore, and the latter agreed to help him to start on his career of crime. He introduced him to Stevens. Moore then went to New Orleans and made plans to rob a national bank in that city. Then he sent for Adams and Stevens. They needed $300 to get to New Orleans.

They decided to crack a safe near Boston to raise the cash. They tried to crack a safe in Newtonville, Mass., but were unsuccessful. This was in the office of the Co-operative bank.

On Feb. 7 they journeyed to the same town to try Adams' improved method on the safe of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company. They bored holes in the safe and Adams sprinkled chemicals in them and then fired the explosive.

There was a terrific explosion. The partitions in the office were blown to pieces, part of the front of the building was demolished, and every window on that floor destroyed. The safe was completely wrecked. Adams says that the explosion was heard a half mile away. Many policemen, he says, got to the scene and surrounded the buildings.

The two burglars grabbed $770 from the ruins of the safe and made their escape by way of the roof. They came to this city to get nitro-glycerine and do a job or two on their way to New Orleans.

All of the facts in the Boston suburb robbery were verified by Chief of Police Richardson of Newton, who was present when Adams told his story. Both men will be taken back to Boston.

Won't Act Hurriedly.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—Secretary Carlisle has not directed to whom shall be awarded the bonds upon which default of payment of the first installment was made, nor will he do so until the exact amount of the defaults has been ascertained. There seems to be no reasonable doubt, however, that they will be awarded to J. P. Morgan and his associates under their blanket bid of $110.6877.

Preferred Death.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 19. — Charles S. Nazworthy, assignee of the American Lounge company, was removed from his trust yesterday by Judge Brown. He was cited to appear and produce his reports before noon. He disregarded the citation, and later in the day Nazworth was found in his room suffering from a fatal wound, self-inflicted with a pistol. His accounts are short.

AMESBURY, Mass., Feb. 19.—John Giffin, aged 14, was kicked to death by a horse in Burbank Bros.' stable yesterday, where he fed the animals every day.

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:

"I cannot begin to tell you what your remedies have done for me. I suffered for years with falling and neuralgia of the womb, kidney trouble and leucorrhœa in its worst form. There were times that I could not stand, was sick all over and in despair. I had not known a real well day for 15 years. I knew I must do something at once. I had tried physicians without receiving any lasting benefit. I began the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Now, I have used 9 bottles; my weight has increased 25 lbs. I tell every one to whom and what I owe my recovery, and there are 15 of my friends taking the Compound after seeing what it has done for me. Oh, if I had known of it sooner, and saved all these years of misery. I can recommend it to every woman."—KATE YODER, 408 W. 9th St., Cincinnati, O.

Should advice be required, write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., who has the utter confidence of all intelligent American women. She will promptly tell what to do, free of charge. Lydia E. ## SIXTY MINERS BURIED

By an Explosion and Cave-In In an Atchison Railroad Colliery.

Hundreds of Men Make Vain Attempts at Rescue.

None of the Entombed Men Likely to Reach the Surface Alive.

NEW CASTLE, Colo., Feb. 19.—The Vulcan coal mine, owned by the coal department of the Atchison Railroad company, was destroyed by a terrific explosion of gas yesterday, and over 60 miners were entombed.

All efforts at rescue were unsuccessful, and it will be many days before the bodies of the unfortunate workmen will be recovered.

For a time it was thought the coal in the great vein had become ignited, but last night the smoke and gas fumes had almost died away, and there is some slight hope entertained that fire will not add to the terrors of the present situation.

All business is practically suspended, and everyone is dazed at the awfulness of the sudden disaster. No warning was given the peaceful villagers until a sudden report as from 100 cannons resounded throughout the valley.

A throng of people were soon on the scene of the disaster, a distance of nearly two miles from New Castle. A glance was enough to dissipate any hope for the lives of the entombed men. The force of the explosion had caused a cave-in, and the tunnel and air courses were filled with the fallen rock, earth and timbers. Both fanhouses were wrecked, and the slope and vicinity were so full of debris, and the gas was so bad, that it was hard and dangerous work to begin the rescue.

Nevertheless, willing hands were soon at work, and five men went down as far as possible to ascertain the condition of the slope, and found it such that it will require much work to even reach the portion occupied by the laborers. The gas was so bad that after the party had gotten 200 feet, they were compelled to recede.

Willing Hearts and Hands.

The Consolidated mine shut down immediately on hearing of the disaster, and sent their entire force of 150 men to help the unfortunate ones. The construction of a temporary fanhouse was commenced at once, and the work of pumping fresh air into the mine will begin as soon as possible. It is hardly possible any of the miners are still alive. But the starting of the fans will be made as soon as possible, in the hope that if any have survived they may be kept alive until help reaches them.

The only man who got out of the mine at the time of the explosion was Edward Welch, who was near the mouth of the tunnel, and was blown out. His skull was fractured, arm broken, face badly cut and burned and all the hair burned from his face. He was breathing when found, but expired shortly after without showing consciousness.

Two young miners, Tom Connelly and James Petrie, met with narrow escapes. Their eyes becoming sore, they quit work in the mines and had just emerged from the tunnel when the explosion occurred.

As soon as the news of the explosion reached New Castle, Superintendent Blount closed the mines of the Colorado Fuel company, and taking all his miners, left for the Vulcan mines, where all are actively at work aiding in the attempts at rescue. There are two shafts in addition to the one in which the explosion took place. In the upper of these two the rescuers are in about 300 feet, and it is through this that air can be forced into some of the rooms.

In this main tunnel men are at work building a division with boards and canvas, through which air can be forced in on the one side and the foul gas driven out from the other. But this is slow work. The cause of the explosion was the ignition of gas.

The management insists that the reported loss is not as bad as first accounts say, but there are apparently no hope for a single survivor, according to the judgment of men who have been employed in the mine.

Settlement In Sight.

LONDON, Feb. 19.—John Morley, speaking at Forfar last evening, rejoiced that there was every indication of a solution of the Venezuelan difficulty in the creating of a joint commission. The Chronicle claims priority over G. W. Smalley in the suggestion of a joint commission, and hopes that a favorable response by the government will no longer be delayed. It says that if Mr. Morley was inspired in the hopes he expressed, we may be in sight of the goal at last.

"Pull" Costs Him Dearly.

MONTREAL, Feb. 19.—Judge Mathew yesterday rendered judgment in the case against Andre Senical, formerly queen's printer. The judgment condemns Senical to return to the government the sum of $12,000, which he had received at various times for using his influence in obtaining situations and contracts from the government for various people.

HALIFAX, Feb. 19.—Word comes from Fortune Bay, N. F., that a family of eight were recently found on the verge of starvation, not having eaten anything for several days. The children's hands had been tied behind their backs to prevent them from eating their own flesh.

Still No Choice.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Feb. 19.—In the legislature yesterday the rollcall showed 130 members present; necessary to a choice, 66. The ballot resulted: Blackburn, 60, Hunter, 60; McCreary, 3; Holt, 3; Carlisle, 2; Cochran, 1; Bate, 1. Only one ballot was taken.

DEATH HOVERS NEAR.

Ex-Governor Robinson of Massachusetts Stricken With Apoplexy.

Had Served His State In Many Capacities.

Public and Private Trusts Filled With Fidelity and Honor.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Feb. 20.—Ex-Governor George D. Robinson was stricken with apoplexy, and is lying critically sick at his Chicopee home. Death may come at any time. The news came as a great surprise to the community.

Governor Robinson was trying a case in the superior court Tuesday afternoon and raised a point of law which Judge Dewey took under consideration. The trial went over until yesterday.

While walking to his office from the courtrooms with his son, he became confused and acted so sick that his son summoned a carriage and took him home. Doctors were summoned, but the serious nature of the case did not appear until yesterday.

George Dexter Robinson, son of Charles and Mary (Davis) Robinson, was born in Lexington, Jan. 20, 1834. He passed through the common district schools of his native town, attended Lexington academy one year and was one year in Hopkins classical school, Cambridge. Having fitted for college, he entered Harvard and was graduated therefrom in the class of 1856. While pursuing his college course he taught district schools during two winters in Lexington.

Immediately after graduating he became principal of the high school at Chicopee, and held the position until March, 1865. He then studied law in Charlestown with his brother, Hon. Charles Robinson, and was admitted to the bar in March, 1866. He immediately opened an office in Chicopee.

He was first married in Lexington Nov. 24, 1859, to Hannah E., daughter of William and Mary (Pearce) Stevens, who died Sept. 5, 1864. He was again married in Lexington July 11, 1867, to Susan E., daughter of Joseph F. and Susan (Mulliken) Simonds. By the first marriage he has one child, Walter Stevens Robinson, born March 22, 1861, and by the second, Annie Florence Robinson, born Oct. 4, 1869.

He was a representative in the legislature in 1874, senator in 1876, representative in the Forty-fifth, Forty-sixth, Forty-seventh and Forth-eighth United States congresses.

Thrice Elected Governor.

He was elected governor of Massachusetts in 1884 and re-elected in 1885 and 1886. In 1887 Governor Robinson was tendered by President Cleveland an appointment on the interstate commerce commission, and declined it. In 1889 he was appointed by President Harrison commissioner to the Cherokee and other Indian tribes to receive title to lands in the Indian Territory, but declined the office.

Governor Robinson has never been invited to a public or private trust that, having been accepted, has not been filled with honor. In the higher councils of the nation he left a record for an earnest, manly and broad statesmanship, which has reflected infinite credit upon the state which has a generous remembrance of his loyal service.

The Republicans of the state ofttimes refer with pride to the wonderful campaign made by him when a candidate for governor against Benjamin F. Butler. Night after night, during the entire campaign, he followed the doughty Lowell politician over the commonwealth, replying to the arguments made on the previous evening, and so convincing were his speeches that it is often said, "He talked himself into the gubernatorial chair."

Ex-Governor Robinson has won no little fame as a lawyer. For years, even after he had laid down the reins of office, his face was a familiar one at many important hearings before the legislature on Beacon Hill.

Governor Robinson played an important part in the Lizzie Borden trial, having been retained to defend her in the trial that has become famous the country over. Greatly to his efforts, it is believed, an acquittal was secured.

ON BEACON HILL.

The Fish and Game Commission — Improvements at Falmouth.

BOSTON, Feb. 20.—The most interesting hearing at the state house yesterday was upon the question of granting state aid to the amount of $50,000 to the Boston Emergency hospital. Very much was said in praise of the institution, but the testimony was not all one way. The committee on banks and banking considered several matters of especial interest to persons interested in co-operative banking.

In the senate the committee on fisheries and game reported back the bill making appropriations for salaries and expenses of the fish and game commission, rejecting the amendments offered by Mr. Maccabe. Mr. Maccabe offered certain amendments making the appropriation for the compensation and expenses of the commissioners $32,000, instead of $35,000, and the appropriation for current expenses to carry out the laws relative to fish and game $52,000, instead of $55,000. The bill, with these amendments, was then referred to the fish and game committee, who reported that the bill ought to pass without the amendments.

The committee on harbors and public lands reported several bills authorizing the town of Falmouth to appropriate money for the construction and maintenance of a breakwater and to construct certain bridges.

Reports of committees: Towns—A bill authorizing the town of Cottage City to appropriate annually not exceeding $500 for public amusements. Agriculture—A bill requiring docked horses to be provided with a netting in June, July, August and September. Roads and bridges—A bill providing for an apportionment of betterment assessments on real estate. Street railways—A bill authorizing the Lowell and Reading Street Railway company to construct, maintain and operate its railway in Billerica, Reading and Wilmington.

Trying to Keep Out of Court.

DOVER, N. H., Feb. 20.—A petition of Receiver Whittemore of the defunct Dover National bank and the Guarantee Company of North America, of Montreal, for a postponement of the case against the Guarantee company, brought by Receiver Whittemore to recover $20,000, the amount of the bonds of the late defaulting Cashier Abbott, was granted by Judge Chase yesterday, and the case will come up for trial in September. The petition is the result of a proposition made by the defendant looking toward a settlement of the case outside of the courts.

The Boys in Blue.

BANGOR, Me., Feb. 20.—The department of Maine's Grand Army yesterday voted to hold the encampment in Lewiston in 1897. Great excitement attended the election of department commander. Colonel L. D. Carver of Rockland was elected on the third ballot, and the election was made unanimous. The other officers elected were: Senior vice commander, William Fennelly, Bar Harbor; junior vice commander, James J. Chase; medical director, Dr. John H. Macgregor, Enfield; chaplain, J. W. Webster, Newport; council of administration, G. B. Haskell, Charles H. Hooper, John B. Carson.

NORWICH, Conn., Feb. 20.—The 29th encampment of Connecticut's Grand Army opened yesterday. Reports show a membership of 6208, a loss during the year of 425. There are now 69 posts in the state. The loss by death during the past year was 121. The finances of the department are in sound condition.

A Nine Days' Trance.

AMESBURY, Mass., Feb. 20.—Mrs. Elizabeth Crabtree, living on the Hampton road, had a severe attack of diphtheria in January. Lately she has complained of severe pains around the heart, and one week ago Monday, while seated in her chair, her head dropped forward on her breast, and she appeared like one dead. Dr. Colcord applied restoratives, which, however, had no effect. On Tuesday her eyes opened and she then partook of some nourishment. Although in a weakened condition, her ultimate recovery is assured.

Death to Be Investigated.

NEWINGTON, N. H., Feb. 20.—This town is somewhat aroused by the suspicious death in Boston of Nellie McDonough, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. McDonough of this town. The parents first learned of their daughter's death by letter from a Boston undertaker, asking if he should forward the girl's body. John McDonough, a brother of the girl, went to Boston and returned with the body. Dr. W. O. Junkins made an autopsy, and he notified the coroner of suspicious circumstances, and an investigation will follow.

The Weir Murder.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Feb. 20.—Agnes Morton was arraigned in court yesterday, charged with an assault upon Kate Weir, which resulted in the latter's death. To the charge she said: "I don't remember killing her, but I do remember she bit my finger and I hit her in the face." Medical Examiner Howe performed an autopsy on the body of Kate Weir yesterday. They decided that death was the result of injuries she received in the quarrel with Agnes Morton.

Some communication of local interest;

The "Social Realm";

A piece of music, and

Other specialties, in addition to the local and telegraphic news.

THERE APPEARS to be nothing ambiguous in the manner in which Mr. Baker, a Democrat, and Mr. Whiting, a Republican, speak upon the merits of the postoffice controversy at Wollaston and the uncalled for interference of "outsiders." It is evident that Postmaster Wilde has administered the affairs of the office so satisfactorily to the residents of that place, that a large majority regardless of politics are petitioning for his re-appointment.

The insinuation in Mr. McGrath's letter that our Wollaston correspondent in summing up the case in Thursday's LEDGER had reflected upon Mr. Burns' family is wholly unwarranted, as it is quite well known that Mr. Whiting is a neighbor and friend of the Burns' and holds them in the highest esteem, as do all of their neighbors. Mr. Whiting, in writing up the case, following his usual custom, presented the facts as they appeared.

Mr. Burns, in placing the management of his postoffice campaign in the hands of people who do not live in Wollaston, or have any direct interest in its postoffice or welfare, has evidently made a serious political blunder. It cannot be gainsaid that people who do not live there have no business to interfere with its postoffice controversy.

It now looks as though Mr. McGrath and his conferees had exposed themselves just a trifle too much to the enemy. In so doing they have exposed their most vulnerable point to attack.

Peacemaker Assaulted.

There was an Italian party on California avenue Tuesday evening, and when the affair broke up and the parties started for home there was a dispute which ended in two of the party coming to blows. Cesidio Coletti, another of the party, attempted to act as peacemaker and he stepped between the two men to separate them, but his good intentions ended in the usual way, for some one hit him with a black jack, so he says, which left a big hole in the top of his head. He reported the matter to the police, Wednesday, and they are now looking for the alleged assailant.

First Banquet.

Between forty and fifty members of the Granite City Club had a social time at the United States Hotel, Boston, last evening. It was the occasion of their first annual dinner, and it proved a grand success.

The members commenced to gather about six o'clock, and at seven the time designated for the feast, forty-four were ready to take seats at the festive board.

After enjoying an excellent bill of fare, which this noted hotel is capable of furnishing, Mr. Joseph C. Morse, president of the club, called the members to order, and expressed his thanks for the pleasure it gave him in seeing so many members present, and the success of this, the first annual dinner of the club.

A short and pleasing address by His Honor, the Mayor of Quincy, was then listened to with much attention. Short impromptu speeches were in order by officers and members of the club, followed by singing and stories; and two hours flew by quickly.

The members did not begin to think of home until President Morse announced that the 10.15 train would leave in fifteen minutes; then all began to fancy it was time to start; and after a closing chorus, this social gathering came to an end.

NORFOLK CONFERENCE.

The Winter Meeting Being Held Today in This City.

The winter meeting of the Norfolk Conference of Unitarian churches is being held today with the First church of this city.

There was an unusually large attendance at the morning service, delegates being present from all the churches of the county, and much interest is manifested as this is the first conference for eight months, the fall conference having been omitted as a day could not be found on which there was not some other church gathering.

The morning exercises were to commence at 10.30 but owing to the lateness of the outward trains it was half an hour later when the exercises opened by a devotional service which was conducted by Rev. A. G. Pettengill of Hyde Park and consisted of singing, prayers, and the scripture lesson which was from Luke 22, beginning at the 39th verse.

Rev. Mr. Pettengill then spoke briefly taking for his subject: Prayerfulness,—A national characteristic of people striving for great ends." Brief remarks were also made by several of the clergymen present on the same subject.

At 11.30 the conference was called to order by Rev. Richard C. Humphreys of Dorchester, who said the purpose of the conference was to look after the best interest of the parish. He then referred to the loss by fire of the First church at Dorchester, and said the people of the church were not disheartened or dismayed. They are going to rebuild at once on the old lines of the old meeting house a good old fashioned meeting house just such a home as the people want to build and pay for and not have any debt.

The election of officers and other business was deferred until the afternoon session, on account of the absence of Rev. E. O. Q. Osgood, the secretary.

Then came an interesting address by Rev. John Cuckson of Boston on "England and America—in Union and in Conflict."

This was followed by a discussion opened by Rev. Rush R. Shippen of Brockton.

At 1 o'clock the conference took a recess for lunch.

This afternoon's programme was as follows:

2 15,—Business resumed.

2 30,—Essay by Mr. George W. Stone, Treasurer of the American Unitarian Association, on "The Church and its Needs." Rev. James E. Bagley of Wollaston will lead in the discussion.

4.00,—Adjournment.

COUNTY FINANCES.

Some Interesting Figures Which Need Little Comment.

To the Editors of the Ledger:

House document No. 100 is exceedingly interesting to the taxpayers of Norfolk County. It is a classification of estimates of county taxes of 1896, together with the county debts, years of maturity, rates of interest, transfers, etc. Few know of these documents, and fewer still take the trouble to send for a copy. The matter of expenditures in Norfolk County, however, is receiving attention from prominent citizens in different towns in the county. An interview with Judge French criticising the county commissioners has been promptly answered by the board, but the figures in the reports will be of interest.

One cognizant with the cost of the remodelled court house at Dedham is struck with the large expenditure for "Repairs and Furnishing of County Buildings." The amount spent in 1895 being $84 304 95 in face of an appropriation of but $20 000.

Further vestigation shows the balance of $40,639 95 Jan. 1, 1895, to have been reduced to $8,255.04. But the appropriation and cash in treasury were not enough, for one finds in House document No. 100, on page 15, the following large transfers, the reason in each case being: "It is necessary and expedient and the interests of the county demand that the transfers be made." They show that a total of $24,000 was transferred to "Repairs and Furnishing County Buildings," viz:

$1,500 from truant school to books, stationery, etc.

$3,000 from criminal costs to miscellaneous.

$1,000 from civil court expenses to miscellaneous.

$2,000 from civil court expenses to repairs and furnishing county buildings.

$500 from salaries county officers to repairs and furnishing county buildings.

$500 from support of prisoners to repairs and furnishing county buildings.

$2,000 from criminal costs, to miscellaneous.

$3,000 from support of prisoners to repairs and furnishing county buildings.

$4,000 from highways and bridges, to repairs and furnishing county buildings.

$5,000 from truant school, to books, stationery, etc.

It does not take much space in the county book to tell of the expenditures in 1895 for "repairs and furnishings of county buildings," and one has to guess for what the different firms were paid. This is all the information that is given:

| | |
|---|---|
| H. N. Bates Machine Co. | $1,128.97 |

A county debt for Norfolk is something new, as the county has been, until up to a year ago, practically free from debt. There is now a debt of $120,000 which was borrowed at 3 1-2 per cent. and upon which the interest amounts this year to $4,200. It matures as follows:

Q. H. S. DEBATING SO

Prize Contest the Subject Und... Discussion Yesterday.

President Saunders opened the meeting of the Q. H. S. Debating society on Wednesday, and Secretary Walsh offered his report. Miss Sweeney, '96 reported as critic.

The entertainment followed:

Recitation, Selection from "Hamlet," Rose Coyle, '96.

Nominations were made for officers but the only choice was the election of Miss Burke as Vice President. The nominations:

President,—Mr. Wilkins, '97; Miss Rothwell, '96; Mr. Wilder, '96; no election.

Vice President,—Miss Ramsey, '96; Miss Mary Pitts, '96; Miss Burke, '97.

Secretary,—Miss Joss, '97; Miss Hayes, '97; Mr. Northcott, '96.

For Treasurer,—Miss White, '97; Mr. Nichols, '97; Miss Emma Healey, '96.

The board of decision on last week's debate decided in favor of the negative.

The new debate was begun: "Resolved, That all Prize Contests at the Quincy High School Ought to be Discontinued."

The affirmative was taken by: Miss Scharnagel, Miss Smith, Miss Thomas.

Those in the negative were: Miss Thompson, Miss Troup, Miss Walker, Miss White.

The debate was spirited and many arguments pro and con were adduced: It will be concluded next week.

School Committee Should Build.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

The action of the City Council on the school house matter as on Monday night as reported in Tuesday's LEDGER would indicate that the new buildings will not be begun for some time.

Now as it is an undispnted fact that two new school houses are absolutely necessary for occupancy next September, and it will require five or six months to complete after work has begun, all will agree that if we are to have them ready by that time something should be done at once.

The School Committee have already approved several plans, any one of which I have no doubt would be acceptable to the citizens. Mr. Moxon says Kingston's plans are good. Mr. Kingston thinks Moxon's plans are all right, and Mr. Sprague is dead sure that Randlett & Howe's plans are just the thing; so we have it on excellent authority that any one of these plans would be desirable.

Now, as the present Council seems disposed to devote "an undue amount of oratory" to the matter and may consume months in wrangling, I would suggest that the School Committee proceed at once to let contracts in the name of the city for the erection of two school houses according to the plans which they think are the best adapted to the needs, as I am informed they have the power under State laws.

This will relieve the Council of all responsibility in the matter and they can merely appropriate the money to pay the bills.

Yours truly,
WOLLASTON PARK.

"Boston Vegetable Vapor."

It is claimed that, while it has the required properties of ether, chloroform, nitrous oxide gas, it lacks the disagreeable and dangerous qualities of these drugs. It is certainly a boon to suffering humanity to be relieved of the nausea too often following the administering of sedatives of the old school.—Boston Transcript.

Shaken Up by Explosion.

JOHANNESBURG, Feb. 20.—An explosion of dynamite occurred at Vledendorp, and the poor quarter of the town was blown to pieces. Hundreds of houses are in ruins, and the havoc wrought is fearful. A number of persons were killed, and the populace turned out en masse and are working to rescue those who may be buried in the ruins. The windows of every house in Johannesburg were broken by the force of the explosion. The dynamite which caused the catastrophe filled eight trucks, which were being shunted. The explosion caused an immense hole, 30 feet deep, to be formed. Forty dead, nearly all terribly mutilated, have already been taken from the ruins, but the work of searching the debris has scarcely begun. Two hundred of the most severely injured were admitted to the hospital, where several died. It is believed that only a few white persons were killed.

Weyler's Command.

HABANA, Feb. 20.—The governor of Matanzas has issued a circular stating that the captain general has decided that the planters in that province must start grinding cane at once, and that they should organize, at their own expense, an armed body of men for the protection of their property, which force, it is added, will be assisted by the government guerrillas and the regular army. The circular makes it understood that it is the duty of the planters to help the government in this manner. The latter will pay the guerrillas for their service, and furnish the necessary arms and ammunition for the plantation guards.

Awarded to Morgan.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—Secretary Carlisle has made this announcement: "Messrs. J. P. Morgan & Co. and associates, under their bid for $100,000,000, of United States 4 per cent bonds of 1925 made in accordance with the recent circulars of the secretary of the treasury, are entitled to receive bonds of the face value of about $4,700,000 in addition to those of which they have already been notified. Exact figures cannot be stated until returns from various sub-treasuries are fully verified." This will give Mr. Morgan about $38,000,000 of the bond issue.

Youngsters Looking For War.

HALIFAX, Feb. 20.—Students of the Dalhouse university, filled with martial spirit, are forming two companies of militia, which will be drafted into the Sixty-third Battalion of Rifles. Each company will be 50 or 60 strong, and twice the requisite number have already volunteered. The Canadian government has been asked to approve of the scheme, which has been in progress ever since President Cleveland's message to congress on the Venezuelan dispute.

Currency Talk.

BOSTON, Feb. 20.—Congressman Walker's banking bill was explained by its author at the chamber of commerce last evening. He claimed that it meant cheaper money and greater freedom in banking. Under it, he said, banks would issue and be responsible for the redemption of every dollar of paper money. It would result in profit to banks and a saving to the people.

From Sluggers' Headquarters.

Fitzsimmons is certainly in superb shape, and reiterates his firm belief that the fight will be a very short one, and that he will be an easy winner inside of five rounds.

Quincy Daily Ledger

ESTABLISHED IN 1889.

The ONLY DAILY in the ONLY CITY in Norfolk County, Massachusetts.

Published Every Evening, Sundays and Holidays Excepted, At No. 115 HANCOCK ST., City of Quincy, Mass., by

GEORGE W. PRESCOTT

Successors to Greg[illegible]

The Congregational investigating committee appointed to investigate the charges of immorality against Rev. A. H. Bradford, now fully organized and ready to proceed with the actual trial of the accused clergyman. M. S. Woodward, representative of the First Congregational church, of which Dr. Brown is pastor, before the council, was appointed judge advocate when the council had been convened. The committee of charges represented that four charges had been preferred against Dr. Brown by Sarah B. Cooper, assistant pastor of the church, and by her daughter, Hattie Cooper.

The charges, of which proof was promised by those making them, are as follows:

First—That the letters were written as alleged by Miss Overman, of which Dr. Brown was compromised, are genuine.

Second—That Dr. Brown, in his associations with Mrs. Albertine Stockton, was unministerial in his conduct.

Third—That Dr. Brown had been guilty of intimidation toward Mrs. Lena Blanchard, a non-church member, who voted against Brown at a recent congregational meeting, when resolutions of confidence in the pastor were introduced.

Fourth—That Dr. Brown was concerned in a concerned in a conspiracy with Miss Overman to spirit Mrs. Tunnel away, so that she could not testify against him before the council.

Secondary Charges

were also introduced, charging Dr. Brown with adultery with Miss Overman; conduct prejudicial to the church in paying $500 to Mrs. Davidson to avoid exposure of his alleged liason with Miss Overman; conduct unbecoming to a minister in recommendation of Mrs. Davidson as an exemplary Christian woman after the date on which he paid her the sum of $500.

Both reports were accepted and entered as records of the council. Letters from Mrs. Cooper and daughter were also read. These communications merely reiterated the charges which had been formally preferred against Brown. Dr. Brown asked that references to Miss Overman in the letters be stricken from the records as being unjust and damaging to that young woman by their utterances.

The judge advocate said he could not go out to find witnesses if none would voluntarily appear. He thought those preferring charges or having evidence against Brown should present it. After a long discussion, in which Rev. Dr. Williams of the council said if there was no evidence against Brown the council would have to acquit him, it was decided to adjourn until evening to procure testimony for the prosecution. It was decided that all witnesses should be sworn before being allowed to testify.

At the evening session the detailed statement of Mrs. Sarah B. Cooper was read. From this statement it is evident that Mrs. Cooper's main reliance in the case against Dr. Brown is Mrs. Stockton, who says Dr. Brown assaulted her.

Mrs. Stockton visited Mrs. Cooper on Feb. 6 and detailed her story, and again on Feb. 17, assuring Mrs. Cooper that she would testify against Dr. Brown in spite of the strenuous efforts to persuade her to remain quiet.

Pleasure Turned to Grief.

LISBON, Feb. 20.—At a masked ball given by the Artists' club at San Taren, fire broke out shortly before midnight and spread with great rapidity. A terrible panic followed the first alarm, and all present rushed for the exits, which were soon jammed with terrified people. Despairing of escape by any other means, men, women and children then jumped from the windows, seriously injuring themselves. Friends of the revelers rushed into the burning building later to aid in the work of rescue, and many of them were caught by the flames before they could make their way out again. Thus far 40 bodies have been recovered.

Encouraging to Insurgents.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—A local paper prints an interview with Dr. Guiteras of the Philadelphia Cuban junta, who says that a syndicate has made an offer to take $15,000,000 of Cuban bonds if the insurgents are granted belligerent rights by the United States. The price the syndicate will pay, he says, will be about 40 cents on the dollar, giving the Cubans about $6,000,000. If the insurgents succeed, he asserts, not only will the new bonds be paid, but those issued during the 10 years' war.

Waller's Pardon Made Out.

PARIS, Feb. 20.—The pardon of John L. Waller, convicted by a court-martial in the island of Madagascar of illegally communicating with the Hovas and sentenced to 20 years' imprisonment, has been sent to President Faure for the latter's signature. The present action is due to the representations made by the United States government in the prisoner's behalf.

Going Backward.

ANNAPOLIS, Feb. 20.—The houe of representatives yesterday practically killed civil service reform in Maryland by passing the Bruce bill, with a clause attached referring the whole matter to a vote of the people at the election in November. A bitter fight was made against the bill, and the referendum clause was designed to kill.

Law Should Step In.

HAVERHILL, Mass., Feb. 20.—An epidemic of diphtheria in the section of the city occupied by the poorer classes will probably necessitate the closing of several schools. Owing to the city's non-compliance with the law for the establishment of a contagious hospital, it is impossible to establish quarantine regulations.

A Disagreement.

TAUNTON, Mass., Feb. 20.—The jury disagreed in the manslaughter case against Caroline Therchera of New Bedford, yesterday, and her bail was reduced from $10,000 to $3000. She hit Antone Soares over the head with a stick of wood and he died shortly afterward.

Murder and Suicide.

MILWAUKEE, Feb. 20.—Jacob Moser, aged 65 years, yesterday shot and killed Marguerite Senger, wife of a neighbor, and then committed suicide. The tragedy was the result of a quarrel.

WOLLASTON DANCE.

A Brilliant Subscription Leap Party Last Evening.

One of the most elegant [illegible] been given in the city [illegible] subscription leap year dance [illegible] given by Mr. and Mrs. Eugene [illegible] Hall.

Doctors are often handicapped by the [illegible]ere fact that when treating the diseases of women, they suggest and insist on "examinations" and "local treatment." A great many of them do not know that this is absolutely unnecessary. Many a woman has been thrown into a dangerous state of nervous excitement by the mere suggestion of such treatment. Many women lie to the doctor. That sounds hard, but it is undoubtedly true. They know that if they admit certain symptoms that the doctor will inevitably insist on an "examination." They do not give him all the facts in the case, and so he works in the dark. Quite often the doctor is too busy and too hurried to make the necessary effort to obtain the facts. He frequently treats symptoms for what they appear to be on the surface, when the real cause and the real sickness is deeper and more dangerous. A derangement of the distinctly feminine organs will derange the whole body. The woman herself may not know exactly what is the matter with her, but whenever she is sick, there are two things she should look out for first. One is what is called "female weakness;" the other is constipation, for these two things frequently go together. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is designed for the cure of diseases and disorders of women, and it does cure them. It has been performing its healing mission for 30 years, and tens of thousands of women have been made happy by it. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are for constipation, and contingent ills. Druggists sell them, but sometimes in well meaning ignorance, they will try to sell you something else. There is nothing "just the same" or "just as good." The druggist who tells you there is, is either mistaken or dishonest.

If you care to know more about your own body, send 21 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only, and you will receive absolutely free a copy of Dr. Pierce's 1,008 page book, "Common Sense Medical Adviser." Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo N. Y.

THINK SON IS INSANE.

Young Adams' Parents Ask For a Suspension of Judgment.

Stevens Is Identified as an Old Prison Bird.

Boston Police Anxious to Ascertain the Whereabouts of Moore.

BOSTON, Feb. 20.—John P. Adams of Auburndale has given out a card for publication, in which he says:

"In the great grief which has come to my wife and myself by the alleged act of our son, J. Irving Adams, I ask for the publication of this statement in lieu of requests for interviews by reporters, who have shown us the greatest kindness and sympathy.

"Some six or seven years ago symptoms of insanity appeared in our son, which developed in a greater or less degree, and at no time since have we considered him fully sane, and at times clearly insane, almost beyond control. We have done all in our power to keep this knowledge within our family, hoping that such symptoms would disappear. While we don't think it wise, at present, to detail his mental condition, the proofs are ample and we believe conclusive.

"Knowing these things, which have caused us for several years untold and constant anxiety, we would ask a fair and discerning public to accord to them their just weight."

Young Adams Identified.

J. Irving Adams was positively identified yesterday by an intimate friend of the Adams family as the youthful burglar now under arrest in New York charged with the burglary at the office of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, Newton, and the attempted burglary of the Newtonville Co-operative bank.

The identification was brought about by means of a photograph of Adams taken in New York for the rogues' gallery. The photograph was sent to Chief Inspector Watts of the bureau of criminal investigation, reaching him yesterday.

The chief at once detailed Inspector Wolf to get the information wanted. No member of the family could be seen, but at the State street office of the boy's father, Mr. Keeler, the friend mentioned, was found. A glance at the photograph was all that was necessary. "Yes, that's the boy," he said.

The information was promptly wired to New York and young Adams will be held until the Newton authorities get there with the necessary requisition papers.

Mr. Adams, the boy's father, sent a representative to New York yesterday to look after legal matters. It is not intended to make any fight over the requisition papers. The fact that Irving has talked makes it difficult to form a good defense. This is fully realized both by the boy's counsel and his parents, and from the statement given out it would seem as if a plea of leniency would be the thing decided upon.

A Bad Man.

Chief Inspector Watts yesterday succeeded in establishing the identity of the burglar arrested with young Adams in New York, who is booked under the name of Thomas Stevens. His name is Myron J. C. Dolloss, an old-time burglar, who is known to the prison officials of Massachusetts.

He has served eight years in the state prison at Charlestown, and the identification of the chief was corroborated by several old prison officials who were there when Dolloss was "doing time." He is a professional all-round crook, and considered one of the best "workers" in the country.

Dolloss was arrested in this city on Dec. 28, 1881, by Inspectors Houghton, Geraughty and Knox. The charge was burglary. It was alleged that he entered several dwellings in Cambridge and Brookline, and a strong case was weaved. On March 21, 1882, he was convicted in Cambridge, and sentenced on three counts for breaking and entering at Cambridge. He got three years on two counts and two years on a third count, making eight years in all.

He was discharged from the state prison on Nov. 26, 1888, having an allowance for good behavior given him.

Since Dolloss' release from the state prison he has been a wanderer. He has traveled from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean, and according to the police has kept at his profession.

In police parlance he is known as a "strong-arm man," having powerful muscles and plenty of nerve. Whenever arrested a revolver has been found on him, and extreme precaution has been taken in each case against resistance, for the officers know him to be a desperate character, who would fight hard to escape imprisonment.

Stevens is a clean-looking fellow, in the parlance of the police, and one would take him for a "drummer." In fact, that is what he represents to the police he is, and vows he will make it hot for the police before he leaves New York.

More Missing.

In Boston police circles the boy's crimes and his contemplated tour of safe "cracking" are the sole topics of discussion, especially that part of his story which relates to Langdon W. Moore. Where Moore is the police want to know in the worst way. There is no charge against him so far, but the chief inspector wants him to give some explanation of the things which Adams says are true.

Moore informed the police years ago that he was out of the burglary business, and proved to the satisfaction of the police that he was telling the truth. From that time on until the present time, whenever a story came out reflecting on his name, Moore always called at police headquarters and set himself right.

Many stories besides the one told by Adams are in circulation, and they are all against Moore. Notwithstanding these stories, there are several inspectors who believe that Moore will set matters right. These inspectors believe that Adams' head was turned by Moore's book, and not by the old bank burglar himself. They say that Moore is too clever to be caught in any such affair as Adams is mixed up with, and predict that later developments will prove the truth of their statements.

KILLED A LITTLE GIRL

And Buried Her Body In Cellar of a Stable.

History of the Crime and Detection and Trial of the Murderer.

BOSTON, Feb. 21.—This morning Angus D. Gilbert died on the scaffold for his murder in April last of little Alice Sterling. The murderer died with perfect calmness. His nerve was wonderful, and he appeared to be really anxious to have the thing over with.

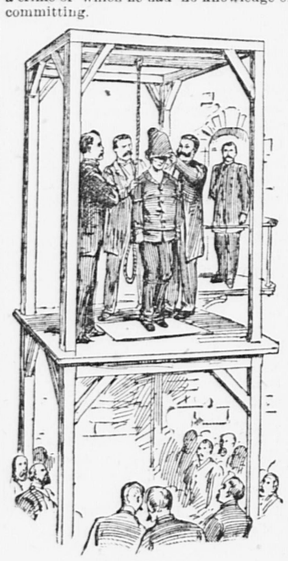

Sheriff O'Brien turned the body of Gilbert over to his sister. The body will be prepared for burial at an undertaker's, and will be interred in a Boston cemetery.

Between 9 and 10 this morning, dressed in a broadcloth cutaway, standing collar and black scarf, he attended a religious service, conducted by his spiritual adviser, Rev. F. A. Warfield. Miss Jennie Gilbert, Lawyer Doherty, Sheriff O'Brien and a few others were present. The services lasted about an hour.

As soon as the last fervent prayer had been uttered, and the condemned man had said his last goodbys, Sheriff O'Brien read the death warrant, and announced that in pursuance to it the execution would take place.

Gilbert mounted the scaffold, the sheriff's assistants pinioned his arms and legs, the fatal noose was placed about his neck and the black cap drawn. Then the drop fell. Angus Gilbert was hanged by the neck until dead, and his soul passed into the great beyond.

No visitors were admitted to the Charles-street jail last night, and the condemned man retired early to his couch for his last sleep on earth. In one of his last interviews yesterday he said that he was satisfied that he would undergo execution for a crime of which he had no knowledge of committing.

THE EXECUTION.

The killing of Alice May Sterling was one of the most revolting murders ever perpetrated in Massachusetts. The discovery of the mutilated body of the child in the cellar of the Emmons barn on the afternoon of April 13 caused almost unprecedented horror and indignation in Boston and vicinity.

Enticed from her father's barber shop to the Emmons premises on Savin Hill, the little girl was subjected to horrible abuse and then hacked with an ax until her body presented a horrible sight. Her body was then consigned to a hastily constructed grave in the barn cellar, and the murderer resumed his customary labors without displaying the slightest feeling of remorse or agitation.

The history of the crime and the detection of the murderer are as follows: At about 1 o'clock on April 10 last Angus D. Gilbert called at Mr. Sterling's shop on Dorchester avenue. Gilbert was on intimate terms with Mr. Sterling, and it was his custom to visit the barber shop whenever in that vicinity. He had just come from the city proper and was feeling in the "pink of condition," or so he expressed himself when accosted by Mr. Sterling. Little Alice was playing before the barber shop when Gilbert appeared. Gilbert professed to be very fond of the child. It was his habit to take her in his arms and kiss her. He caressed her as usual on this occasion, stroking her silken curls before passing into the shop.

No symptoms of intoxication were manifested by Gilbert. He sat down in the barber shop and related in a humorous vein the good time he had had in Boston that morning. It does not appear that murder was in his mind then. Gilbert was not in the shop long before little Alice entered. She sat upon his knee and she seemed pleased with his show of affection.

After she left the shop to play upon the sidewalk Gilbert proceeded to the Emmons premises and do his chores about the place. Half an hour later Mr. Sterling missed his daughter. He no longer heard her childish prattle and thought she had called upon one of the neighbors, who all loved the little girl, and she frequently visited them. When an hour passed and Alice did not return he became alarmed and called at every house which she frequented. His search was unavailing, and no tidings could be gained.

That night a general alarm was sent out by the police, and an investigation was called for at once. Mystery enshrouded the fate of the child the day following her disappearance, the authorities being unable to gain the faintest clew of her whereabouts. Rumors of all sorts circulated the district. Some persons believed the child had been kidnapped.

It was not, however, until it was reported that the missing child had been seen in the company of a man, going in the direction of the marshes, that the theory of murder found credence. The whole community were aroused.

Neighbors and strangers sympathized with the parents of the little one, but no person seemed to manifest greater or more genuine grief than Gilbert. He joined the searchers and offered all kinds of suggestions, being apparently most anxious to discover a clew that would lead to the identity of the man last seen with Alice.

He was diligent and collected in his work and the most careful observer failed to detect anything in his manner beyond sincerity of purpose. Yet his hands were stained with the life-blood of Alice Sterling.

On the afternoon of April 12 Mr. Sterling, impelled by a strange desire, visited the marshes adjoining the Emmons premises. Since the story that Alice had been seen in the company of a man, he had had a premonition that his daughter had been murdered and that the body had been hidden in one of the holes or pools about Dorchester bay. His course led him to the Emmons boathouse.

While wandering in that vicinity he was tapped on the shoulder, and on turning beheld Angus Gilbert. No suspicion that the man before him was the murderer of his child entered Mr. Sterling's mind. Gilbert inquired if any light had been thrown on the mystery. Upon being answered in the negative, he feigned sorrow and disappointment, upbraiding the police for their slowness in ascertaining the cause of Alice's disappearance. When asked if he had any idea who this man seen with Alice could be, the murderer shook his head with the remark that he was "probably a tramp."

Gilbert's Awful Suspense.

The two men stood for a while in silence, broken finally by Gilbert inviting his companion to his room in the Emmons barn. As has already been told, Gilbert worked for Mrs. Emmons in conjunction with his labors at the Savin Hill station. The room to which he invited Mr. Sterling was used by him as a sleeping chamber. When near the barn Mr. Sterling turned, as if intending to enter the premises by the cellar door. Gilbert, pale as death, grabbed him by an arm and turned him from his course, remarking that the cellar door was fastened and could not be opened from the outside.

There was a motive in Gilbert's conduct. Within that cellar and within a few feet of the door was conclusive evidence that murder had been committed. The murderer will seldom take chances, and Gilbert foresaw the risk he would have to assume should Mr. Sterling pass through the cellar door. Every act of Gilbert during this brief period was the act of a frightened criminal. Mr. Sterling allowed himself to be controlled by Gilbert, and both passed into the barn through the main door, on the floor landing.

Up the narrow stairs and into Gilbert's room they made their way. Gilbert drew up a chair for Mr. Sterling and then drew from a case two bottles of lager beer. Had Mr. Sterling been favored with the gift of second sight he would have seen something that would have made him as rigid as a statue. Below him the cold, damp earth covered the mutilated body of his darling Alice. Only a few thin boards hid the evidence of Gilbert's crime from the father of the victim. He was in the house of the dead; but he did not know that.

Gilbert watched Mr. Sterling with hawk-like eyes during his stay in that little room. Every motion on his part was followed by the murderer. When he arose to examine a book on the old-fashioned dresser, Gilbert sprang to his feet and brought it to him. Had Mr. Sterling examined the drawers in that old-fashioned piece of furniture he would have found clothing saturated with the blood of his little girl.

Mr. Sterling and Gilbert left the premises together, the latter going to the Savin Hill station. The murderer worked at his post that night, unconscious that the authorities were steadily accumulating evidence against him. His demeanor, so far as his co-laborer could see, was the same as usual.

Tell-Tale Blood Spots.

On the morning of April 13 he went to the Emmons barn for breakfast. He gave no signs of being "mentally irresponsible" when he began his labors on the Emmons place that morning, nor was he apparently deranged in mind when he encountered the servants, from whom he tried to hide the telltale blood spots on his trousers. Gilbert had sought by every sane means to cover up his crime.

By noon of the same day the police had tightened a chain of circumstantial evidence against him. It was like working in the dark at first, but once under way, the officers experienced clear sailing, and that afternoon strong evidence was established of Gilbert's participation in the crime.

The clew was found, witnesses were unearthed who saw him in company with Alice on the fatal day, who saw him leading the innocent child to her death. Inch by inch his movements were traced from the time he left the Sterling barber shop until he crossed into the Emmons estate, to within about 40 feet of the barn.

When Gilbert reappeared that afternoon he was placed under arrest on suspicion of being the murderer. He betrayed no emotion when accused of the crime, nor did he exhibit any signs of weakness when confronted with the bloodstained garments of his victim. It was some hours after Gilbert's arrest when the body was found in its grewsome grave in the barn cellar.

The First Clew.

The disclosure of the bloody apparel of the little girl in his dressing case first direct warning that the officers received of the commission of a heinous crime, though all had strongly suspected that murder had been committed.

The finding of the clothing convinced the police that the body was concealed somewhere on the premises. After ransacking the upper portion of the barn the searchers proceeded to the cellar, Gilbert accompanying them. One of the officers noticed a fresh spot of earth in the corner near the dungheap, and he proceeded to apply his spade. A few turns of the soft earth revealed the tiny feet of the murdered child.

Gilbert did not flinch when brought face to face with the body of his victim. He put on a bold front and denied in toto that he had anything in common with the murder of Alice Sterling. As he gazed on the paled face of his victim his face never once lost color, while his feelings seemed compressed in the declaration: "I am innocent!"

The celerity with which the government pushed the case from this time on was remarkable. On April 10 Gilbert committed the awful crime, on the 13th he was arrested, on the 16th he was arraigned in the local court, and two days later the grand jury, by special sitting, returned an indictment of three counts of murder against him.

The Conviction.

His trial began in the superior criminal court on June 24, and was pushed with consideration from the very start. He was adjudged guilty of murder in the first degree on the Friday of the week of his trial. He offered no defense, and the jury determined his fate after a little more than an hour's deliberation.

Lawyer W. W. Doherty, counsel for Gilbert, filed exceptions, and the case was taken before the full bench of the supreme court. Mr. Doherty's claim for a new trial was based on the denunciatory exclamations of Mrs. Sterling on the witness stand, and insanity on the part of Gilbert at the time of the commission of the crime.

The supreme court, after a careful survey of the questions raised by Mr. Doherty, sustained the verdict of the jury and the seal of doom was stamped deeper upon the murderer. The commonwealth during the trial attacked the insanity plea so thoroughly that Gilbert's clearness of mind was established beyond a doubt the third day of the trial, and the defense found itself practically without a footing.

Insanity alone was the plea upon which the defense depended for a verdict of murder in the second degree. Mr. Doherty introduced evidence to show that this dreaded malady existed among Gilbert's ancestors, but this testimony, it would seem, made no impression on the jury.

The day following his arrest, Gilbert told the authorities that he found the body at the foot of the cellar stairs, and, fearing arrest in connection with the murder, he dug a grave and buried it. This was not the act of an innocent man. The commonwealth argued that, if innocent of the crime, Gilbert would have immediately notified the authorities of his discovery.

Never was such composure displayed by a criminal as that exhibited by Gilbert throughout the ordeal of his trial. His utter disregard for his fate, as shown by his deportment, seemed to strengthen the claim that he was not in possession of sound reason. He was the same calm, cool Gilbert from the beginning of his trial until the officers led him from the courtroom that Friday afternoon, when sentenced, with the hangman's seal upon him. Even when the sentence of death was pronounced, he never faltered or lost color.

Education

English Woman's

...ispose of all old stock

...BEFORE.

Written for the Teachers' Association of Quincy.

By Mrs. Blanche P. Bagley of Wollaston—Delivered Feb. 13, 1896.

At the last meeting of the Quincy Teachers Association last week the following valuable paper was read by Mrs. Blanche P. Bagley of Wollaston, and the LEDGER takes pleasure in publishing it by request:

I have heard so much in the way of comparison of the public school systems of England and America, that the impression seemed to be quite prevalent still, that there is something to compare in them, whereas the fact is, that the whole system of education in England is so utterly different from our own, resting as it does, upon such profound and ineradicable distinctions of condition, as regards social status and custom, that, although it may be possible to compare the methods of education of the two countries, to compare the public school system as such, is virtually impossible.

The reason for this, is, that the English public schools, or, what the English call their "public schools," are merely what we in America would call, huge, private, select, boarding schools, always reserved exclusively for boys. Institutions in which such exorbitant fees are demanded, that none but sons of the highest and wealthiest families can avail themselves of them.

These schools are in general, in fact, I think in every instance more or less heavily endorsed, so that numerous and valuable prizes are attainable by the most efficient scholars in them, in the way of free courses to the two great universities of Oxford and Cambridge.

In addition to this advantage there are various privileges obtainable in these schools; among others, boys of 13 or 14 at time of their admission are allowed to keep at their own or parents' expense, horses, carriages, servants and even dogs and other pets.

Naturally, too, in these schools where money is "no object," the tuition is of the very best. Professors and principal, or "masters and head masters," as they are called (for no woman has the privilege of teaching in them,) are picked men, with the highest university honors, and frequently with wide reaching literary or scientific reputations.

This is what the English call their "Public School System," outside of the class represented in these so-called "public schools," which consists virtually of the aristocracy alone, all English children, whether of the great powerful middle class, or of the lower or working classes, were taught exclusively until the year 1870, by one of three methods, either at home, by parents; (or governess or tutor provided by them,) in private schools, or, in the parish or parochial schools, in which latter in 1870, there were in London alone, over 300,000 children enrolled. In these parish schools, the tuition was free in many instances, in others, costing the merely nominal sum of 1 penny, (2 cents) a week, the church, or more frequently the government, supplying all deficiencies. The attendance was compulsory but irregular, and the instruction very inefficient, consisting, mainly of religion and the three Rs.

In 1870, however, a new method of instruction, or perhaps I should say, a new system of education, came into existence, called the "Board School" system, which, from the very beginning has been a great success, although not supplying any adequate equivalant in our American public school.

These board schools, one after another absorbed the various parished schools, and supplying as they did, a far more efficient method of instruction, threatened, or rather promised at first to monopolize, or assimilate a large majority of the smaller private schools. This however has not been the case, for although there are today over 450 of these board schools in London, with an attendance of about 650,000 children, watched over by government inspectors, and in a high state of efficiency (at least as compared with any thing that can be obtained in private schools) yet, such are the conditions of English society, controlled as it is throughout its length and breadth by the caste system, or class distinctions, that there are at least a dozen different grades of social respectability, each in its turn the very embodiment of exclusiveness. This the children of prominent public people, judges, military, or naval men, bishops, etc., must on no account mix with those outside of their own ranks, and so it is with professional men of other grades, lawyers, clergy, doctors, merchants (greater and less,) down, and down, each in their own circle a world unto themselves.

Now, it is a well known fact, the world over, that the round... Sutherland h... the Marquis of St... Gower, to the board s... nothing, the facts are sim... for the few months in each ye... ### Round-about Club.

The Round-about club held its weekly reunion at the residence of Mr. John J. McNutt, of South Boston, on Wednesday evening last. The club consists of about twenty members including a number of Quincy people and as the writer attended as a guest of Mr. McNutt, a better idea may be given of the hospitality and sociability than heretofore.

The club members are are all relatives and their weekly dinners are held round about at the different homes, from which fact the club name is derived. The dinner of Wednesday was a most pleasing occasion, and from the appearance of the members at the dinner I question if a jollier class ever sat down together. Mr. McNutt certainly knows what is good to eat and his tables were well supplied with salads, ices and delicacies too numerous to mention. The tables were very pretty, decorated with candelabras and flowers. Mrs. McNutt officiating assisted by her mother, Mrs. J. L. Wilson, and after coffee had been poured and a few words of welcome by Mr. McNutt the company assembled in the parlors and listened to piano selections by Miss Chrisabelle Mears of Chelsea and Mrs. McNutt.

Messrs. Wentworth, Bean and McNutt with Mrs. G. Henry Wait rendered vocal selections, while Messrs. Mears and Wing were amusing with their usual wit and humor. It is needless to say a number of the suburbanites who attended lost the... last car and the pleasantries of the evening had to be recalled in other conveniences.

We don't want to read people's unspoken and unwritten thoughts, nor do we wish our own read.

That hideous and deathly demon of sickness—constipation, is an easy enough thing to cure if you take the right medicine. Constipation is one of the commonest things in the world. It is really one of the most serious things. Fully nine-tenths of all the ordinary sickness of mankind is due to this one cause. If you place an obstruction in the gutter, it will stop the flow of water, and gradually a mass of poisonous, putrefying matter will accumulate. That is exactly what happens in the digestive organs when constipation begins. Poisonous matter accumulates and is forced into the blood. It goes all over the body and causes all sorts of symptoms. A few of these are dizziness, flatulence, heartburn, palpitation, headaches, loss of appetite, loss of sleep, foul breath, distress after eating, biliousness and eruptions of the skin. These things are unpleasant, but they are not serious. The serious things come afterward. Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are for the cure of constipation. They are tiny, sugar-coated granules, easy to take, mild and efficient in their action. One is a gentle laxative, two a mild cathartic. There is nothing else in the world like them. There is nothing that takes their place. There is nothing "just as good," although lieing and unscrupulous druggists may sometimes tell you so for their own profit. Do you want to lose your health so that the druggist can get rich?

Stereopticon Lecture.

The winter cruise of the Quincy Yacht club was enjoyed by a large number on Thursday evening. Mr. Henry G. Peabody of Boston was at the helm and although his guests were seated in Hancock hall they felt the thrill and pleasure of yachting along the New England shore. Beautiful views often finely colored were given of the picturesque shore, interspersed with yachts of National and local renown, including the America, Puritan, Mayflower, Volunteer, Vigilant, Defender, Valkyrie, Gossoon, Fortuna and Jubilee, also the Mab, Gleaner, Beatrice, Moondyne and others. A view of the Q. Y. C. clubhouse, Commodore Pettengill and Measurer Harrison were shown, but the one to provoke the most merriment was a snap shot of ex-Commodore Faxon about to board a yacht. Many of the scenes were familiar to yachtsmen, and others hope soon that they may take the cruise in reality.

LAST EVENING.

Successors to Company F, familiarly known as Subscription ..., and their friends were ... entertained at Faxon hall, ... evening, by Hon. Henry H. ... on.

Company F is made up of seventeen young ladies with Miss Cornelia Elliot as captain. They organized last winter and were drilled by Lieut. Kincaide of Company K, Fifth Regiment, M. V. M., until they became very expert in manœvre. When they first organized they were without rifles, but Mr. Faxon becoming interested, one night at drill, presented each with a rifle and box of confectionery for ammunition. Since then he has adopted the company and because of his help and good will they called themselves, and became generally known as, "the Faxon Guards," and later on as Company F. Until Thursday evening the Faxon Guards have always done the entertaining, giving many drills in this city and surrounding towns for sweet charity's sake. Mr. Faxon thought it time they were entertained and repaid in part for their faithful drill work, and for always furnishing entertainment for others, hence the reception and dance.

For several months the young ladies in Company F have been talking of and looking forward to the affair, Mr. Faxon promising them a fine entertainment before the season was over. As a result of the promise over eighty handsome invitations to a reception and dance were sent out, reading as follows:

> Company F
> will receive their friends
> Thursday evening,
> February twentieth, eighteen hundred and ninety-six, from > 8 to 12 o'clock, at
> Faxon Hall,
> Quincy, Massachusetts.
> Matrons,
> Mrs. Leslie B. Hardwick,
> Mrs. Eleanor F Sproul,
> Mrs. Abigail B. Spear.

Accompanying the invitation was an admission card, and Mr. Faxon's card. All having fine vignettes of Mr. Faxon. The admission card read:

> Company F's
> RECEPTION
> Thursday Evening,
> February Twentieth,
> Eighteen Hundred and Ninety-Six,
> From Eight to Twelve o'clock,
> Faxon Hall.
> Present this card at the door.

The hall was artistically trimmed with bunting and palms. On the platform were large potted palams and the stacked arms of Company F.

From eight to nine a reception was held the guests being received by the matrons, Mrs. Arthus E. Sproul, Mrs. C. Theodore Hardwick and Mrs. Samuel H. Spear, being introduced by the aids and members of Company F.

During the reception and for the dancing, Monk's orchestra discoursed most inspiriting music.

At nine o'clock the first strains of the the grand march rolled out, and soon all were in line lead by floor director Mr. Henry L. Kincaide, and a pretty march it was, the ladies all looking bewitching in their dainty gowns, showing all the colors of the rainbow scintillating among the black suits worn by the men.

The order of dance was one of the most appropriate and handsomest seen for several seasons. The star spangled banner occupying the upper left hand corner, and the stacked arms the lower right hand corner, with a shadowy camp scene in the back ground.

Lieut. Henry L. Kincaide who was of such valuable assistance to the young ladies of Company F when they organized last winter, was floor director, assisted by Mr. William S. Osborne, Mr. Frederick E. Goss and Mr. James L. Edwards. The order of dances were.

> Grand March and Circle,
> Waltz,
> Lanciers,
> Schottische,
> Plain Quadrille.
> SUPPER.
> Galop,
> Portland Fancy,
> Schottische,
> Contra. "Virginia Reel,"
> Polka Glide,
> Quadrille, "Sleigh Bells."
> Waltz.

Shortly after ten the grand march for supper was formed, Mr. Faxon with Miss Brown leading the way, followed by the matrons and their escorts, floor director Mr. H. L. Kincaide and Miss Litchfield, the aids and Faxon guards and guests.

The dining hall was prettily decorated with bunting and cut flowers. At the ladies' plates were fragrant pink roses and for the men there were pinks.

The places at the tables were designated by card and after all were seated close attention was given for some time to the good things set before them by caterers T. D. Cook & Co., of Boston.

The menu cards were very elaborate and in keeping with the invitations and dance orders. The front page was embossed with the words "Menu" in gold, the letters further ornamented with shells and seaweed with a bright lobster coming up from a sea of gold below. One inside page contained Mr. Faxon's latest photograph, while on the opposite page was the menu as follows:

> MENU,
> Chicken Croquettes, French Peas.
> Lobster Salad.
> Olives, Salted Almonds.
> Rolls
> Assorted Fancy Cake.
> Ice Creams.
> Chocolate Tarfait. Neapolitan.
> Cafe Parfait.
> Small Fancy Ices. Sour Sugar.
> Coffee. Lemonade.
> Crackers and Neufchatel Cheese.

After supper Miss Cornelia Elliott, captain of the Faxon Guards welcomed the guests and said she wished to thus publicly thank Mr. Faxon for all that he had done for them and for the good time they, with their friends, were enjoying tonight. She said the Faxon Guards were proud of their name [applause] and in closing wished Mr. Faxon many, many years in which to reap the reward, for the many good seeds he has dropped by the wayside in past years. [loud applause]

In responding Mr. Faxon welcomed his guests and said he was proud of the Faxon Guards. He said his remarks were along historical lines and he would go back fifty years. He had taken particular pains to write it off so that his remarks should correspond with the copy he had already given the reporters [laughter] and then again some of those present might (?) remember back fifty years. [laughter]. I have a reminiscence relating to an event which occurred on this historic spot about fifty-five years ago. A little red house stood here (not a little red schoolhouse)

[applause] and in it was given a benefit for a blind fiddler. I was present and danced. The floor sloped towards the middle and we all got there in a bunch. It was a high old time. [applause] To conclude the festivities we undertook to carry a chicken coop into the house, but failed because of the narrow entrance. If I had been as giddy [applause and laughter] then as I am now I should either have stretched the doorway or squeezed the chicken-coop so as to have carried out the hilarious feature of the occasion." [applause]

Mayor Adams had been present, earlier in the evening but left just before supper. Mr. Faxon said this upset him somewhat as he had some more remarks written off [applause] however he should look upon Mr. Sproul as Mayor and so proceeded.

Your Honor and Friends:

I am glad to welcome you upon this occasion and trust that the joys of this festive gathering will linger in your memory for many years.

To those who cannot be with us on account of illness I tender my sincere sympathy. May they soon be restored to perfect health. I have no doubt that you all feel safe in this presence.

Mr. Mayor, behold those rifles. Look upon the fair experts who know how to handle them with deadly precision. Suppose an emergency should arise whereby our city might be in danger from a foreign foe. Such invaders would surrender at the sight of our valiant Company F.

If John Bull should claim a slice of the territory of Quincy as he has demanded from Venezuela, we need not appeal to the President for action. No. We would say to Captain Elliott, "Call the Faxon Guards together," and she would issue an order to this effect: "John, retire from this soil at once if you desire to return to the old country alive."

It would not be necessary to wait upon a cowardly and tardy United States Senate and House of Representatives; instead of that we would lodge that miscellaneous body of legislators in the most remote quarter of oblivion.

Ladies and gentlemen, I will not weary your patience by any further remarks. It gives me great pleasure to introduce His Honor, the Mayor, who I believe will indorse my sentiments as to the safety of Quincy in case of war.

Mr. Sproul said it was a rather sudden election. He was glad to have his ability recognized and should try to govern wisely. He should straightway proceed to have the roads in Quincy nickelplated and order the city council to vacate City hall that the Faxon Guards might have suitable quarters. [applause.] Mr. Sproul's remarks were witty and did His Honor much credit, and he sat down amid a storm of applause.

Mr. Faxon said "When that boy of mine found out that Mayor Adams had not stopped for supper he thought the old man was in a box and quietly sent me a note telling me to try and alter my remarks but I knew the old man would come out all right [laughter] and he has" [loud applause].

During the applause an adjournment was made to the dance hall, where dancing was resumed and thoroughly enjoyed until half-past twelve. At the close of the last strains of "Home, Sweet Home," Capt. Elliott called for three cheers for Mr. Faxon which were given with a will and thus came to an end one of the most delightful parties ever given in Quincy.

President Bryant Among the Advocates of Measure.

The Committee on Manufactures of the Legislature gave a hearing at the State House this morning on the bill to enable the city of Quincy to establish its own electric lighting plant for municipal purposes, without first purchasing the plant of the existing company.

Those present at the hearing were Mayor Adams, President Bryant of the City Council. Henry M. Faxon, Representatives Thompson and Newcomb, John R. Graham, Hon. John F. Merrill, C. F. Austin, City Solicitor Blackmur and John Cashman.

Mayor Adams, in opening for the city, asked for a continuance as there were several other petitions of similiar character to be heard before the same committee. This request was refused as the committee thought this an independent matter

The LEDGER has received a ten-page report of the hearing but space causes us to lay it over today.

Mayor Adams and President Bryant of the City Council spoke in favor, and they were cross questioned at length by E. W. Burdett, counsel of the Quincy Electric Light Co.

Henry M. Faxon of the company spoke against the petition and the hearing closed.

UNITARIAN CONFERENCE.

Officers Elected at Afternoon Session and Other Business Transacted.

The afternoon session of the winter meeting of the Norfolk Conference of Unitarian churches at the First church was equally as interesting as the morning session.

After partaking of a bountiful collation which was served in the chapel, the conference was resumed at 2.15 and the business postponed from the morning session transacted.

It was voted that the heartfelt sympathy of the conference be extended to the First church, Dorchester, in its loss by fire.

Rev. Mr. Ellis of West Dedham spoke of the death of Rev. Obed Eldridge of that place, and Rev. Henry F. Jenks of Canton was appointed to write a memorial to the family.

It was also voted that the secretary try and arrange with the Post missions for the distribution of Unitarian literature in towns where there was no conference.

These officers were then elected:

President,—Rev. Richard C. Humphreys of Dorchester.

First Vice President,—Rev. W. H. Fish, Jr., of Dedham.

Second Vice President, — Charles H. Porter of Quincy.

Directors,—Rev. Henry F. Jenks of Canton and Miss Joannah Rotch of Milton.

Secretary and Treasurer,—Rev. E. Q. S. Osgood of Hyde Park.

At 2.30, Mr. George W. Stone, treasurer of the American Unitarian Association, read an essay on "The Church and its Needs."

Rev. James E. Bagley of Wollaston lead the discussion which followed and several other clergymen and laymen spoke on the topic.

At 4 o'clock the conference adjourned.

Young Men's Christian Association.

Rev. P. S. MacGregor, a Scotch Evangelist, will speak Sunday at 4 o'clock. His subject will be "Refuges of Lies Swept Away." Mr. Sidelinger will conduct the song service.

The annual Junior Conference will be held March 27 and 28, at Watertown.

The first of a series of games of chess was played Wednesday evening in the Association parlors. There were eight entries including the crack players of the city. The tournament will continue every Wednesday evening.

Saturday will be a genuine gala day at the Association. First will come the boys' meeting at 9.30, followed by the gymnastic class at 10.30. At this time the gallery will be reserved for the parents. At 3 o'clock the Intermediates will play basket ball, after which they will have a pop corn picnic. In the evening there will be another basket ball game by the young men, followed by steamed clams. Members will be admitted free to the gymnaseum and the clam supper, but others will be charged an admission of 10 cents. Boys will not be admitted, except where accompanied by parents.

One of the most interesting auxiliary meetings ever held in Quincy was that of last Monday. Rev. Preston Gurney gave an interesting talk on "Helpers." Following this came reports from the members who had attended the recent conference at Whitman. Many new ideas were suggested by which the auxiliary could increase its usefulness, such as the appointment of a committee on visitation of sick, a reception to mothers, plans for securing money for furniture, visitation of other auxiliaries, etc. The auxiliary was never in a more prosperous condition than at present.

Violated Statute.

In the inquest return on the death of Benjamin A. Brooks killed at South Quincy, Feb. 8, Judge Humphrey finds as follows: I find that the death of said Brooks did not result from any negligence of said Railroad company, its servants or agents, but that it was apparently due to a reckless violation of the statute which makes the act of walking on a railroad a penal offence.

Prayer at 10 30 at 15 Faxon avenue Saturday morning. Burial at Scituate Sunday at 1 P. M.

The new chapel of the Norfolk Downs and Wollaston Park Union society is completed and will be dedicated tomorrow, Washington's birthday, a very fitting day for the occasion.

This society which owes its origin to the "Park and Downs Improvement association" was organized in the winter of 1894 and Messrs. Henry Weymouth, Levi Nichols, Frank Rogers, Herbert Polk and Walter Cooms were appointed a committee to plan for Sunday religious services in that section. They promptly attend to their duty and enjoyed the hall near the Norfolk Downs depot, where services were held every Sunday afternoon. This was followed by organization of Sunday School.

In March, 1895, the society was reorganized and incorporated, its principles being to maintain non-sectarian religious services and the furthering of all kinds of Christian work. Since reorganization it has held services in the Quincy Mansion and has been supported by voluntary contributions.

At a meeting held the latter part of July, 1895, the plans of a chapel prepared by Mr. Charles F. Marr, were approved and the trustees authorized to build as soon as funds could be raised, on the lot owned by the society.

During the latter part of 1895, active operations were commenced and work has progressed until now the edifice is completed.

The church is situated on Rawson road, the lot which faces the east having a frontage of 85 feet. The building is rectangular in shape as the engraving herewith shows, and has a seating capacity of 200 in the main auditorium which can be increased to 250 by throwing open the doors leading to the ladies' parlor.

The entrance is on the end of the building, opens into a vestibule from which large doors lead to the auditorium room. The platform is on the side of the main room, at the left of which is a room for the Sunday School library, while at the right is a kitchen from which doors lead to the ladies' parlor which also has folding doors leading to the auditorium. There is a cellar under the whole. The building is heated by steam and lighted by electricity.

The trustees of the society who have labored hard for the completion of the edifice are: A. W. Polk, president; Levi H. Milberry, vice-president; A. E. Linnell, treasurer; Levi Nichols, secretary; C. F. Marr, W. D. Given and Henry Weymouth.

Wollaston Vesper Music.

Barnby vesper service will be held at the Wollaston Unitarian church on Sunday. The quartette will sing the following pieces composed by Barnby: "Sing and Rejoice," "Abide with Me," "Sweet is Thy Mercy Lord," "Now the day is over." Miss Hayes will sing a solo from the "Messiah" at the morning service.

How Wollaston Folks Took a Hand in a Quincy Post Office Struggle.

To the Editors of the Ledger:

I have read with considerable interest the various articles and communications which have appeared in the LEDGER of late, relative to the post office contest now going on in Wollaston.

I was particularly struck by the following which appeared in Mr. Whiting's letter in the LEDGER of last evening, Feb. 18:

With all due respect to Mr. McGrath's political influence, I ask him, a resident of Quincy, what business it is of his as to who shall be appointed postmaster of Wollaston?

What would Mr. McGrath think if Wollaston should have the audacity to attempt to dictate to Quincy as to who should be her postmaster?

When Wollaston is unable to take care of her own affairs, then it will be time for Mr. McGrath and his friends to lend their good offices to assist run the place, appoint the postmaster, etc.

Until then it is "hands off" to outsiders. Wollaston for Wollastonians!

Of course Mr. Whiting is entirely right in claiming that the people of the locality should have the "say" regarding their postmaster. All the same, I think it proper to remind those whom it may concern of the course of some Wollastonians in December, 1889, a little more than six years ago.

At that time an effort was made to retain a Democrat, Mr. Spear, (a postmaster absolutely without flaw) in the Quincy office. This effort was supported not only by a majority of the citizens, but also by a majority of the Republicans themselves, in the region served by the office. Yet an examination of the petition sent in to displace Mr. Spear shows that among the signers were not only a great many Republicans of Atlantic, West Quincy, Quincy Point, etc, (places almost wholly out of touch with the Quincy office), but also the following residents of Wollaston—not one of whom could ordinarily have the slightest business relations with Mr. Spear's establishment:

H. T. Whitman, H. O. Fairbanks, Geo. F. Pinkham, J. W. Lovett, William C. Seelye, E. E. Williamson, G. A. Litchfield, Edward Hewitson, W. B. Orcutt, C. R. Sherman, N. G. Nickerson, S. A. Merrill, I. W. Faunce, E. S. Litchfield, F. E Litchfield, B. T. Emery, W. W. Rice, A. G. Olney, M. A. Boynton, J. H. Lord, J. H. Roberts, Quincy A. Faunce and others equally well known.

At that time—as now—I opposed this sort of thing; but, nevertheless, it is not a bad plan for those interested to reflect just a moment upon the foregoing facts, at this particular juncture.

Personally, I like Mr. Wilde and hope he will stay in, simply because he apparently meets the only proper test in the case of any public official—fitness.

Very truly yours,
A. E SPROUL

P. S. Of course I am taking no part in this matter other than to write this communication. My sympathies, however, are wholly with Mr. Wilde, for the reason just given.
A. E. S.

—The War Department has adopted a policy of privacy in regard to the fortifications on our sea coast, and visits to Fort Warren in Boston harbor, and other points of interest are to be prohibited. No other country has ever made it so easy for foreigners to obtain a knowledge of its defences as it has been in the United States. At last a change of policy is noted, and the work on the coast defences will proceed without the supervision or inspection of the agents of power that may some day in the future feel called upon to assail them.

—In 1894 the percentage of deaths from diphtheria in Boston was 0.27. In 1895, during only half of which antitoxin was used, the percentage was less than 0.15.

Euger... P... of the Hurricane Order Anticipated by the Crowd.

EL PASO, Tex., Feb. 21.—The pugilists and the crowd bound for the fight left on the eastbound train over the Southern Pacific, leaving here at 10:05 p. m. The immediate members of the Maher and Fitzsimmons parties are provided with railroad tickets to Langtry, Tex., and sleeping car berths to Del Rio, Tex., the second station east of Langtry.

At the depot tickets were sold to those who wanted to go to the prize fight to the town of Langtry, 400 miles away. The train will not reach there until after 4 o'clock today, and there is no telling when the crowd will get back. The fight will take place probably about 2:30 o'clock. There is only one place between here and Langtry where it is possible for the fight to take place, and, as it is guarded, it is possible that no attempt will be made to stop there. The prize fighting train consists of six or seven coaches and three sleepers.

Peter Maher, followed by Rangers to the train bearing him from Las Cruces, N. M., and accompanied by others on the trip, arrived here at noon yesterday. He left the train at the Smelter, three miles out. Rangers were posted at every point from the railway station to await him. A carriage was in waiting at the Smelter, and into this Maher, Hall and Quinn jumped, and with the horses on the run, reached this city. Hot after the carriage came two mounted Rangers with their horses flecked with foam. Maher had evaded them.

After reaching here Maher remained in hiding several hours. Then he appeared upon the streets with his trainers, making no effort to conceal his movements. The Irishman looks better than could be expected for a man who has had the "alkali eye," and whose training has been interrupted. He has little to say. "I'll be at the ringside, and I'll make Fitz know he has had a fight," is the substance of what Peter has to say.

Everybody predicts a short fight—a hurricane battle from the call of time. Jim Hall, Buck Connelly, J. J. Quinn, and probably Philip Lourie, will be in Maher's corner. Jack Everhardt, William McCoy, Jack Stenzel and Martin Julian will probably care for Fitz. There are a dozen rumors as to the place of meeting.

Final Preparations.

At 5 o'clock last night a notice was posted in Dan Stuart's office declaring that all persons who desired to witness the fight should be at Stuart's office at 9:45 o'clock. It was also announced that the railroad fare for the round trip would not be over $12.

Fitzsimmons was to have reported at Stuart's office at noon. He did not appear, nor did he show up during the afternoon. At 6 o'clock a messenger was sent for him, saying that he was ordered to come over to Stuart's office at once. Fitzsimmons refused to accompany the messenger, saying he would not come over until 9 o'clock.

He asked if the money was up in Siler's hands, and when told it was not, but that it would be in the shape of a certified check, payable to the order of Thomas O'Rourke, Fitzsimmons replied: "Checks don't go. No cash, no fight. I will be over at 9 o'clock, and if I am not shown the money at that time I will not fight. I will not get on the train until I see it."

This was telephoned Stuart, and the latter replied: "All right, I'll fix it up."

Stuart had refused several times during the day to have the checks converted into cash, and Fitzsimmons had also declared that there would be a decided hitch in the proceedings unless the money was forthcoming. When the word was brought back that Julian and Fitzsimmons would not hear of anything but the cash in the hands of Referee Siler, there was a mad rush of couriers for the different banking houses.

By a mere chance the president of the State National bank was found. This is the only in the city without a time-lock. Dan Stuart is good for twice $10,000 in any bank in the city, and the cash from the State National was quickly forthcoming.

After the money was counted and turned over to Siler, he sent a second messenger to Fitzsimmons, saying he had seen and counted the $10,000 in cash and that it could be turned over to him to hand to the winner at the conclusion of the battle. Fitzsimmons declared himself satisfied. He and Julian reached Stuart's office shortly after 7 o'clock, and Fitzsimmons declared himself ready for the fight.

A Horrible Crime.

CHICAGO, Feb. 21.—The dead body of Mrs. Ellen Randolph, colored, her head pounded almost to a pulp, was discovered by firemen yesterday in answering an alarm of fire at 2448 Dearborn street. The body was still warm, and the blood was fresh on the bed clothes. There were 14 wounds on the head. After committing the crime, the murderer set fire to the room, and the limbs of the unfortunate woman were charred from the knees down. There is no clew to the perpetrator of the deed.

Gates Not Lowered.

JERSEY CITY, Feb. 21.—A caboose on the Erie railroad tracks collided with a horse car at the Grove-street crossing yesterday. A locomotive was making a flying switch at the time, side-tracking the caboose. The gates at the crossing had not been lowered, and the horse car attempted to cross the tracks when it was struck by the caboose. There were about six passengers in the car, all of whom were more or less injured, one perhaps fatally.

Bimetallists' Plans.

BERLIN, Feb. 21.—Count von Kardorff, the German bimetallist champion, in addressing the first general meeting of the Bimetallic league, admitted that the movement had progressed but slowly, but he continued to feel hopeful. A resolution was adopted in favor of bimetallism for Germany, but only in co-operation with England, France and the United States.

Probably Insane.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—Mrs. George R. Keslo yesterday killed her two children, Estelle, 4½ years old, and Radford, 2½ years old, with a 38-caliber revolver. She then attempted to commit suicide by shooting herself in the left forearm. She is supposed to be insane.

...ON BEACON HILL.

...cycle Lanterns, Abolition of Days of Grace and Other Matters.

BOSTON, Feb. 21.—In the house the committee on probate and insolvency reported a bill permitting probate courts to appoint only one appraiser in cases of small estates. The committee on towns reported a bill providing a system of water supply for Millers Falls. The committee on judiciary reported against a bill prescribing a form of civil marriage to be the only one recognized by the courts. (Mr. Adams dissents).

In the senate the committee on cities reported in favor of the bill which provides that bicycle and tricycle riders must equip their machines with a lamp or lantern of sufficient illuminating power to be visible at a distance of 200 feet. This lamp or lantern must be lighted when the machine is in use between sunset and sunrise, within or without the limits of a city. Anyone disobeying the law will be punished by a fine not exceeding $20 for each offense and the liability for all damage occasioned to any person by such unlawful act.

At the hearing before the banking committee the only opposition to the abolition of days of grace related to drafts. The remonstrants had no objection to the proposed legislation so far as it related to promissory notes.

Stationary engineers were out in force at the hearing before the committee on mercantile affairs on the bill providing for certain changes in the law passed last year relative to engineers' licenses. The bill proposes to abolish special licenses which confine the engineer or fireman after examination to the boiler or engine on which he was at work when examined and to provide that engineers of long experience shall receive unlimited licenses on presentation of a sworn certificate, accompanied by another from their employer. It further provides for the appointment of a special commission of five competent engineers, who shall have full charge of the issuance of licenses. Chairman Darling of the committee announced that the first matter would be the repeal of last year's law.

Eighty Millions to Be Divided.

WESTFIELD, Mass., Feb. 21.—James E. Wetmore, an organ builder, who has resided in this town for over 40 years, has received news from his cousin, Jesse L. Wetmore of Oakland, Cal., that they are heirs to a fortune of $80,000,000, which is now in the Bank of Holland, Amsterdam. Mr. Wetmore's grandfather married Anna Van Scott, whose parents were natives of Amsterdam, and left a large sum of money, which has been accumulating for nearly 100 years.

Rough Experience.

PORTLAND, Me., Feb. 21.—The four masted schooner Jonathan Bourne of Dennis, Mass., 16 days overdue from Perth Amboy, arrived here yesterday. Twice she was within sight of the lights on Cape Elizabeth, and both times was driven by heavy gales almost to Nova Scotia. The vessel was covered with ice, the crew on short provisions and exhausted, and the vessel badly damaged.

Loss of Over $50,000.

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 21.—The big, but ancient, union station of the Consolidated railroad was destroyed by fire early this morning. From appearances, when the fire was first seen, it caught from the chimney in the cafe kitchen. The masses of blazing embers carried about the neighborhood by the wind threatened the business section for a long time. The railroad company's loss will exceed $50,000.

Cut Off With $5000.

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 21.—The jury in the Armstrong will contest, in which nearly $500,000 was involved, returned a verdict last night in favor of the beneficiaries of the will. The will of the late Lorenzo W. Armstrong left the bulk of his fortune to three of his children. Miss Elizabeth Armstrong, a child of Armstrong's first wife, received only $5000, and she contested the will.

Two Bad Men.

PORTLAND, Me., Feb. 21.—William Carrier and Joseph Caron, charged with several burglaries in this vicinity, were bound over to the grand jury yesterday in the sum of $800. They made damaging statements, and it is believed they have passed counterfeit bills in Fall River, Mass., and worked swindling games in Bangor, Lewiston, and Fitchburg, Mass.

A Case of Suicide.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Feb. 21.—The autopsy on the body of Nellie McDonough, who died suddenly in Boston, revealed the fact that she had been in healthy condition. An analysis of the stomach will be made to determine the cause of death. It was apparent that Miss McDonough had committed suicide.

Domestic Unhappiness.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Feb. 21.—Louis K. Strang, an inventor, 40 years old, fired five shots into his body last night, causing wounds which will probably prove fatal. A partially emptied bottle of laudanum was found on him. Domestic infelicity is the reason assigned for his action.

General Frazar Dead.

SOMERVILLE, Mass., Feb. 21.—General Douglas Frazar died at his home, 26 Walnut street, last evening. He was a soldier, traveler and writer of stories, and was considered one of the unique figures in this city. He was born in Duxbury in 1836.

Cerebral Hemorrhage Increased.

CHICOPEE, Mass., Feb. 21.—Ex-Governor Robinson is in an unfavorable condition. The cerebral hemorrhage increased at 6 o'clock last night, and there was a change for the worse. There is no hope entertained for his recovery.

Not Ambitious.

PORTLAND, Me., Feb. 21.—At a special town meeting at South Portland last night, the citizens voted 157 to 51 against adopting the city charter granted the town by the last legislature.

Dreaded Disease Appears.

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 21.—Miss Annie Burr, a nurse at the New Haven hospital, was taken to the pest house yesterday afternoon, suffering from smallpox.

The Transvaal Disaster.

JOHANNESBURG, Feb. 21.—The amount of dynamite which caused the terrific disaster, the details of which have already been sent, is ascertained to have been 20 tons. This had been standing on the railroad switch for a period of three days, exposed to the sun and the air, and this is supposed to have put it into condition in which its chemical constitution was very unstable, so that it was ready to be set off from the slightest disturbance. It is now definitely learned that the number of deaths resulting from the disaster is over 100, beside the large number of injured.

A BOON TO MARINERS.

An Ear For Ships Which Will Prevent Collisions at Sea.

A Most Wonderful and Valuable Instrument.

Severe Tests Show What the Eophone Is Capable of Performing.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—Skippers in New York harbor are amazed at the work of the eophone. It is a new instrument constituting a sort of gigantic ear for a ship, and is intended to detect the direction of sound waves in a fog.

A successful test of the instrument was made on the government tug Daniel S. Lamont. Mr. De la Torre, the inventor, went out with the tug, and without being able to see obstructions, buoys and other tugs in the harbor, accurately indicated their direction, showing that the eophone would contribute greatly to the safety of vessels in a fog.

The probability of collisions and wrecks due to fogs has been accepted as a sort of unavoidable evil, which must become greater as the number and speed of vessels increase. But the inventive genius of man could not let such a condition of affairs continue without attempting to do away with it, and there has been perfected lately a simple instrument, called the eophone, by which the direction from which a sound proceeds can be determined with absolute accuracy in fog or darkness.

The simplest description of the instrument is that it consists of two bell-mouthed sound receivers, separated by a central diaphragm. The sound receivers are connected to the two ears, and, when pointed directly at a source of sound, the noise is the same in each ear. When turned away, the sound is heard in only one ear.

On shipboard the sound-catching and dividing part of the instrument extends above the top of the charthouse. The tubes are brought within the charthouse, and the instrument may be turned from below to point

In Any Desired Direction.

To illustrate the character of the trials which have been made with the eophone, one was placed on the lighthouse tender Lilac, off New York, and in a dense fog a whistling buoy was picked up at a distance of a mile and its direction indicated correctly, although every effort was made to confuse the observer by change of course. Ordinarily there is great difficulty in picking up a whistling buoy in a fog.

Another test, showing the merits of the eophone in a striking way, was made by blindfolding the observer and then chasing another vessel by sounds of its whistle, the vessel pursued doubling and twisting in every possible way. No difficulty whatever was found in following the vessel under such circumstances.

Spar buoys can be picked up from the echo of the boat's whistle. A vessel running close to land would get the echo from her own whistle in case there were hills or tall houses. On dark nights the ripple of oars or the slightest noise of a torpedo boat would be accurately located by the eophone, so that it is as important from a military point of view as it is necessary in ordinary navigation.

The eophone is probably one of the greatest inventions of the day, as it is destined to become as much a part of a ship's equipment as the compass.

The eophone is the invention of Frank De la Torre of Baltimore. He has spent a number of years in perfecting it, and has been aided in the development by the advice and criticisms of some of the greatest physicists of Europe.

WHAT HEADACHE IS.

The Danger Signal that Nature Gives to Women.

It Signifies That Serious Female Trouble Is Imminent.

Most female diseases manifest their presence by a headache.

When a dull heavy ache in the head is accompanied by disordered stomach, bad taste in the mouth, dull eyes, pains in back and groins, lassitude, nervousness, despondency and irregularity, it is time to locate the trouble and remove it. We will tell you right now that the symptoms indicate positively that serious womb trouble is imminent.

Don't let this fearful disease get you in its power. If you are uncertain, write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., giving full symptoms. Your letter will be read, acted upon and answered by one of your own sex, and without charge.

Note Mrs. Snyder's letter to Mrs. Pinkham.

"Before taking your remedies, day after day I would read the testimonials of women who had been cured by the use of your Vegetable Compound.

"At last I decided to write and tell you my condition.

"I had been examined by physicians who told me that my womb was very large and prolapsed, and also said there was a growth on the inside of the womb that must be cut out; menstruations were so painful that I suffered for three days of every month, and it was impossible to get any rest. For two months I used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Blood Purifier and Sanative Wash, and now I am entirely cured. I had suffered nine years, thinking there was no cure for me, and it only took five bottles of your remedies to cure me."—MRS. L. SNYDER, Trenton Junction, N. J.

AN HISTORIC STREET

An Interesting and Valuable Paper by Edward H. Dewson.

Hancock Street for a Period Covering 257 Years.

Each Estate to be Taken up Separately and History Given.

The first installment is given below of the paper by Edward H. Dewson, Esq., on "The History of Hancock street and the Training Field, past and present, covering a period of 257 years" delivered before the Quincy Historical Society. It is as interesting as it is valuable to long residents of the city:

Mr. President, and Ladies and Gentlemen:

In offering this paper I am aware that I am doing little more than stringing together, recollections of your own. Many of which will seem very commonplace. But you must remember how precious to you are stories and traditions of a past in which your ancestors lived and acted.

These few incidents that will be recorded in the archives of our society may interest those who come after us.

It is in this hope that the society carries on its work.

In the year 1630 the town of Boston was incorporated.

In 1634 the General Court gave it enlargement at Wollaston.

In 1639 the first church was established at Wollaston.

In 1640 the territory embraced by Wollaston became the town of Braintree.

It included the present towns of Quincy, Braintree, Randolph and Holbrook.

In 1708 the town of Braintree was divided into two precincts or parishes "for the more regular and convenient upholding of the worship of God."

In 1792 the North Precinct of Braintree became the town of Quincy.

In 1635 Boston granted large tracts of land at Wollaston to Edmund Quincy, Wm. Coddington, Atherton Hough, John Wheelwright and others.

Smaller allotments were made on the basis of four acres for each member of a family, and of meadow land for each head of cattle.

After the incorporation of Braintree Boston continued making grants, occasioning many disputes.

In 1710, the matter was settled by Boston relinquishing its title to all the territory, to the Town of Braintree.

The small allotments are very difficult to trace. The descriptions are imperfect, and many of the early records have been lost.

One of the first recorded acts of the new town, was to build a highway from Weymouth to the Dorchester line. There were six persons present at the town meeting.

The survey was made in 1641, but owing to disagreements, it was not accepted until December, 1648.

It is the Franklin, School, Hancock and Adams streets, of today.

Mr. Charles F. Adams, says that the construction of a great coast road from Newbury, on the Merrimac, to Hingham, was ordered by special vote of "The General Court" in Nov. 1639.

The Indian trail from Plymouth to Boston, ran down Penns hill, crossed the plain, continued west of Presidents hill, to Adams street, thence over Milton hill to Boston.

The highway, or coast road, left the Indian trail at Adams street, and passed around Presidents Hill, toward the eastward, joining the trail again at some point on Franklin street. The portion of Hancock street, that is the subject of this sketch, began at the present junction of Adams and Hancock streets, and ended as now, at Elm and School streets.

We have said that a large tract of land was granted to Edmund Quincy. He died in 1637, shortly after the allotment at Wollaston had been made to him. The grant to him and to Coddington, was undivided for two years.

Quincy's, may be briefly described as the Wollaston and Merry Mount Parks, and a portion of the Woodward estate, Coddington's, as the estate of the late John Quincy Adams.

For the purpose of this sketch, it is not necessary to accurately define their limits. In Mr. Adams' Three Episodes of Massachusetts History, on page 578, second volume, there is an interesting map showing all of these estates.

I have drawn largely upon this book of Mr. Adams.

He says that at this time there were about eighty families in Braintree, numbering perhaps five hundred souls.

The house of Edmund Quincy was probably built just before his death in 1637, and forms a part of the house built by his son in 1706.

Of late years it has been known as the Butler House, near Black's Creek, or Butler's brook. It is situated a little toward the Northeast from where the brook crosses Hancock street, near the new high school house. It is now owned by the Rev. D. M. Wilson.

In 1637, Bridge street (directly opposite) was the private avenue to this house.

The lane as it was termed by Pattee, was at a later date, the "Farms Road" running in a zig zag sort of way to Squantum. It was discontinued in 1803, except the portion now called Bridge street.

Edmund Quincy, was succeeded by his son Edmund, born in 1627, died in 1697. He was, in turn, succeeded by his son Edmund, third of the name, born in 1681, died in 1738.

He was judge of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts, from 1718 to his death.

Again quoting from Mr. Adams, "Mr. Quincy's new house, was raised in 1706. The portion in which was the chamber next the brook, mentioned in Judge Sewall's diary, was comparatively new, for it had after a fashion not uncommon then, been built on to the older dwelling, which, afterwards, relegated to menial uses, had already stood there for nearly seventy years.

The entire building still remains a noticeable specimen of the best domestic architecture of colonial times. One room has on its walls, the queer old Chinese paper, which tradition says, was hung there in 1775 in honor of Dorothy Quincy's approaching marriage to John Hancock."

In 1640. John Dassitt is granted twenty eight acres. They comprise the upland lying on the east side of Hancock street, extending from Adams to Washington street, and bounded by Coddington, and Washington streets, the low land towards the east, and north east, being its bounds in that direction.

Standing at the Quincy gate, in 1640, and looking toward the south there is no recorded evidence that a house was visible.

Moses Belcher, was grantee from John Dassitt, in 1685. The heirs of Moses Belcher, were grantors in 1699, and one Moses Belcher, owned land on the West side of Hancock street in 1733.

The houses of the early period, were of two distinct types. We shall find a few specimens of each that have not been remodeled, so as to be unrecognizable.

Those of the wealthier class were in general, square with two stories, and two chimneys, and a low roof called a hip roof, a door and hall in the middle, and two rooms on each side.

The farmers, or poorer class, built their houses with one or two stories, and a pitched roof with a huge chimney in the centre. The roof of the smaller houses was often extended to within a few feet of the ground in the rear.

The front door was in the middle. There was one room on each side.

We will designate these houses as first, second and third type.

An evolution of the first type is the larger house of a later period.

It has a railing along the eaves or on the roof, a porch, sometimes a cupola and ornamentation.

Castle Square Theatre, Boston.

The opening night of the extraordinary double bill offered this week by the Castle Square Opera Company, consisting of "H. M. S. Pinafore" and "Cavalleria Rusticana" has demonstrated beyond all doubt the versatility of Mr. Rose's company and their complete triumph in one of the most arduous tasks ever set an opera company "Pianafore" opened the evening and was given with a swing and dash delightful. Then came a harder task. Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana" one of the most difficult compositions known to the operatic stage. But the company were equal to the undertaking. Foremost of all should be named Miss Lane the prima donna of the company. Rarely does one see such dramatic power joined with to such exquisite sweetness of voice and so many personal graces. The present double bill will be continued for another week. The management announces that arrangements have been made with the street car company and that special cars will leave the theatre at the close of every performance direct for every railroad station.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 23. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—What faith can do for us.—Heb. xi, 1-10; xii, 1, 2.

What can faith do for us? This question might be answered in a single sentence. Faith can do all things. To those that believe, Christ says nothing is impossible. We have only to look at the history of the past and to study the lives of those who have believed in God and have lived in accordance with that belief to prove that this is true. The writer of the book of Hebrews has partially done this. In this magnificent array of Old Testament worthies who did so much through faith he practically demonstrates the truthfulness of the omnipotence of faith.

1. Faith explains the unseen and the seen. "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." "Through faith we understand that the world was framed through the word of God." Faith is the evidence of things unseen. There can be no other evidence. Things not seen are beyond the knowledge of our senses; if we cannot be certified of them by spiritual intentions, we cannot be certified of them at all. But there are many things about the seen also that we cannot understand or explain. We want to know the origin of the seen, the mystery of its continuance. Science is silent at these points, but where science ends faith begins and explains it all by telling us of God, the Creator and Preserver of the universe.

2. Faith removes the fear and the dread of death. "By faith Enoch was translated that he should not see death." Without the knowledge and hope that faith gives us for the future, death would fill us with apprehension and dread. God took this from Enoch by translating him. When his enemies sought him to put him to death, they could not find him, for God had taken him away without tasting of death. We cannot expect to be translated, but if we believe in God and His word, and put our trust for the future in Him, all the horror and dread that surround death are removed, and it practically amounts to the same thing.

3. Faith makes it possible for us to please God. It was by his faith that Enoch pleased God. It must be true of us also, for "without faith it is impossible to please Him."

4. The faith of others inspires us to patiently run the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, who is the Author and Perfector of our faith.

Faith can do all these things and much more. Have we faith? This is the all important question. If we have not, let us pray to God for it—for faith is a God given gift.

Bible Readings.—Mark xvi, 15, 16; John i, 12; vi, 40; xii, 35, 36; xx, 31; Acts x, 43; xv, 8, 9; xxvi, 15-18; Gal. iii, 7-11; Eph. ii, 8; vi, 16; I Thess. v, 8; Heb. iv, 3; vi, 12; I Pet. i, 8, 9; I John v, 4, 5.

New Christian Endeavor Work.

An entirely new method of Christian Endeavor work and one that ought to meet with a hearty response from every member of the society has been proposed by Mr. William J. Searle, an earnest Christian Endeavorer of New Zealand. His plan is to have Christian Endeavorers unite as the Christian Endeavor Letter league, simply by promising to write at least one letter a month to some friend or acquaintance, this letter having for its definite object the extension of the Master's kingdom. The letter may be to some unconverted person and may point him to "the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world," or it may be directed to some one in sorrow or in need of spiritual uplifting. The only condition is that the letter deals with the affairs of the kingdom. No organization is required, societies simply taking up the matter as they may desire, and, where advisable, the work being reported to the union secretaries.

The subjects dealt with in these letters are left entirely to the conscience of the individual writers. Societies, however, may request a concerted action under special circumstances, such as during home or foreign mission revivals or evangelic services.—Golden Rule.

A New Member's Social.

The associate membership committee of the Union Park society of Chicago recently held a social for the sole purpose of obtaining new members, says The Golden Rule. This social was not thrown open to all the society, but a carefully selected number of Endeavorers were invited to meet with an equally carefully selected number of outsiders. The committee, of course, obtained the names and addresses of all the guests, and set the active Endeavorers to work interesting the outsiders in the society, with such success that several new members were obtained.

Christian Endeavor Briefs.

Kentucky Endeavorers have been especially active in the work for the prisoners, and now two new societies have been formed at the branch state prison at Eddyville.

Philadelphia has a unique Christian Endeavor society, comprising the workers in the Sunday Breakfast association. No other society has such a record. Last year 123,277 persons attended the meetings, of whom over 63,000 were given a charitable meal; 6,346 persons went forward for prayer.

Greetings were received from the United society from Texas, Iowa, China, India, Ireland and all the Australian colonies, at the New South Wales Christian Endeavor convention. Truly "all ye are brethren."

With the American passion for brevity people commonly speak of the Endeavor society. May it never become that. If part of the title must be dropped, let it be "Endeavor," that the "Christian" may be retained. We are Christians first, and because Christians, Endeavorers.

Couches.

A home isn't complete today without a couch, and it's only the possession and actual using that proves their worth. Times have been, and not so long ago, that a couch was considered a most expensive luxury. Today things have changed, and just how we have helped to bring this about will be shown when you see our attractive, serviceable, easy-to-lie-on couches that we are selling at $8, $10 and $12. Then there's the kind that sends you to dream land almost as soon as you touch them

There's positive comfort in a Couch, more so than any other piece of furniture we know of. Own a couch by all means. Life is worth living at all times, but it's worth twice the living if you own one of our couches.

The Wisdom Of Trading Here.

Confidence in the people you trade with, should be the first principle of shopping with the thinking buyer.

If one needs the services of a physician, he naturally has a preference, and its nothing but confidence in the man you talk with that leads you to follow his advice to the letter. The sole aim of the clerks in many of the stores of today, seems to be the one object of selling goods, no matter by what meaus or by what misrepresentations.

At this store things are different, the great fundamental principle of this business is to keep the interest of our patrons at heart—misrepresent nothing, and sell the best the market produces at money-saving prices. These methods alone account for the success of this business and the confidence the people have in our store system.

LOSS TO BAY STATE.

Sickness of Ex-Governor George D. Robinson Terminates Fatally.

End Was Peaceful and Apparently Painless.

Many Years of His Life Devoted to Service In the Public's Behalf.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Feb. 24.—Ex-Governor George D. Robinson's death, which was calm and peaceful, occurred at 4:28 o'clock Saturday afternoon at his Chicopee home. Since early in the afternoon it was given out that Governor Robinson could not live more than a few hours, but he had rallied so many times when similar reports were bulletined that it was thought he might possibly live throughout the night.

At 3:30 o'clock, however, it was seen that his case had become alarmingly worse. His breathing was scarcely noticeable, and the unfailing signs of approaching death had begun to show. He lingered along for another hour, lacking two minutes, when life fled, death being without the slightest semblance of a struggle. Members of his family were with the patient when death came to obliterate his sufferings.

The funeral will be held Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Third Congregational church in Chicopee, which has been tendered the family, as the Unitarian church, of which the deceased was a member, is too small to accommodate those who will want to attend the services. Rev. Cary F. Abbott, pastor of the Unitarian church, and Rev. E. F. Hayward of Marlboro, formerly of Chicopee, will conduct the services at the church and those at the house at 1:30, which will be for the relatives only. The bearers will be selected from the ex-governor's associates of the bar and others with whom he was closely associated. The burial will be in Fairview cemetery, in Chicopee.

The family have received telegrams of sympathy from Governor Greenhalge, Lieutenant Governor Wolcott, the selectmen of Lexington, ex-Mayor Metcalf, formerly of this city, Colonels Gilbert of Ware and Stearns of Waltham, General Samuel Dalton, Warren S. Locke and many others.

GEORGE D. ROBINSON.

George Dexter Robinson, son of Charles and Mary (Davis) Robinson, was born in Lexington, Middlesex county, Jan. 20, 1834.

He passed through the common district schools of Lexington; attended Lexington academy one year, and was one year in Hopkins classical school, Cambridge. Having fitted for college, he entered Harvard, and was graduated therefrom in the class of 1856. While pursuing his college course, he taught district schools two winters in Lexington.

Immediately after graduating he became principal of the high school at Chicopee, and held the position until March, 1865. He then studied law in Charlestown with his brother, Charles Robinson, and was admitted to the bar in March, 1866. He immediately opened an office in Chicopee.

He was first married in Lexington, Nov. 24, 1859, to Hannah E., daughter of William and Nancy (Pearce) Stevens, who died Sept. 5, 1864. He was again married in Lexington, July 11, 1867, to Susan E., daughter of Joseph F. and Susan (Milliken) Simonds. By the first marriage he had one child, Walter Stevens Robinson, born March 22, 1861, and by the second, Annie Florence Robinson, born Oct. 4, 1869.

He was a representative in the legislature in 1874; senator in 1876, representative in the Forty-fifth, Forty-sixth, Forty-seventh and Forty-eighth United States congresses.

He was elected governor of the commonwealth of Massachusetts in 1884, and re-elected in 1885 and '86. In 1887 Governor Robinson was tendered, by President Cleveland, an appointment on the interstate commerce commission, but declined it. In 1889 he was appointed by President Harrison commissioner to the Cherokee and other Indian tribes, to receive titles to lands in the Indian Territory, but declined the office.

OLNEY FOR PRESIDENT.

Democrats of Massachusetts Think He Would Make a Strong Candidate.

BOSTON, Feb. 24.—For President of the United States, Richard Olney of Massachusetts. That is the voice of the Massachusetts Democracy, as spoken by Mayor Quincy. The boom was launched at a dinner given jointly by the Democratic state committee and the Young Men's Democratic club at the Exchange club. There seemed to be no studied intention to make it an Olney dinner, but as speaker after speaker mentioned his name it was greeted with great applause.

Mayor Quincy, who was next to the last speaker, capped the climax by saying that if Mr. Cleveland's Venezuelan policy is to be an issue in the campaign, the logical candidate for the Democratic party is Richard Olney. If he should become a candidate, said Mayor Quincy, he will have the united support of the Massachusetts delegation to the Chicago convention.

The unexpected and what appeared to be a spontaneous presentation of the name of Secretary of State Olney for the presidential nomination is predicted as significant by Democratic politicians and organs today.

There is editorial comment quite generally that the state committee had settled upon a Massachusetts candidate to be presented to the national Democratic convention, and the name would not be that of ex-Governor William E. Russell, whose friends had been quietly using his name with that object in view.

SECRETARY OLNEY.

Mr. Quincy's nomination speech is said to be especially significant, as the Democratic state central committee and a large number of the most prominent party leaders of the state were in session Saturday afternoon.

Roof Fell on Them.

STAMFORD, Conn., Feb. 24.—By the collapse of the roof of an old building in Dublin, late Saturday night, one boy was killed, another fatally hurt and several others more or less injured. The building in which the accident occurred was on Meadow street, the land on one side of which the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad has taken for extensive improvements. The old houses which stood on the land were given to the residents of Dublin for firewood. Saturday night 12 boys went upon the second floor of one of the houses, and began cutting out the studding posts. They carelessly cut the lower parts of rafters which supported the roof, and almost without warning the roof gave way, crashing down on them. Patrick Kilkelly, aged 5, was almost instantly killed. His brother was also crushed in the wreckage, and was not taken out until some time after.

Faculty Investigating.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Feb. 24.—There is every reason to believe that steps will be taken by the faculty of Wesleyan university toward ascertaining the names of the ringleaders of the fight between the sophomores and freshmen classes on Friday night. In addition to the rough and tumble contests, two of the professors were burned in effigy next morning, and an investigation is already in progress. Several students bear marks of the scrimmage over the firing of the cannon.

CUBA AND THE TARIFF

Will Probably Monopolize the Attention of the Senate This Week.

House Hurrying Appropriations Bills Along.

Sine Die Adjournment Likely to Be Reached by Middle of May.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—The probabilities are that the Cuban question and the tariff bill, as affected by the silver substitute, will divide the greater part of the time of the senate during the present week.

There will be an effort today by Senator Dubois, chairman of the committee on public lands, to secure unanimous consent to lay the Cuban resolution aside to permit the consideration of the bill extending the limitation of the time in which suits may be brought to secure the restoration of certain granted lands to the government.

The present limitation expires in March, and the president has, by a special message to congress, asked for immediate action. This bill is one which will excite some debate, but it is probable that an amicable arrangement will be made for its consideration some time during the week.

Senator Morgan will continue the speech on the Cuban question whenever that subject is again taken up. He probably will consume the greater part of another day in expounding his views, and will be followed by other senators, including several of the members of the committee on foreign relations, among them being Senators Sherman, Gray and Turple. There also will be speeches on Cuba by several senators not members of the committee.

Senator White will make an address during the week on the legal aspect of the Cuban resolution, criticising its form and contending that there can be no recognition of belligerency except by executive action. It is the purpose of the advocates of Cuban recognition to keep the question as well to the front as they can until they can be all disposed of, though they are not hopeful of securing a vote this week.

Senator Carter will make his speech on Wednesday on the tariff-silver bill, and is expected to explain his reasons, as well as those of his Republican colleagues, in voting against the consideration of the bill 10 days ago upon Senator Morrill's motion. He will in all likelihood be followed by other senators who acted with him, and a very animated debate may result.

It is probable that the army and agricultural appropriations bills may be reported from committee during the week.

House Forecast.

The house is pushing ahead the appropriation bills with all possible speed, with a view to an early final adjournment.

Already 5 of the 13 general appropriation bills have been sent to the senate—the army, military academy, urgent deficiency, diplomatic and consular and agricultural. The District of Columbia has in it several disputed items, but will, it is believed, cause little trouble when it is again brought into the house. The Indian bill is now under consideration, and the legislative, executive and judicial—the next in order—is on the calendar. The naval and postoffice bills will be brought in this week.

When these are disposed of, but three will remain—the sundry civil, general deficiency and fortifications. The house leaders are still hopeful that some way can be found to secure action on the tariff bill in the senate, but beyond that there appears to be little chance for general legislation, except perhaps a bankruptcy and possibly a Pacific railroad bill. Consequently, they are hurrying along the appropriations bills and shaping things for an early adjournment. Mr. Cannon, chairman of the appropriations committee, stated yesterday that sine die adjournment should be reached by the middle of May.

Bolters Refused to Trade.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Feb. 24.—Dr. W. G. Hunter, Republican nominee for United States senator, has withdrawn from the contest. He made a proposition to the four Republican legislators who have refused to support him, that if they would give him unqualified support for one week, he would agree to the substitution of a new candidate in case he should not win in that time. This, however, was declined by Senator Rummans, who represents the bolters.

No National Encampment.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 24.—The executive assembly of the grand council of the Knights of Pythias have resolved to abandon the grand encampment this year, and to hold the biennial convention of the supreme lodge in Cleveland, Aug. 25. This action was taken because, as alleged, the railroads refused to give the Pythians a one cent a mile rate.

Embezzlement of $30,000.

CONCORD, N. H., Feb. 24.—The examination of the books of Tax Collector Foster, conducted by Auditor Lyford, is progressing slowly. Further irregularities are already apparent, and it is not improbable that the embezzlement will aggregate upward of $30,000.

Banker Ladenburg Missing.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Steamer Niagara, from Cuba, via Nassau, reports that one of her passengers, A. Ladenburg, aged 37, was missed from the ship on the morning of the 20th, and no trace of him could be found. It was surmised that he fell overboard during the night.

A'cohol's Victim.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—John A. Waldron, 43 years old, known in dramatic circles as actor Paul Allen, died yesterday in the alcoholic ward of Bellevue hospital. The body will be looked after by the actors' fund.

Not Going to Zeitoun.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—The Daily News has advices from Constantinople that Clara Barton and her Red Cross agents are not going to Zeitoun, the porte having refused to grant them permission to do so.

GEORGE WASHINGTON was born in a leap year. Had he arrived a week later his birthday would not have happened very often.

FEW DEATHS in Massachusetts have caused such general regret throughout the State as that of ex-Governor Robinson on Saturday. It was always a pleasure to hear him speak, and his record as Governor was highly satisfactory. Great inroad has been made in recent years in our ranks of ex-Governors and only six remain: Boutwell, Claflin, Long, Brackett, Russell and the present executive.

QUINCY BREVITIES.

Notes from Quincy Point, Wollaston Atlantic, South and West Quincy.

Inspection of Company K this evening by Major Mossman and Adjutant Ballard.

The church bells in Quincy were rung at sunrise, noon and sunset on Washington's Birthday.

Rogers Bros. completed the filling of their ice house in the rear of their store on Saturday.

Communion service will be observed at the Wollaston Congregational church next Sunday evening.

The concluding part of Mrs. Bagley's paper on "Public Schools" will appear in tomorrow's LEDGER.

The recently elected officers of the Knights of the Camp of Israel will be installed at Wilson's hall tonight. After the installation ceremonies the members will partake of a banquet at The Greenleaf.

The Tufts College Glee club does not attempt the classical, giving preference to rollicking college songs which the majority of people who go to hear college boys sing, prefer. Aren't you going to hear them March 4th?

At the Duck's Nest alleys on Saturday, the silver cracker jar was won by Mr. Fratus, who put up the highest regulation score that has ever been put up in those alleys, 627; the silver cake dish was won by Mr. Briggs, 285, candle pins; the pipe by Mr. Whittemore for pool.

William A. Jordan of Wollaston was re-elected secretary and treasurer of the Past Sachems Association of Massachusetts. Ex-Mayor Fairbanks was appointed chairman of the executive committee and a member of the reception committee. The banquet on Saturday was attended by 150 and was a grand success.

Today and tomorrow at 4 and 8 P. M., Col. C. H. French, one of the leading educators in the United States, will give his magnificently illustrated stereopticon story of Alaska for the benefit of the pupils of our public schools. Part of Col. French's expenses are paid by the government, so that the admission price is very small.

The Ladies' Benevolent society of the Memorial church, Atlantic, are to hold their usual monthly supper and social in the church on Wednesday. A specially interesting entertainment has been provided for that evening entitled "Grandmother's Memories." Supper will be served between the usual hours and entertainment at eight o'clock.

Mr. Alexander Carlson met with a peculiar accident on Friday last. He was seated at the dinner table at his boarding house on Quarry street, when a flying rock weighing twenty-five pounds from a blast at the Craig & Richards Granite Co. crashed through the window and struck him on the head inflicting a painful injury. He was removed to the City Hospital.

The congregation at both morning and evening service at the Memorial Congregational church, Atlantic, on Sunday was very large as has been the case of late. The pastor preached both morning and evening and with the assistance of the choir in the morning the service was very enjoyable. The singing at the evening service was by a quartette.

Eighty-five boys and girls with radiant faces and large appetites sat down to seven well laden tables in the vestry of the Wollaston Unitarian church on Saturday afternoon. They did not have very much to say, speech making and small talk was not in their line just at that time. They had salads, escalloped oysters, rolls, cakes, candy and cocoa. After the spread they played games.

COUNCILMAN FIELD.

Lets Light into County Finances and Methods.

In an interview with the Journal, Councilman J. Q. A. Field replies to the personal statements of Chairman Morrell of the County Commissioner, as to contracts for granite, denying that he ever had a contract with the County Commissioners; but that he did have one with the builders.

Continuing the interview, he says, "Investigation shows that there has been paid out in building, furnishing, heating, etc., over $395,000. Contracts for the same I find on file to the amount of $279,338, leaving $115,572 paid out for which I find no contracts on file.

"Chairman Morrell is reported as saying that if the Commissioners had laid out all the highways asked for last year, the damages would have doubled the amount asked for, namely, $20,000. I find as a matter of record that in June, 1895, about a month after the bill was signed making them that allowance, that transfers amounting to $21,500 were made from seven items. A total of $21,500, which Chairman Morrell discovered in one month that he would not need for the purpose named in his estimates.

Nov. 6, 1895, there were transferred $10,500, making a total of $32,000. I think this is significant, as it shows that they did not require the money for the purpose for which it was appropriated, which fact was the contention of the remonstrants at the hearing at the State House last year.

"I find by the Commissioners' report that the county expenditures for 1895 were $197,325.65. Of this was paid for the addition to the Court House $10,092.29; for repairs and furnishings, $84,304.95; a note $5,000; total, $97,928 32; leaving the sum of $97,928.32 for ordinary expenses.

"Allowing $2,000 for the average repairs and furnishings, and a note of $10,000 to be paid in 1896, we find a total of $109,928.32 needed for 1896. From this sum deduct the receipts, which amount to $11,446.61, and the cash on hand, $8,255.04, making a total of $19,701.65, we find the required amount for 1896 to be $90,226.67.

"The Commissioners have asked for $132,500 in excess of receipts, or a total of $143,946.61. Will the Chairman please explain for what purpose the balance of $53,719.94 is to be paid?

"The county records show that for 10 years prior to 1892 the average annual county expenditures were $70,000, and this sum included extra expenses paid for an aqueduct, new boilers and an electric lighting plant at the Dedham Jail, new drainage and the Truant School.

"The Chairman states that Norfolk County has the lowest tax rate per $1000 of any county in the Commonwealth. Is that any argument for unnecessary expenditures? He further states that Congressman Morse and others were at the hearing last year before the Legislative Committee.

"Does he recollect that the witnesses admitted that they knew nothing about the facts, but merely thought that the county ought to have good building, something which nobody denies?

"I have to say to Chairman Morrell that, as far as I am concerned, if the judgment of the present Board of County Commissioners was but to go beyond the original intention, as regards the changes in the Court House (and as proof of the original intent I would refer him to contract made with the architect), the public could criticise the judgment only. But it is the business methods employed in carrying that increase into effect that I criticise and which I, for one, would like to see some light thrown upon."

A Delightful Place.

We are pleased to know that some of our citizens are at Hotel Royal Poinciana, at Palm Beach, Florida. It is certainly one of the most delightful spots we have seen on this continent at this season of the year. The air is so warm and balmy, one begins to think he is near the Garden of Eden. Near this hotel one can see growing cocoanuts, bananas, pine apples, oranges, lemons, and other tropical fruit. We noticed the following ladies and gentlemen from Quincy and vicinity are registered at the Royal Poinicana:

Miss Paffman.
Mrs. John Shaw.
Dr. A. G. Durgin.
H. P. Kittredge.
J. Walter Bradlee.

Tenth Anniversary.

Granite lodge, No. 193, Order Sons of St. George, celebrated its tenth anniversary by a concert and ball at Hancock hall, Friday evening, Feb. 21, by a large gathering of the members with their friends and ladies.

A pleasing concert opened the exercises consisting of remarks by Past President James Rapson; songs by Mr. John P. Penhall, Mr. Ernest Tutton and Mr. Chas. Craig, recitation by Mr. Priestly, selection by the Quincy Male quartette; duet by Misses F. and B. Holton; dulcimer solo by Mr. H. Johnson, negro sketch by Dan Haley, harmonica and banjo solos by Mr. Charles Barron, violin solo by Miss Priestly, and scientific ball punching by Mr. John Robertson.

At the conclusions of the entertainment came the dance which was under the direction of Boston Commandery, No. 2, U. S. K., as follows: Floor Director, Sergt. F. Norris, of Boston; assistant floor director, Col. W. Crowe of Boston; aids,—Lieut A. Sheather, Sergt. W. Woods, Comrade A. Parson, Comrade A. Sheatle, Bros. A. Richards, C. H. Spargo, Walter Deacon, W. Richards.

SCHOOL HOUSE PLANS.

Interviews with School Committee and S. O. Moxon.

A number of the School Committee when seen in regard to the charges made by Councilman Sprague at the Council meeting of Feb. 17, said he did not know that Mr. Moxon had ever seen any of the other plans and did not see any reason in Councilman Sprague's claim. As a matter of fact there were other plans than those of Mr. Moxon presented at the special meeting of the School Board, and as the committee understood, at Councilman Sprague's suggestion. The committee did not consider that the time had, even now, expired for approving plans, and had other plans been presented at this meeting there would have been no hesitation in approving them. With the plans sent at this meeting by Mr. Moxon was a letter in which he stated that one member had objected to the corridors and he had widened them. The committee in view of the difficulties arising last year, by approving several sets of plans, had deemed it wise in order to expedite matters to approve of but one set of plans this year and in carrying out this idea they had selected those which seemed to meet with the most requirements, and if these did not meet the approval of the Council some other set would probably be approved.

He did not think the remarks were at all called for, as there had never been any suggestion that these plans must of necessity come through the Committee on Public Buildings of the Council.

Mr. Moxon was also seen by a representative of the DAILY LEDGER and asked if he cared to say anything for publication, in relation to the statements made by Councilman Sprague at the last meeting of the Council, concerning plans for school buildings.

He was found ready to talk and said: "I hardly think it necessary to make any comments, because I do not believe that the statements will be considered of importance, further than that they may indicate a repetition of the shiftless and obstructive tactics of last year, which prevented the building of the much needed school building. It may however be in order for me to say, that the plans as approved by the School Board do not contain a single feature which did not appear in them as first presented, and which were also contained in plans presented by me last year and withdrawn when the confusion became so apparent. In fact the present plans do not present any constructional "ideas" which are not embodied in the present Lincoln school building, but the addition of one school room gives a different appearance and allows more room for other conveniences. It also compels a comparatively greater cost of construction. So far as ideas are concerned, this is the "whole story." It is also an absolute fact, that up to the present moment I have not seen a single line of any of the competing plans, and have no knowledge whatever of their provisions or appearance.

"I am quite unable to understand just what the position of the Councilman is, or why he is apparently so unwilling to accept the decision of the School Board. It is possible that some one of the other plans has advantages, which, while quite apparent to Mr. Sprague, do not present themselves to the observation of the members of the School Board. But this would hardly seem to justify the extraordinary statements which the Councilman is reported to have made, and which have been published so broadly, as to become a serious reflection upon our community. It is unfortunate that our municipal affairs can not be discussed, and matters properly adjusted, without the public use of statements, so intemperate in their character, as to lead any one not closely conversant with the real facts, to be very unfavorably impressed by the published reports."

A Jolly Good Time.

One of the most enjoyable occasions of the season occurred Friday evening, Feb. 21, when about twenty-five of the friends and neighbors of Mrs. John W. Hersey gave her a complete surprise at her home on Coddington street. Among the many present were Mr. A. G. Dolliver and wife, Prof. Frank Wrigley and wife, Mr. M. P. Nye and wife, Mr. C. A. Spear and wife, Mr. Charles Ford and wife, Mrs. Cannon, Miss Jennie Cannon, Miss Julia Underwood, Messrs. Warren D. Higgins, B. J. Langhorn J. F. Kemp, E. H. Martin of Quincy, Misses Mary and Emily Trumball of Boston, Mrs. Samuel Hayden and daughters Edna and Mildred of Campello and Miss Lizzie Durfee of Salem. The evening was passed pleasantly with card playing, etc., later on a light collation was served of ices, cake, fruit, etc., after which the company were treated to some fine vocal selections by Miss Edna Hayden Mr. Walter Hersey, Prof. Wrigley accompanied the vocalist on the piano. At a late hour the company left for their different homes, pronouncing the affair a grand success.

Freedom, Friendship, Charity.

Mayor Adams was a guest at the annual dinner of the Grand Sachem's Association at the Thorndike, Boston, Saturday evening, and in response to the toast "The city of Quincy" said: "Quincy stands," "as does your order, for freedom, for friendship and for charity. We of Quincy believe that the heart is better and greater than the brain, for while the brain has furnished much for the public improvement, the warm heart has not failed in making happy many of those around us. Red Men, we will welcome you to Quincy, and you will find our claims just as good today as they were when served up by the braves 200 years ago."

Braintree Great Pond.

The chairman of the three water boards, Messrs. Williard F. Gleason of Holbrook, Charles A. Wales of Randolph and James T. Stevens of Braintree, met in Holbrook, Tuesday night, and determined upon a plan whereby Braintree can receive her share of water from the Great Pond, and thereby increase her diminishing water supply, which is now taken from Little Pond in that town.

The Randolph and Holbrook pumping station is on the bank of Great Pond. Every gallon of water pumped is duly registered, so that the amount of water taken is always known. The elegant machines pump sixty-two gallons at every stroke, and have never failed in their work.

As we understand the plan, there will be two pipes—one with meter attached in a house, to which access can be gained by the commissioners of either of the three towns, as Great Pond is now joint property; the other will be what is called a "blind" pipe, through which water will run without let or hindrance, especially if water is going over the dam to waste. Should water become low or scarce, then the "blind" is shut off and meter used so that division may be equal in time of need.

We are glad that Braintree will come to Great Pond for water, because she has paid her joint part, $20,000 out of $60,000, and should have it. In fact, Braintree should have been in at the start seven years ago.

Some towns may boast of their water supply and endeavor to look down upon the smaller ones, who hold their noise and "saw wood." After all a time comes when they do speak, they are heard and their influence is felt, because they have something to say.

Randolph, Holbrook and Braintree have never given much time to boasting about their water supply at the Great Pond. They were well satisfied to let the water speak for itself, as it has done. We know that it is good water,—coming from a pond that is fed by thousands of springs and covering more than 150 acres,—and that is good enough with some to spare. We are satisfied in saying that our water supply is ample and equal to anything in this section.—Randolph Register.

Gala Sunday at Atlantic.

Sunday was a gala day in the Atlantic Methodist Episcopal church. A goodly number were present at the morning service to hear the pastor's discourse on "God in his Sanctuary." At 12 o'clock Sabbath school was opened with encouraging attendance of seventy. Teachers were in their places and the whole service seemed to be a benediction to all. At 6 o'clock an enthusiastic Epworth League meeting was held in the vestry led by Mrs. Shanor. A large number attended the evening service and listened with interest to the sermon of Rev. Harvey Fleming an alumnus of Wooster University, Ohio, which was very eloquent and interesting. The junior chorus won golden opinions, truly God is blessing his people. The best seats are open to all strangers every Sunday. Come one come all.

Church Dedication.

Washington's Birthday was a proud day for the worshippers of the Union society at Norfolk Downs for their new church home on Rawson road was dedicated.

The invocation was by Rev. Edward Norton, Scripture lesson by Rev. Preston Gurney, responses were led by Rev. Carleton P. Mills, prayer by Rev. E. A. Robinson, sermon by Rev. George L. Perin, D. D. Hymns were read by Rev. G. B. Shanor and Rev. J. E. Bagley, and Rev. C. W. Wilder pronounced the benediction.

The Oldest Lady.

Mrs. Sarah A. Burrell was ninety years old yesterday, and many of her friends in Quincy and adjoining towns called to congratulate her. She is very smart for an old lady and has good use of all her limbs, except a wrist, which she accidentally injured a few weeks ago by a fall. Her hearing and eyesight are also very good. She has attended the Universalist church nearly every Sunday during the past year until winter set in; and is looking forward to good, pleasant weather, so that she can go out again. She is believed to be the oldest lady in the city, and certainly one of the smartest. She has been keeping house until she went to visit one of her daughters, Mrs. Lovell, in North Weymouth, about Thanksgiving time, where she had the fall. She is now stopping with another daughter, Mrs. N. B. Furnald, on Washington street. We intend to call and see her when she is one hundred years old.

Hancock Street for Period Covering 257 Years.

Each Estate to be Taken up Separately and History Given

We will now journey southward on Hancock street, taking the several estates in their order, and learning what we can of their history.

At the junction of Adams and Hancock streets at the parting of the ways stands the house of Charles H. Porter, built by his father, Whitcomb Porter, in 1854.

At our right hand stands the Adams Academy building erected in 1871, at a cost of nearly twenty-nine thousand dollars. It was built from the accumulated earnings of more than two hundred and eleven acres of land bequeathed by President John Adams.

We have already spoken of the land on which this building is placed as probably being a part of a purchase by Moses Belcher in the last half of the seventeenth century.

On the 16th of August, 1733, a second Moses Belcher conveyed to the Rev. John Hancock thirteen acres, bounded easterly by the country road, southerly and westerly by John Beal, northerly by Leonard Vassall.

Mr. Hancock built a house thereon. He was ordained minister of the First Church in 1726. His son, Governor John Hancock, was born in this house, Jan. 12, 1737. It was destroyed by fire in 1759. The south east corner of the Academy building rests upon its site. Aug. 22, 1748, Lemuel Bryant bought the estate of John Hancock. July 13, 1752, Josiah Quincy bought it from Bryant. It was subsequently conveyed to John Adams, who in 1822, bequeathed the Hancock lot, so-called, together with other lands, for the uses of the Academy. The Hancock lot extends southerly on Hancock street to the Brackett estate and westerly to Goffe street.

The Old Colony railroad built in 1845, divided it in twain. Mr. Horace B. Spear states that before the railroad was built, the land on Adams street where his house stands, also the houses of Charles A. Howland and Mr. Carr belonged to Adams and extended back to Goffe street.

The railroad company bought the strip on Adams street, northeast of the railroad, and later sold it. The Vassall estate was the present Adams estate, on Adams street. Leonard Vassall built the house in 1731, and sold the property to President John Adams in 1787.

Continuing our journey down Hancock street, on the west side, we find Dimmock street, running to Goffe street on Presidents hill. It was named for Wm. R. Dimmock, the first master of the Adams Academy. He died when the school was at the zenith of its prosperity. The next two houses are built on the Hancock lot. The first, is owned by Miss M. Flora Underwood, the second by John W. Hall. The latter was built by Captain Underwood sixty years ago. The land is held by its occupants under a ninety-nine years' lease, from the trustees of the Academy fund.

The next estate is owned by Miss Nancy Brackett, who inherited it from her father Lemuel Brackett. He bought it from John Beal. The house was built in 1827. The estate extended to Goffe street. Miss Brackett was born in the Brackett house on Canal street, one of the oldest houses in town. Jeffrey R. Brackett son of Lemuel built the large house on Goffe street, directly west of his father's house. The tenth mile stone from Boston, on the highway of 1648, is built into the stone wall on the front of this estate.

Mr. E. W. Marsh, says that the next house south of the Brackett estate, was built by Deacon Samuel Savil, son of Doctor Elisha Savil, and father of Josiah Savil. He died in 1844 aged eighty years. This estate extended to the burying ground and west to Goffe street. The house was built near 1820. It is an excellent specimen of the first type before mentioned. Deacon Savil lived on the Beals farm at Squantum from about 1790 to 1815. Farther south on this estate there was an old tavern owned by Ebenezer Veazie, and afterwards by his sons, Ebenezer and Mottram.

On the south corner of Saville street is the house formerly occupied by the Quincy Stone, (now National Granite) Bank. Mr. Marsh says it was built by Elisha Turner, who carried on a tailoring business there. It is owned by Henry H. Faxon.

We now come to the Hancock House. Pattee says: "The first house on this spot was built in 1806. It was kept as a tavern by Col. James Thayer, until 1815, followed by Capt. Young, and "Deacon Samuel Savil, then by Daniel French from 1824 to 1837. In the latter years, the old house was removed, and a new one built, at a cost of five thousand dollars, called the Hancock House. It has since been enlarged."

About 1870, it was bought by Henry H. Faxon, and for several years occupied as a boarding house for the students of the Academy. In 1894, buildings of one story, for stores, were erected on three sides of it. The main building is again occupied as a hotel.

Crossing the private way leading to the railway station, we come to the City Hall. This is a stone building erected in 1844, on land bought of Daniel French. Total cost of land and building, $19,115.93. Previous to its erection, Mr. French had here a row of six or eight sheds for the accommodation of church people and others. Beyond them, close to the burying ground, an engine house stood. Next to it, and extending back to the railway, is the ancient burying ground. An interesting history of this cemetery has been written for the Historical society by Mrs. Wilson P. Marsh.

The oldest head stone bears the date of 1666.

Pattee says: "that previous to 1809 it was unfenced and neglected. Cattle were permitted to roam at large over it. In that year measures were taken to prevent further desecration.

Pattee says: "This year(1844), the Rev. Doctor Lunt and the ladies of the Unitarian society held a fair, the proceeds of which were for the purpose of adorning and constructing a more suitable enclosure around the ground. The present appropriate iron fence was built from the receipts of this fair."

In the distant future an interesting question may arise as to the ownership of this property, if it falls within the meaning of the decision of the Supreme Court "that when town and parish were one and the same, the occupation of land for purposes incidental to worship impressed upon it a parochial character and upon the separation, such land becomes the property of the parish."

Back Down, Fight or Arbitrate.

By request, the pastor of the First Presbyterian church preached Sunday evening upon "International Arbitration." After speaking of the recent excitement over the Venezuela correspondence, he said that there are three methods of settling differences between nations: Back down, fight or arbitrate. The first course would soon make a nation of craven cowards. The second has always developed heroes, and war has therefore been lauded as the great source of courage; it has also been advocated as the solvent of industrial troubles. Until our generation war has been the staple of historians and the phrensy of poets. The great Russians Verestchagin has on canvas depicte more truly as the sum of all horrors; and the philosophy of history is teaching us that war is organized pugilism and wholesale murder, developing for every hero many braggart and brutal cowards. War is always followed by widespread immortality and crime, and every apparent industrial betterment is paid for in long years of slow recovery. Arbitration is the method of Christianity and civilization.

The following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

At the regular Sunday evening service of the First Presbyterian church of Quincy, Massachusetts, February 23, 1896, at the close of a sermon on "International Arbitration" by the pastor, the people (250 being present) by a general show of hands, directed the pastor to forward through William E. Dodge, of New York, these resolutions:

RESOLVE,—That we wish the governments of the United States and Great Britian, by formal treaty, to establish arbitration as the method of concluding all differences, which may fail of settlement by diplomacy, between the two powers.

RESOLVE,—That war between these nations, which stand in the forefront of Christian civilization, would retard the progress of the world and disgrace the cause of Our Lord Jesus Christ."

VICTIM OF APOPLEXY.

Death of Bill Nye, Whose Humorous Writings Made Him Famous.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Feb. 24.—Edgar W. Nye, the "Bill" Nye of the world of humor, whose writings have made the world laugh, died Saturday at his home at Buck Shoals, eight miles south of Asheville. The immediate cause of death was apoplexy.

Edgar Willis Nye, lawyer, editor, author, lecturer and humorist, born in the east, raised in the west, made himself a name in every household by his quaint writings. "Bill" Nye, a name many thought was only his pen name, was born in Shirley, Me., on Aug. 25, 1850. While he was young his father, who was a farmer, moved to Wisconsin. Nye was educated in a school at River Falls, Wis., and in 1876 became a lawyer, practicing some time in Wyoming. In his own words: "There was much law and little profits" in the business, so he turned his attention to newspaper work.

He wrote Sunday letters for the Cheyenne Sun, and later became a reporter on the Denver Tribune. He started the Laramie (Wyo.) Boomerang, which was a financial failure.

His writings in that sheet made him known throughout the country as a humorist. His sayings were quoted in papers everywhere. When The Boomerang failed he easily found a market for his weekly letters, written in his own peculiar vein. He had found the groove he fitted at last.

From that time his income steadily increased. The last few years he is said to have made more than $25,000 a year from his lectures and writings.

He married Miss Fannie Smith of Chicago in 1877, and has several children. He lived for some time in Wisconsin, but moved some years ago to Staten Island. He had an extensive country place near here, where his experience as a farmer have been told in some of his letters.

Nye's personal appearance was well known to the public. His letters were always illustrated by humorous cartoons of their writer. He was of a genial, sunny disposition, and had many warm personal friends.

His career as a lecturer was even more successful than as a writer. Wherever he went people who had laughed over his letters flocked to hear him. He "teamed it" for several lecture seasons with James Whitcomb Riley, the "Hoosier Poet." Nye had a place of his own in American literature. His style was Nye's and no one else's, as his many unsuccessful imitators discovered.

Greenway's Proposition.

WINNIPEG, Feb. 24.—It came out yesterday that Sir Donald Smith, who came here as special plenipotentiary of the Dominion government in connection with the school question, has taken back a message from Premier Greenway which may settle the troublesome school question. Premier Greenway declares if the Dominion authorities attempt coercion he will resist it at any cost, but that if they withdraw their coercion bill and allow Manitoba to settle the question without interference he will make such concessions to Roman Catholics as are reasonable, and that they cannot fail to accept. Sir Donald will advise the Dominion government to drop its proposed remedial bill, which will likely be done.

Explaining to Depew.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—It is announced that Tucker Booth and wife will succeed Mr. and Mrs. Ballington Booth in the command of the Salvation Army in the United States. Bramwell Booth has mailed a letter to Chauncey M. Depew, in reply to the one of Mr. Depew, as chairman of the mass meeting in New York to protest against the removal of the Ballington Booths, explaining the changes in the Salvation Army in the United States.

On English Soil.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—The steamship Victoria, with Dr. Jameson aboard, arrived at Devonport last night from Port Natal. Two hundred and fifty of Dr. Jameson's men have arrived in London and have been sent to their homes. These men asserted that the Boers lost 280 men killed and wounded in the fight at Krugersdorp, in which Dr. Jameson was captured.

Two Incendiary Fires.

SOMERVILLE, Mass., Feb. 24.—An incendiary set fire to the J. McCarthy's Sons' Charcoal company sheds last night by lighting oil waste. The sheds and an adjoining stable, containing 97 horses, were destroyed, but the horses were saved. Later in the evening another fire was started in the hay and grain storehouse of A. M. Wilder.

Will Appeal to Bishop.

NASHUA, N. H., Feb. 24.—Two hundred parishioners of the Immaculate Conception church yesterday passed resolutions intimating that they would withdraw from the parish if Rev. Father Buckle did not apologize for the harsh names he called them. These resolutions will be forwarded to Bishop Bradley.

To Seek For Gold.

VLADIVOSTOCK, Feb. 24.—Newspapers announce the arrival here of the agents of an Anglo-American company, with a capital of $5,000,000, to work the alluvial gold deposits of Eastern Siberia. They intend to purchase abandoned claims, hoping to extract gold by improved machinery and processes.

After More Ducks.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—President Cleveland left the city at 11 o'clock last night on the lighthouse tender Maple for a day's duck hunting at Quantico. He was accompanied by four guests.

Keeping Bears Out of Cornfields.

In the district of Rachinsk, in the Transcaucasus, bears are regarded as the worst enemies of the maizefields, and when the season for the maize cobs to ripen comes round the population take all possible steps to protect the fruits of their toil. In the evening the peasant, armed with a gun, a kinjal, a stout oaken cudgel or whatever other weapon he can secure, takes all the dogs he possesses with him and goes off to the field, where he sleeplessly guards his maize during the whole night, sometimes at the risk of his life. He passes the night in firing off his gun and continual shouting, while during the day he is forced to work to the utmost of his powers, seeing that it is just at this period—i. e., when the maize is ripening—that he has to thrash his wheat, gather in his crop of beans, repair his winnower and make ready the places for storing his maize. If a bear gets into a maizefield in which he does not expect to be disturbed during the whole night, he first sets to work and gorges himself; then, feeling heavy, he begins to roll and sprawl on his back. Having sprawled about a bit, the bear begins to feel playful, and it is then that the maize stalks suffer most severely. Tucking his legs under him, he rolls head over heels from one end of the field to the other, and in his course he naturally breaks and rolls down everything in his way, rendering the whole crop useless.—London Times.

Man Under Thirty-five.

Mrs. Lillian Bell, the authoress, asserts that conversation with a man under 35 is impossible, because the man under 35 never converses; he only talks. And your chief accomplishment of being a good listener is entirely thrown away on him, because he does not in the least care whether you listen or not. Neither is it of any use for you to show that he has surprised or shocked you. He cares not for your approval or disapproval. He is utterly indifferent to you, not because you do not please him, but because he has not seen you at all. He knows you are there in that chair. He bows to you in the street—oh, yes! He knows your name and where you live. But you are only an entity to him, not an individual. He cares not for your likes and dislikes, your cares or hopes or fears. He only wants you to be pretty and well dressed. Have a mind if you will. He will not know it. Have a heart and a soul. They do not concern him. He wants you to be tailor made. You are a girl to him. That's all.

To Make a Good Cup of Tea.

A young man who was being joked about the appearance of the young lady he was going to marry said in an apologetic way, "Well, she can make a good cup of tea anyhow." This is a qualification that not many girls possess. Very few know how to make a good cup of tea. Here are some pointers: Tea should never touch metal. It should be kept in paper, wood, glass or porcelain. To make it, put a small quantity in a porcelain cup, fill the latter with boiling water, cover it with a porcelain saucer and let it stand three minutes. Then, if you desire to be an epicure, drink only the upper layer of the golden liquid, throw the rest away, rinse the cup and begin again. Never use sugar. Do not use milk. It ruins the flavor of the tea, and the combination injures the stomach, so the Chinese say, and they ought to know their own beverage. Above all things, do not boil the tea.

Pope Leo's Boyhood.

He spent his childhood in the simple surroundings of Carpineto, than which none could be simpler, as every one knows who has ever visited an Italian country gentleman in his home. Early hours, constant exercise, plain food and farm interests made a strong man of him, with plenty of simple common sense. As a boy he was a great walker and climber, and it is said that he was excessively fond of birding, the only form of sport afforded by that part of Italy, and practiced there in those times, as it is now, not only with guns, but by means of nets. It has often been said that poets and lovers of freedom come more frequently from the mountains and the seashore than from a flat inland region.—Marion Crawford in Century.

Not Learned In Chinook.

One of Calgary's recent contingent to the coast evidently knew but little about the Chinook, judging by the story that is being told on him. Wishing to get some clams to take back with him, he asked an old squaw, who had cobwebs in her eyes and a basket on her head, what she wanted for a basketful, and the blushing brunette replied, "Sitcum dollar, hyas klosh." To this the gay Calgaryite said: "Yumping yimminy! Six dollars and all my clothes? No, by ginger snap! I'll give you $2.50, my watch and overcoat." It is unnecessary to state that the offer was accepted, as all the dusky maiden asked for the clams was four bits.—Vancouver World.

A Remarkable Wound.

An extraordiary tale is told by Major Pryse Gordon of a wound received in the Waterloo campaign by one Donald of the Ninety-second regiment. He had been shot in the thigh by a musket ball. The ball was extracted, but still the wound did not heal. A large abscess formed. Poultices were applied, and on an incision being made, lo and behold! a 5 franc piece and a 1 franc piece were extracted, together with a bit of cloth, the larger coin having been hit nearly in the center and forced into the shape of a cup.—Notes and Queries.

Thoughts.

It is almost impossible for any one who reads much and reflects a good deal to be able on every occasion to determine whether a thought is another's or his own. I have several times quoted sentences out of my own writings in aid of my own arguments, in conversation, thinking that I was supporting them by some better authority.—Sterne.

HUNGER AND SICKNESS

Threaten to Depopulate the Greater Portion of Unhappy Armenia.

Commissioners Gave Cold Comfort to Christians.

Forcible Methods Employed to Have Them Enrolled as Moslems.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 24.—The consuls of the powers who negotiated the peace at Zeitoun report the most terrible distress and sickness. There are 80,000 refugees in the town, and an almost entire absence of beds and clothing. Many are dying of cold and starvation. The ambassadors here have opened funds for their relief. A correspondent in the interior writes:

The destitution of the Armenians beggars description. Men who were wealthy in October were begging for bread in November. Villages were pillaged of every scrap of food and clothing. When the plunderers could find nothing more to carry off, the villagers returned and sifted the dust to gather a few kernels of wheat or barley. Doors and windows were carried off. In many cases the timbers of the houses were pulled out and carried off.

And all this was done at a time when winter was so close at hand as to make it reasonably sure that cold and hunger would destroy those whom the sword had spared. Wherever you go you meet wan, pinched faces, and people clad in scanty garments. And you know that multitudes spend the long, cold nights huddled together, with nothing to lie down upon and nothing to cover them.

It is estimated that there are between 80,000 and 100,000 people in extreme destitution. The government has given a little aid occasionally. In many cases the allowance is one-sixth as much as is given to a Turkish gen d'armes or soldier. A large share of the government's appropriations for the relief of the destitute goes into the the pockets of officials.

Moreover, the Turks are hostile to relief work and oppose it in various ways. No Christian in Palu dares to receive or distribute relief funds. I happen to know that the Armenian missionaries tried to send money into Palu, and it was returned to them because no one in Palu dared to receive and distribute it. The same is true of the town of Chooncoush.

It should be said that there are some exceptions to the hostility of the Turks to relief work. Rauof Pasha, the governor general of Erzroom, has ably seconded the efforts of the relief commission there. In the town of Peri the local governor sent a gens d'armes with the committee on the rounds distributing relief. These men deserve the greatest praise because they act against the strong tide of Moslem sentiment.

A One-Sided Commission.

It will be remembered that the sublime porte, soon after the massacres in this country, sent out commissioners to investigate into the recent disturbances and take measures for quieting the country. One group of commissioners went to Erzroom, and the other entered the country at Sassoon and came to Sivas. This commission from the interior did its work very rapidly, spending only a few days in each of the principal cities on their route.

The day after their arrival they summoned before them a number of leading men—Moslems and Christians. These were admitted to the presence of the commissioners separately—first the Moslems, afterward the Christians. Report says that the commissioners said to the Moslems: "We did not expect so much of you, but now you have done it, never mind. Henceforth you must keep the peace."

When the Christians were admitted, the commissioners received them standing, and at once began to read an address reciting the benefits the Christians had received during the reign of the beneficent Sultan Abdul Hamid Khan and the perfidious conduct of the Armenians who had started newspapers and sent men to Washington and Chicago to agitate and stir up the nations against their government. In conclusion, the address adds: "Hereafter, if either Turks or Armenians stir up trouble there will be no more imprisonments, but the death penalty will be visited upon such offenders."

After the reading of the address, Abdul Pasha began to address the Christians in a much more violent strain. He said if the Armenians should again begin to agitate, not even the name of Armenian would be allowed to remain; they would all be blotted out. Drawing himself up to his full height, and stretching out his arm like a sword, he said: "What we have gained, we gained with blood; and when we give up this morsel, we will give it up with blood! blood! blood!"

So far as I can learn in the Harpoot villayet the commissioners spent all their time in Mezreh and did not even visit the city of Harpoot, which was plundered and burned, although it is only two miles from Mazreh. No questions were asked of the Christians summoned before them.

Forced Conversions to Islamism.

Another fact of interest is the sending out of officials to enroll in the government lists the names of Christians who have become Moslems. Multitudes have been forcibly converted to Islam. I do not mean simply that they have been obliged to choose between becoming Moslems and perishing by the sword, but that they have been bound or held while the rite of circumcision was performed without their consent.

I know of one case in which an aged priest was tied to his own door and circumcised, while in another village Christians begged to be killed, and their Turkish neighbors said to them: "No, we want you to till the fields. We will make you Moslems," and they circumcised the Christians of the place by force.

The government has said that these conversions were worth nothing, and no one would be forced to change his religion, but now government officials write these new converts, while the Turks drive them to say they are Moslems. In the village of Sheikhaj the official said to the Christians: "I write your names on a separate list to satisfy the Turks, there is no force about it." But one acquainted with Turkish ways may expect to find these Christians soon enrolled as Moslem citizens.

The carrying off of Christian girls and women, too, still continues. In the city of Palu, Turks carry off girls, keep them for a few days and return them dishonored. The same is done in many other places. In one of the Arabkir villages eight girls of the place are imprisoned in Turkish harems. Their friends hear their cries, but can do nothing to help them.

MOTHERS MUST GUIDE.

Should Watch the Physical Development of Their Daughters.

Information They Should Furnish at the Proper Time—Knowledge by Which Suffering May Be Avoided.

Every mother possesses information of vital value to her young daughter. When the girl's thoughts become sluggish, with headache, dizziness, and a disposition to sleep, pains in back and lower limbs, eyes dim, desire for solitude, and a dislike to the society of children: when she is a mystery to herself and friends, then, her mother should come to her aid.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will, at this time, prepare the system for the coming change. See that she has it, and Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., will cheerfully answer any letters where information is desired. Thousands of women owe their health to her and the Vegetable Compound, and mothers are constantly applying to her for advice regarding their daughters.

A BALTIMORE HORROR.

Fire In Private Residence Results In Death of Eight Persons.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 24.—Seven persons were asphyxiated, one fatally hurt by jumping from a window and five others more or less injured by a fire in the residence of James R. Armiger, a prominent jeweler, at 1806 Charles street, yesterday morning. The dead are: James R. Armiger, aged 55; William B. Riley, his son-in-law, aged 36; Richard Riley, son of W. B. Riley, aged 4; Marian Riley, daughter of W. B. Riley, aged 2½; Mrs. Marian Champlin, daughter of James R. Armiger, aged 30; James Champlin, her son, aged 3, and Horace Manuel, aged 56, of New York, a guest. Alice Williams, colored, was fatally injured by jumping from a four-story window and died in a short time. The fire was caused by a defective furnace.

Hisses For Nicol.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Ballington Booth appeared at the Salvation Army headquarters last night for the first time since he ceased to be commander of the army in the United States. Ex-Commander Booth was not attired in the army uniform, although he wore the usual military capecoat. His face was pale and showed lines of worry. Colonel Nicol, who was to have addressed the meeting, did not appear, although he was in the building all the evening. As it was, the crowd hissed him on several occasions as he passed through the corridors. Some of the officers of the army were summoned to the room where Ballington Booth had gone. Immediately after the meeting, Ballington hurried from the building. He refused to make any statement of what had occurred in the meeting, as also did others who were present.

Seeking Irishmen's Freedom.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—The Grand Opera house was crowded last night by thousands of Irishmen and their friends. The occasion was the amnesty rally, the intention being to inaugurate a movement in this country looking to the release of Irish political prisoners now incarcerated in English jails. A collection was taken up for the relief of the families of the political prisoners, and $5000 was realized. Resolutions were adopted urging upon our government "the necessity of taking immediate steps to secure the release of these American citizens, and of interesting itself for the sake of international decency and common humanity in behalf of their fellow prisoners."

Attributed to Insanity.

FOSTORIA, O., Feb. 24.—Ex-Congressman Michael D. Harter shot and killed himself here at the residence of S. Knapp, with whom he was staying. Mr. Harter arrived here from Philadelphia several days ago to attend to some business affairs, he being connected with several enterprises in this city. He was apparently in the best of spirits, but had complained to his friends that he was troubled somewhat by insomnia. Death must have been instantaneous, for the bed clothing was not disturbed, except where his body lay. The coroner decided that the deceased had killed himself while temporarily insane. There is no hint of financial or business embarrassments as a cause for the suicide.

Invited to Lay on Hands.

JACKSONVILLE, Vt., Feb. 24.—Bradley C. Newell, the local blacksmith, who has successfully treated scores of people by laying on his hands, has been invited to go to Greenfield to treat the afflicted there. He will go, and remain two or three days.

Real Estate

Having opened a Real Estate office in Durgin & Merrill's Block, we are prepared to show plans and give prices on some of the finest house lots offered for sale in this city in recent years. These lots are embraced in the following tracts of land:

PRESIDENT'S HILL.

This land was formerly the country residence of C. F. Adams. It overlooks the ocean, and the view both seaward and inland is unsurpassed in this vicinity. The grounds are covered with rare and costly shade trees, a very desirable feature of a lot, and the farthest portion of the property is within four minutes' walk of both electric and steam cars. Persons wishing a fine lot in a first-class locality would do well to inspect this property before purchasing.

CRANCE HILL,

Probably better known as Adams' Field, is situated in the heart of the city. The land is high and dry, and the streets through the property are wide and straight. The lots are good size, the prices moderate and terms very reasonable. No better lots for a man of moderate means have ever been offered in this city.

WEST QUINCY.

Land formerly known as the Dell estate on Willard street, borders on Blue Hills reservation; is handy to works, and is less than five minutes' walk to electric cars, West Quincy depot and schools. This property comprises about 80 lots.

HILLSIDE TERRACE.

On Grove street, near quarries and sheds; good lots, low prices; small amount down and small monthly payments. This property comprises about 70 lots.

Also a few lots off Bates avenue.

WOLLASTON.

A few desirable lots in Wollaston, on Hancock street, opposite entrance to Merry Mount Park.

Concord's Defaulting Tax Collector Deposed From Office.

Foster Admits Shortage of $15,000 to $16,000.

One of His Bondsmen Is Chosen to Square Up His Accounts.

CONCORD, N. H., Feb. 25.—Formal notice was yesterday served upon Albert I. Foster, the defaulting tax collector, at the jail, that charges were to be preferred against him for the embezzlement of the city's money, collected by him in 1891 to 1895, inclusive, at a meeting of the aldermen at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon; also that his removal from office would be requested on account of said charges.

The notice further stated that if Foster desired to be heard in relation to the charges, he was requested to appear at the time and place named. Foster, however, declined to appear.

The meeting was held at the time appointed, and Mayor Robinson said it was not necessary to explain the unfortunate occurrence in the tax collector's office. Mr. Lyford, while acting as auditor, did not consider that he had authority to act as collector. Foster was in a position where he could not collect taxes, and it seemed necessary that somebody should be chosen to square up the accounts. It had been thought best to remove Foster, he continued, and he had been notified of the proposed action of the board.

Mr. Lyford, in presenting the charges against Foster, said he and had found, thus far, 40 persons who had paid their taxes, but no entries of these payments showed on the books. Foster, he continued, admits $15,000 to $16,000 as the amount of the shortage. Foster's private list showed $14,000, which does not include the amount paid by John Kimball as administrator.

To Alderman Lee, Mr. Lyford said he had made no examination of the books of 1893 and 1894, and, therefore, knew of no shortage for those years, but Foster had admitted that the 1894 account was incorrect.

A resolution, removing Foster, but maintaining the responsibility of his bondsmen until his accounts are finally settled, was passed unanimously.

As Foster's successor, the mayor suggested the name of Dr. George A. Young, one of the bondsmen. This he did because Mr. Lyford, who had been urged to take the position, is now the auditor of the city, and could not hold the office unless he resigned his present position. Dr. Young was then chosen to compile the collection of taxes for the years 1892 to 1895, inclusive.

ON BEACON HILL.

Cattle Commissioners Praised and Criticised. Revision of Liquor Laws.

BOSTON, Feb. 25.—The principal event at the state house was the official announcement to the legislature of the death of ex-Governor Robinson and the appointment of a joint committee to attend the funeral of the deceased.

The committees on agriculture and public health, sitting jointly, gave a hearing on the report of the cattle commissioners and so much of the governor's address as related to the subject of the work of the cattle commission. Dr. Osgood of the commission reviewed briefly the work of the year, saying that it appeared to the commission that its work is appreciated, and as an instance in support of the belief said that in December there were 300 applications to have cows tested, where in July there were but 10.

Daniel Spear of Weston said he has handled cattle for nearly 40 years; did not take much stock in the tuberculin test, and believed that people were just as healthy and got along quite as well before the days of cattle commissions and inspectors running about to test the cows.

The senate committee on liquor law reported a bill forbidding license holders of the fourth and fifth classes from selling intoxicating liquors on Washington's birthday, Patriots' day, Memorial day, Fourth of July, Labor day, Thanksgiving day and Christmas day, or Dec. 26, when Christmas falls on Sunday.

Representative Brady was before the committee on liquor law in advocacy of his bill for a commission to codify and revise the liquor laws. The bill was favored by W. E. Weld, representing the wholesale liquor dealers.

The hearing on Mr. Krebs' bill for a biennial vote on the license question in Boston was put off one week.

Senator Miller was before the committee on education on the petition presented by himself for an increase of pay for teachers in small towns. There was no opposition.

The house passed to be engrossed the bills incorporating the Fall River Collateral Loan company; authorizing the town of Cottage City to appropriate money annually for public amusements; extending the time for constructing the Southbridge, Sturbridge and Brookfield railroad.

A Windfall Indeed.

SALEM, Mass., Feb. 23.—By the will of Caspar Cronk, who died in Holland in April, 1796, an estate worth $75,000,000 is left to the Cronk family. By a proviso in the will no distribution was to be made until 100 years after. The time of settlement is approaching, and Winston Cronk, a painter, of this city, is the principal heir, he being a direct descendant of Caspar Cronk, and of the fourth generation. He, with other heirs residing in Canada, are now arranging to have their interests in the division of the fortune looked after. Cronk has four sons, who reside here.

Work of Incendiary.

BOSTON, Feb. 25.—The historic Deacon mansion was gutted by fire this morning. The fire was undoubtedly incendiary, for the mansion had been closed since the Deacon family went abroad a few years ago. The former owner was Edward P. Deacon, who figured in a Paris tragedy, wherein he shot an alleged lover of his wife. The mansion was recently sold to A. D. Puffer of Boston. While unoccupied, the house had been recently refurnished.

Lewis Has a Secret.

PORTLAND, Me., Feb. 25.—The citizens of Gorham will offer a reward of $800 for the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Byron G. Coburn, who was killed Dec. 13, 1894. James Lewis, who was convicted of the crime in January, 1895, and whose case was nol prossed by the state after the trial was granted him by the higher courts, is in the city, and it is believed that when the reward is offered he will give enough evidence to cause the arrest of the old man's murderer. Lewis says that when the state is ready to proceed he will have something to say about the murder.

An Unsafe Structure.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Feb. 25. — The Middletown end of the new iron bridge over the Connecticut river, between this city and Portland, sunk a distance of three feet last night, and the structure, which cost $180,000, is in danger of sustaining considerable additional damage. The ferryboat Brownsyone was in her slip alongside of the bridge, and she is firmly held in position by the pilings, which bent over on her. The sinking of the bridge was caused by the washing away of the earth which supported the abutments.

Labor Men Angry.

HAVERHILL, Mass., Feb. 25.—The board of conciliation took no action at the meeting last night on the "turned lists" as complained of by the firm of Hodgdon & Johnson, and the matter was postponed another week. Labor men are unanimous in their denunciation of the meeting, and accuse the manufacturers of intentional delay to secure the present low prices for labor.

Physicians Held For Trial.

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 25.—Drs. Hacker, president of the United States College of Medicine and Surgery, and Arthur Forth were arrested on a warrant issued at the request of the state board of health for an alleged violation of the law requiring physicians in this state to register. The men pleaded not guilty, and were held for trial in the sum of $500 each.

Dread Disease Appears.

WALTHAM, Mass., Feb. 25. – Daniel Queen, 30 years old, had been ailing for several days past and finally decided to go to the Waltham hospital for treatment. His case was diagnosed as that of smallpox. The board of health were notified, and had the man removed to the pest-house. Queen was employed as a cook at a boarding house.

Amesbury's Holiday.

AMESBURY, Mass., Feb. 25.—The eighth annual vehicular exhibition of carriage builders has begun, and during the week over 1000 carriage dealers from all parts of the Union are expected to be present. Fifty factories are in holiday attire, and 10,000 vehicles, including bicycles and street cars, are on exhibition.

Mysteriously Disappeared.

ATTLEBORO, Mass., Feb. 25.—Maria W. Richardson, 50 years old, who has been sick, left her bed yesterday, and with nothing on but her night clothes and a waterproof, disappeared. The river has been searched, also surrounding towns, but no trace of her has been found.

Asylum Attendant Afflicted.

AUGUSTA, Me., Feb. 25.—A severe case of diphtheria has been discovered among the employes at the insane asylum in the person of Miss Turner, an attendant, aged 16. She has been employed there but a short time. It is not thought that it will spread.

New England Briefs.

The Boston Armenian relief fund now amounts to more than $23,000.

Mrs. Gormley, aged 55 years, was knocked down and killed by an electric car at Boston.

Stephen P. Burt, 58 years old, was struck and fatally injured at Lewiston, Me., by a runaway team. One shaft crushed in his ribs and penetrated his lungs.

Mr. Goodring, a wool spinner, has entered suit against Postmaster Dalton of Thornton, R. I., placing damages at $5000, for alleged alienation of Mrs. Goodring's affections.

The management of the turf events of the New England fair, which is to be held in Portland next August, have arranged for 10 trotting events, with $1000 purses each, and six pacing events, also with $1000 purses.

Internecine Strife.

LIMA, Feb. 25.—President Pierola installed the council of state. The troops which the government sent from here to Cerro Pasco have misbehaved, and the residents of that place beg the government to guarantee them against the troops' misconduct. It is probable that claims will be advanced by the British and Italian ministers here in behalf of citizens of their countries as an outgrowth of the trouble.

SECTARIAN SCHOOLS.

House Says They Shall Receive No Aid From Government.

Linton of Michigan Scores Roman Catholics.

Both Branches of Congress Put In an Interesting Day's Work.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—The house, in committee of the whole, yesterday, after a very interesting debate, by a vote of 93 to 64, decided that none of the appropriations in the Indian appropriation bill for Indian schools, should go to sectarian schools. The only sectarian schools to which money now goes are Roman Catholic in denomination, and the fight yesterday was led by Mr. Linton, a Michigan Republican.

Last year the appropriation was cut down 20 per cent, with the understanding that it should be reduced 20 per cent each year until it ceased at the end of five years. The committee on Indian affairs, pursuing that policy this year, recommended that this appropriation be again reduced 20 per cent, but Mr. Linton moved an amendment to the effect that no portion of the appropriation should go to sectarian schools.

In his speech in support of it he attributed the defeat of many members two years ago to their refusal to abolish sectarian schools, and predicted disaster to those who still stood out against their abolition. He also referred indignantly to a statue of Pierre Marquette, robed in the gown of a Jesuit priest and decorated with the paraphernalia of his church, which is shortly to be erected in Statuary hall, in the presence of high dignitaries of the Catholic church.

Mr. Linton recalled the fact that he had two years ago ago denounced the policy of appropriating money for sectarian schools. He had warned members then, and his warning had not proved effective. The result was the absence of men whose faces had been familiar in the halls of congress for years. "But," said he, "the storm of ballots and the flood of indignation which overwhelmed them will be but as a zephyr and a rivulet compared with what will happen if congress persists in this policy."

He had read a great mass of resolutions from churches and other sources protesting against appropriating money for contract sectarian schools. Every member of the house, Mr. Linton said, knew that the pending bill carried $250,000 for sectarian schools, every dollar of which would go into the coffers of one church. Over 4000 children were educated at these schools.

It could not be argued, he said, that these children would suffer. The Roman Catholic church would take care of its own. It was powerful enough. It had a right to, but not with public money. "It may be that I am thought an extremist on this subject," said he, "but I know I am right and I know the people are with me."

Both political parties, he declared, were pledged to the complete divorce of church and state. He knew, he said, the nature of the pressure upon members; he knew the lobby was at work, but that would not deter him from doing his duty.

Senate Proceedings.

The public interest in the Cuban question was shown by the crowds which came to the senate galleries in anticipation of a continuance of the Cuban debate. The diplomatic gallery showed the largest representation since the session opened.

Mr. Morgan (Ala.) occupied almost the entire day in a narrative and historical speech. Mr. Morgan spoke for three hours, and had not concluded when the senate adjourned.

A significant vote on the resolution for an investigation of the recent bond issues was taken during the day. Mr. Lodge's resolution for an investigation came up, and Mr. Peffer offered an amendment for a special committee and a more comprehensive inquiry. Mr. Lodge sought to have the amendment laid on the table, but his motion to this effect was defeated—16 to 34. Final action was not secured, as Mr. Hill carried the debate beyond 2 o'clock.

Senator Caffery gave notice of an amendment which he proposes to offer to the tariff bill, providing for an ad valorem duty of 50 per cent on all sugars imported, and adding ⅛ cent a pound on all sugars imported from countries paying an export bounty.

The bill pensioning the widow of the late Secretary Gresham at $100 a month was passed.

Sultan's Side of It.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—The Turkish legation has received from the sultan a copy of the very exhaustive report of the uprisings in Turkey, made after investigation by the special commissioners of the sultan. Numerous outbreaks were included in the investigation, but the report indicates that each of these, without exception, was due to seditious plots by Armenians, who thus incited the violent disapproval of the Turks. Extensive outrages and massacres are alleged to have been committed by Armenians in certain districts of Turkey.

Preparing For the Fray.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—There was a meeting of the Democratic congressional campaign committee here last night for reorganization and to take the initial steps for the prosecution of the congressional campaign of the present year. Senator Faulkner of West Virginia was elected permanent chairman and Lawrence Gardner of Washington was re-elected to his old place as secretary of the committee. The selection of a treasurer was left to a sub-committee.

A Little Popular Loan.

OTTAWA, Feb. 25.—The new $3,000,000 loan, to provide means for strengthening the national defenses, will be "popular." The rate of interest provided for is 4 per cent. The bonds will be placed at a low figure, probably $100 each. It is expected by the government that the necessary amount will be subscribed speedily.

The Wisdom Of Trading Here.

Confidence in the people you trade with, should be the first principle of shopping with the thinking buyer.

If one needs the services of a physician, he naturally has a preference, and its nothing but confidence in the man you talk with that leads you to follow his advice to the letter. The sole aim of the clerks in many of the stores of today, seems to be the one object of selling goods, no matter by what means or by what misrepresentations.

At this store things are different, the great fundamental principle of this business is to keep the interest of our patrons at heart—misrepresent nothing, and sell the best the market produces at money-saving prices. These methods alone account for the success of this business and the confidence the people have in our store system.

Sunday School Work.

A meeting will be held in the Wollaston Unitarian church on Monday evening, March 2, 7.45 o'clock which will undoubtedly attract a large and appreciative audience. The meeting is to be held in the interests of the Sunday School of that society. The subject discussed will be "The Relation of Parents to the Sunday School." The following well known persons are expected to speak: Miss Sarah L. Arnold, a Boston school supervisor; Rev. Edward A. Horton, president of the Unitarian S. S. society; and Rev. Thos. Van Ness, pastor of the Second church of Boston. After the speaking an informal reception will be held in the vestry. Invitations have been extended to the Unitarian societies in Quincy and Neponset to send large delegations.

Very Prolific.

The home of William H. Mulligan on Union street was blessed with a pair of twins on Sunday evening. As the wife had presented her fond husband with two or three pair, on former occasions, it was not so much a surprise to him, as it might have been to some other gentlemen in this city. God bless this numerous household.

—At a meeting before the committee on taxation at the State House, recently, it was stated that Boston has $16,000,000 of church property exempt from taxation; Worcester, $2,000,000; Newton, $1,069,000; Springfield, $1,500,000; Lynn, $1,065,000. and Cambridge, $1,285,000.

LAST NIGHT'S BANQUET.

Royal Black Knights Install Officers and Enjoy Menu.

Mt. Joy Perceptory, Royal Black Knights of the Camp of Israel, held its third annual banquet at The Greenleaf, Monday evening, and a very enjoyable occasion it proved to be.

Previous to the banquet the following officers were installed for the ensuing year:

W. P.,—Frank Tinney.
D. P.,—Frank E. Hunter.
Chaplain,—A. M. I. McLeod.
Registrar,—Murdock A. Campbell.
Treasurer,—William McInnes.
First Lecturer,—John McPherson.
Second Lecturer,—Malcolm McKenzie.
First Censor,—Daniel F. Tinney.
Second Censor,—Hugh Gillis.
First Standard bearer, — Charles F. Archibald.
Second Standard bearer, — William J. McLeod.
Pursuivant,—Andrew Stewart.
Taler,—John Ross.
Committee,—M. C. McDonald, M. A. Campbell, A. M. I. McLeod, A. Stewart, F. Tinney, William McInnes, John McPherson.

Shortly after 9 o'clock the members entered the hotel and seated themselves in the banquet hall, and for an hour were busy discussing the following menu:

The Menu.

Providence River Oysters.
Consomme Royal.
Boiled Deep Sea Bass; Egg Sauce.
Roast Beef, Roast Turkey.
Mashed Potatoes, Green Peas.
Salmon Salad.
Lemon Milk Sherbet.
Delmonico Pudding.
Washington Pie, Apple Pie.
Vanilla Ice Cream.
Tea, Coffee.

This pleasant duty over, Chairman McLeod called order, and in a few words welcomed those present and tendered his sympathy to those who were unable to be present on account of illness. He then said the Royal Black Knight was to the L. O. L, what the Knights Templar were to Masonry. The order was instituted in the thirteenth century by descendents of William, Prince of Orange, to defend truth against all idolatry and infidelity, and to give every man liberty to worship God according to his own dictations; also to to support those in distress. The members aim to imitate the example of such patriarchs as Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and Joseph with Moses, Joshua, and it purposes when joined in the bond of brotherhood to maintain inviolate the laws of God against the false worship of idols, as well as to support all religious rulers and states against their foes, foreign or domestic.

W. P., Frank Tinney, was next called upon, and in responding he thanked the members for the honor bestowed upon him. We are bound together to maintain the true religion founded on the Holy Bible. Let us protect these glorious principles. Let us respect each other as brothers, and be true to the country and flag of the United States. It is our duty to protect this flag, that the memory of our fathers who fought for it may be handed down to our children. We live in a free country, and enjoy rights as citizens, and let us see to it that by our actions we do not debase those great principles.

Other brief remarks were made by R. A. McQueen, Frank E. Hunter, T. Walter Good, John Ross, Andrew Stewart, Malcolm McKenzie, M. A. Campell, C. F. Archibald and others.

Those present were: A. M. I. McLeod, W. J. McLeod, William Dawson, Frank Tinney, Frank E. Hunter, Daniel F. Tinney, Murdock C. McDonald, William McInnes, John McPherson, Hugh Gillis, R. A McQueen, Andrew Stewart, A. Buchanan, D. V. McKenzie, James Beaton, M. A. Campbell, C. F. Archibald, Malcolm McLeod, Malcolm McKenzie, T. Walter Good, John Ross, Christopher J. H. Totman and LEDGER representative.

A Difference.

Editors of Daily Ledger:

It seems to me that Mr. Sproul in drawing a comparison in Friday's LEDGER between the Wollaston and Quincy post office controversies has overlooked one of the principal points in the present contest, viz. Mr. Burns does not have the support of his party's accredited representatives and managers in his own ward, under these circumstances for Democratic non-residents to step in an manage his campaign is to attempt to foist him upon the Democratic party in Wollaston against their will; in Mr. Adams' contest in '89 he had the unanimous support of the Republican committee in his own ward, and those Republicans of Wollaston who signed his petition simply endorsed the party's unanimous choice, through its accredited representatives.

THE CITY COUNCIL.

Hearing to be Given on Location of Quarry Railroad.

The absent members at the special meeting of the City Council Monday evening were, Councilmen Little, Phillips, Rinn, and Russell.

President Bryant read the call for the meeting, after which Councilman Anderson presented a petition of the Quincy Quarry Co., for the approval of its locations and map of its engineer, for its extension from a point near the Quincy Adams depot to the "North Common."

Upon request of Councilman Anderson this petition was laid on the table.

Councilman Anderson then offered an order for a public hearing at the Council chamber on Monday, March 16, the same to be advertised in the Quincy DAILY LEDGER.

In support of his order Councilman Anderson said by the charter of the Quincy Quarry Co., the road must be located within one year and the directors find themselves short of time, and thus the special meeting.

The order for a hearing was adopted.

Adjourned at 7.50.

A Jolly Party.

The following party arrived at this place in yacht Etta May from Daytona and New Smyrna Saturdy last: Messrs. George H. Holden, of Swampscott; Fred R. Crane, Dorchester; Henry P. Kittredge, Quincy; J. Walter Bradlee, Milton; James V. Conner, Boston; Augustus J. Towns, Randolph, and Dr. A. G. Durgin, of Quincy, Mass. This is as jolly a party as ever was made up from the "Old Bay State" and they are bent on seeing the whole of the east coast, which they will accomplish most thoroughly under the care of Capt. A. M. Pellett, of the above yacht, who is assisted by his brother, Mr. Oscar Pellett, as first mate. The party sailed Sunday morning for down river points. — Florida Star of Titusville, Feb. 21.

TODAY'S COURT.

George A. Collier was fined $5 for drunkenness at Quincy, and $10 for assault on his wife Lucy Collier. Collier got a little money Monday and immediately filled himself up with rum. He went home about 9 45 that evening, but the supper his wife had prepared he did not like for he wanted meat. He then went out and returned shortly after 11 o'clock and drove his wife out of the house. When she attempted to go back he grabbed her by the throat and choked her.

Literary Notes.

Mr. William H. Lambert, of Philadelphia, is one of the most intelligent and indefatigable collectors of Lincolniana in the country. His collection includes many rare and precious pieces. Of the "Life" of Lincoln now running in McClure's Magazine, Mr. Lambert writes: "I congratulate you upon the value of the Lincoln history, and upon the success which has followed its publication. Presenting as it does Lincoln's personal history and characteristics more fully than any other biography, I believe it is destined to be the popular life of the great American."

Godey's Magazine for March is filled with matter that is timely, beautiful, and interesting. Perhaps the most absorbing are two biographical articles: One "The Life of Cecil Rhodes," and the other called "The Senorita of the Sword," being descriptive of Jaquarina, the Spanish-American swordswoman who has defeated the cracks of the United States and English armies, and who will represent America in the Olympic Games this spring.

FOR A CITY PLANT.

Arguments Pro and Con at the Electric Light Hearing.

At the hearing on the petition of the city of Quincy, for authority to establish an electric light plant, the arguments were as follows:

Mayor Adams said the city felt that they were being charged more than necessary. The city was paying a considerable amount for the benefit of a private company. All the city desired was to light its own buildings and streets. This was not, as far as he knew, an entering wedge to furnish light for sale. It cost the city $75 for each arc light, and $20 for each incandescent, making a total cost of about $15,000 per year. We want an opportunity to investigate this subject and find out how cheap we can furnish light. We want to light our streets at cost and not be obliged to be taxed for the maintenance of an antiquated plant.

President Bryant, said the matter of light had been forcibly brought to his mind as chairman of the Committee on Streets and to his mind it was wise to have legislation to enable the city to furnish light for municipal purposes only. Quincy was a growing city and it would be little hardship to the company. They were not in condition to give the city what it needed. He then entered into the matter of wires on Hancock street which was fully aired in the City Council. The company was organized to furnish power for the street railway but that company has since built its own plant. This was what the city wanted to do.

Mr. E. W. Burdett, counsel for the electric light company, commenced to cross question Mr. Bryant at length in regard to length of lines, etc, but was cut short by the committee who said it only desired testimony as to why the present company was not meeting with the needs of the city.

Mayor Adams then said he did not come to the hearing to charge that the company did not give what the city wanted. It was simply in regard to price. We want to present the case on the general principles. If we are compelled to present absolutely local conditions he would like further time.

Chairman Southard said there did not seem to be any need of any general evidence, as this was a particular petition, but if it was desired the committee would hold back its report until after the other hearings, and Quincy could be heard on general principles before them.

Mayor Adams agreed to this.

Henry M. Faxon was the only one heard for the company and in response to questions by Mr. Burdett said that 875 shares of the stock was held in Quincy and 22 shares outside of Quincy, but in Massachusetts, and 99 of the stockholders were residents of Quincy. He explained at length the territory covered by the company's lines and said it had 67 miles of wire. It furnished 102 arc lights, 100 of which were in the city, and 213 incandescent lights. They were run on the moon schedule, but that on dark nights when the moon was expected to shine and did not, the lights were run. In 1895 they burned 1632 hours. The cost to the city for arc lights was 4 6 10 cents per hour per lamp and for the incandescent it was 12 2 100 cents per hour per light. He then told of the equipment of the plant, and said if Quincy had its own plant all of this would be thrown out of use. The company had never refused to make extensions asked by the city and was willing and able to do so and did often, although unprofitable.

This closed the hearing.

—Dr. Cyrus Edson has made public the secret of his consumption cure, which he now calls aseptolin. In 228 cases treated with it in New York, improvement was noted in all but four and a cure is expected in at least half of the whole number. It looks as if aseptolin would conquer consumption as antitoxin has overcome diphtheria.—Somerville Journal

OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Education As Viewed From English Woman's Standpoint.

Written for the Teachers' Association of Quincy.

By Mrs. Blanche P. Bagley of Wollaston—Delivered Feb. 13, 1896.

[Concluded from Feb. 21.]

No, class distinction is still prevalent in England, to an almost incomprehensible extent. I will give an illustration of this which came under my own notice, which also shows that the child naturally is not to blame. Some few years ago in England I was walking with a little boy 8 or 9 years old, the son of wealthy parents, when I noticed that, meeting other boys of his own age, he doffed his cap in response to the same salute from them, with one exception; one little fellow's graceful salute being met with a cool and stiff nod on the part of my little friend. I asked him the reason and was asked in return whether I thought it right to expect that a boy in his position would be likely to take off his cap to the son of a "common sailor," with a world of contempt in the last two words. I told him that I thought it extremely wrong that he, a gentleman's son, should make any such contemptible distinction, and that it might be well for him to come over to America for a year or two to learn the lesson. Circumstances were such that a year or so later he did come, and attended the public schools in a town in Pennsylvania, at which I was in college. At the end of the second year of his visit he had grown so democratic, that he the little ultra exclusive, who formerly in England would not return the salute of a sailor's son, was found one day, sitting on a fence, smoking a cigar, turn about, with a little negro boy whose mother did our washing. I am sorry to say, I saw him last summer in England with all his democracy washed off.

Thus, the board schools in England are little more than the place of instruction for the poorest and lowest classes of the English people, and very few self respecting fathers and mothers with any pretensions to gentility, will send their children to them unless driven to do so by urgent necessity.

I could not thoroughly understand the reason for this, until last summer, while visiting in the neighborhood of London. In fact I had repeatedly urged upon a friend whose means were not abundant and who had a large family of boys, to let them have the benefit of the free education. She answered all my arguments however, by saying, that although she and her husband were both well educated people, she would prefer to have her children grow up in utter ignorance of books, than let them associate with the class of children they would meet with in the board schools.

I was silenced, but not convinced until passing one of these schools a few days later, in a poor district, just as it was let out. I had to admit that her reasons were valid, for, I have simply never had such an experience before or since. It was pandemonium let loose, such a putting, and shouting, and scrambling, and pushing as cannot well be imagined. I was pushed from one side to other and the child I was leading knocked over, without the faintest attempt at an apology, unless "Why can't ye get out of the way" was intended for one, until at last I caught the child up in my arms, and made my escape as fast as I was able from the neighborhood of the school gates, wondering what the teachers could be like, of such uncivilized little beings.

To satisfy my curiosity I entered one of these schools, shortly after, while it was in session, and came to the conclusion that even if the knowledge imparted there, was equal to that given in American schools, that that school, at least, (and it was a representative one) was in every way inferior to our Wollaston one.

Bare and rough looking and pretty closely surrounded by other buildings, with very little in the rooms in the way of picture or ornament, unless a map, here and there could be called such, the teachers apparently of an inferior class of society to those to whom we are in the habit of confiding our children, and without that grace and dignity of manner and deportment to which we are so accustomed in our teachers. Very little could possibly have been gained by the scholars but the barest and baldest book learning.

I went from room to room accompanied by an important looking but somewhat untidy principal, and was greeted almost invariably by stiffness on the part of the teachers, and by either a bold effrontery, or a shame-faced bashfulness, from the children, giggling being distinctly audible throughout our entire tour of the rooms.

The conclusion I left England with, after visiting this and two other schools of the kind in the neighborhood of London, was, that although the methods of the English board schools, were perhaps the best the conditions of society there would admit of, the American public school system, a unit in itself, and embracing all classes of society, is incomparably better for America, and indeed for any other country in which it could be applied.

The sole enemy to the introduction into England of such a complete and efficient method as we have, is of course as I have hinted, the caste system, as in other respects where class distinctions, do not infringe, we find England shoulder to shoulder with us in all progress and reform.

This being so is it not strange that there should exist, as there do today. Americans so infected with Anglo mania, that they seem willing to try and propagate the horrors of such a system as this class distinction, in their own country.

Would they not do not do better to use all powerful force of intellect, and all their phenominal ingenuity of device in endeavoring to exterminate this, and like evils, at least when they see signs of their fatal growth in their own beautiful, free, home land. BLANCHE P. BAGLEY.

The advantage of a policeman over a burglar is that the officer has the law on his side. Health has the same advantage over disease. The Law of Nature is for people to be healthy. When they are sick, Nature helps to cure them. Nature's law is the guide for curing sick people. There is no way but Nature's way. What the doctors call many different diseases Nature cures in one way; by nourishing the whole body with good, pure, rich, red blood. That is Nature's way of curing scrofula, erysipelas, kidney and "liver complaint," consumption and every form of eruptive and wasting disease. When you want to help Nature with medicine the medicine must work the same way as Nature works, then it has the laws of Nature on its side to make it powerful. That is the secret of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery's wonderful cures. It assists Nature according to her own laws; it is on Nature's side and Nature helps it; it imparts new power to the nutritive and blood making organs to create a large quantity of fresh, red, healthy blood which drives every germ of disease out of the system and builds up strong healthy tissues and solid flesh. The "Discovery" completely clears away every form of blood-disease from the system; It even cures consumption. It is the only true radical cure for that disease; facts and testimony to prove it.

"I would like to tell the whole world what your 'Golden Medical Discovery' has done for me. The doctor, who is considered an expert on lung troubles, told me I had consumption. He said both my lungs were diseased and I could not live long. I felt down-hearted for I have dear little children to live for. I just went to him to get his opinion. I am glad I did for now I know what your medicine will do. When I started on the second bottle I was better in every way and was able to take a walk on every fine day. I enjoyed my sleep, my appetite was good, and by the time I had finished the second bottle I began to feel like a new woman. I still had a cough, so I got a third bottle and by the time it was half gone I was completely cured."

OLNEY'S CANDIDACY

Appears to Be Favorably Received In Democratic Ranks.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25. — The formal launching of the Olney boom by Mayor Quincy at Boston Saturday evening is regarded as deeply significant here, and is the leading topic in political circles. The strongest silver men of the party say that they prefer Olney to any other eastern gold man; that he has never on the stump or otherwise antagonized violently the free silver people; that he has left no wounds by his advocacy of eastern standards, and has done nothing detrimental to party unity.

Tariff extremists say they prefer to have the presidential contest waged on revenue lines, and as such would prefer a name more strictly identified with the low tariff idea, like Morrison or Wilson, although they acknowledge that Olney's devotion to the Cleveland tariff program is no less steadfast than to sound money or a conservative and strong foreign policy.

Massachusetts people are somewhat surprised at the passing over of ex-Governor Russell by Mayor Quincy, but they generally express the idea that Olney is a man of presidential size.

Headed Off.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—Steamer Bermuda, flying the British flag, was boarded and seized by revenue officers off Liberty Island late last night. The Bermuda has been under the watch of Spanish spies for some time. They had reason to believe she had been bought by Cuban revolutionists and has been fitted out as a filibuster. At 11 o'clock p. m., just after a large party of Cubans had gone aboard, the revenue cutter Hudson steamed alongside, and a boarding party arrested all on the Bermuda. After gathering all the prisoners on deck—60 in number—they were transferred to the Hudson and divided into small groups under guard. A few of the regularly shipped crew were left on board with some marshals to take care of the steamer. Four bags of gold were seized by the marshals, and a quantity of ammunition.

A Newspaper's Obsequies.

MITCHELL, S. D., Feb. 25.—The entire outfit of the Mitchell Mail—presses, type and other fixtures—was yesterday taken into the street and publicly burned by an orderly and well-behaved body of business men. The editor of the paper, Robert McBride, has for a long time been attacking various public institutions and prominent people. Much indignation was aroused, and citizens offered to buy out McBride's plant if he would go elsewhere. He agreed, but later withdrew from the bargain. The citizens thereupon appointed one of their number to act as agent for McBride, paid the money agreed on and then took the property out and destroyed it as stated.

No Love For Weyler.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—Cuban revolutionary clubs last night celebrated their first anniversary, for one year ago yesterday patriotic Cubans took up arms against oppression and tyranny, and made the first strike for freedom. Chickering hall was crowded to its utmost capacity. Many fair daughters of the southern island were dressed in deep mourning, indicating that relatives and friends had given up their lives to the cause of freedom. All except one of the speeches were in the Spanish language, and the applause was frequent and long when General Weyler was scored.

About Jameson.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—There was still no indication at 4 o'clock this morning of where Dr. Jameson is to be landed in England, but it is believed that it will be somewhere along the Thames. The Times assumes that he will be arraigned in the Bow street court today. The directors of the Chartered South African company are equally in the dark as to what proceedings are intended. They state that full bail will be forthcoming. The proceedings in the Bow-street court are likely to be exceedingly brief, The Times thinks. The Morning Leaders declares that Dr. Jameson has been at the Hotel Metropole in London on parole ever since Sunday.

Another Outbreak In Nicaragua.

MANAGUA, Feb. 25.—News has been received here of the outbreak of a revolt, and the whole of the district north of Lake Managua, comprising the departments of the west and of the north, both of them numerously populated, are in full revolution, and are armed against President Zelaya. The president has lost no time in proclaiming martial law, and is recruiting the army rapidly, having already impressed many men. The revolutionists are a faction of the political party now in power in Nicaragua, and the opposition party seems quiet at present, with no purpose of joining the revolution.

America's Gain.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 25.—V. C. Kaponsteers of Moscow, who is interested in cotton milling in the czar's realms, is here, negotiating with cotton dealers for the purchase of raw material. "We have been buying Egyptian cotton, but the prices have increased so much that it led us to speculate in this country," said he. "I have just completed a tour of the cotton states, and am greatly pleased with the result. I find the quality much better than I expected, and prices are satisfactory. There is disposition among Russian capitalists to ship the raw material and erect their own cotton compresses."

Of Stuart Blood.

GALESVILLE, Wis., Feb. 25.—Mrs. Elizabeth Coleman, aged 100 years, died here yesterday. Her father was a first cousin of the last lineal descendant of the royal family of Stuarts, descending from James II. At the age of 6 months, her father was killed, and later on her mother, by marriage beneath her rank, was disinherited.

Ward Released.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—The board of arbitration of the National League yesterday released John M. Ward from the New York club, it deciding that Ward was not legally retained. The magnates' gathering yesterday did not transact any other business of special importance.

"Blue and Gray" Parade Opposed.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—General Walker, head of the Grand Army, says that he has lately visited all of the principal northern cities and found that there was strong opposition to holding a "Blue and Gray" parade in New York city on the Fourth of July.

Bill Nye's Funeral.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Feb. 25.—The funeral of Edgar W. Nye occurred at 11 o'clock today at Fletcher's, 12 miles south of this place. A special train left here for the scene this morning.

Meat and Bad Temper.

Mrs. Ernest Hart, a specialist on diet, writes: "One deplorable result of excessive meat eating in England is the ill temper which is a chronic moral complaint among us. In no country, I believe, is home rendered so unhappy and life made so miserable by the ill temper of those who are obliged to live together as in England. If we compare domestic life and manners in England with those of other countries where meat does not form such an integral article of diet, a notable improvement will be remarked. In less meat eating France, urbanity is the rule of the home; in fish and rice eating Japan, harsh words are unknown, and an exquisite politeness to one another prevails even among the children who play together in the streets. In Japan I never heard rude, angry words spoken by any but Englishmen. I am strongly of the opinion that the ill temper of the English is caused, in a great measure, by a too abundant meat dietary combined with a sedentary life. The half oxidized products of albumen form urates and uric acid, which, circulating in the blood, produce both mental and moral disturbances."—London Globe.

The Woman Landlord.

Women make very good landlords, but beware of the woman who owns only one house. She regards it as the apple of her eye. She lives near to keep it under surveillance. Whether she goes out on an errand or takes her constitutional, her steps lead by her house. At a glance she can tell the condition of the shutters, the front door and the area. Her accustomed eye knows every scratch, and she is prepared to resist to the utmost any proposition to renew the shutters or to paint the front door.

She regards her tenant as her natural enemy, and cannot understand why she may not enter her own property whenever she has a mind.

But she is cheerfully prompt on rent day; too prompt, for she does not take delay with grace. When a woman has a second house, say the agents, her character is ameliorated. And as her knowledge of affairs broadens she does not differ materially from other landlords.—New York Journal.

Origin of Two Tavern Terms.

The term "entire," so often seen over inns and taverns (and not always understood by the passersby), is said to have first been used about 1722. Prior to that date the malt liquors in general use were ale, beer and "twopenny." It was usual for tavern customers to call for a pint or tankard of half and half—that is, half ale and half beer, half ale and half twopenny, or half beer and half twopenny. In course of time it became customary to call for a tankard of "three threads," meaning a third of ale, beer and twopenny. To save publicans the trouble and waste of turning three taps for one pint of liquor a brewer named Harwood conceived the idea of making a beverage which should unite the flavors of all three drinks. He called his production "entire," or "entire butt beer." As it was considered suitable for porters and other working people it is said to have obtained the further name of "porter."—London News.

Wound Steam Pipes.

The plan of winding steam pipes over eight inches in diameter with three-sixteenths inch copper wire, thus nearly doubling the bursting pressure, is pronounced by competent judges to be an important change in engineering practice. Further, that the thickness of sheet copper forming the pipe may be reduced to the minimum, and at the same time insuring the full advantage of wire winding, an improved system of manufacturing steam pipes has been devised, described as consisting in simply using copper of the thinnest possible gauge to form the interior or core of the pipe, while the body proper is composed of steel wire wound closely around the core, the interstices being filled in solid with copper by electro deposition. Increased strength comes from wire winding.—New York Sun.

Signatures of Two Presidents.

Charles Moore, a clerk in the Adams express office, possesses a parchment deed issued at the Zanesville (O.) land office on June 20, 1811, to Thomas Honeboard, granting him the northeast quarter section of lot 12 of township 18 in range 15 of the lands directed to be sold at Zanesville by the act of congress entitled "An act providing for the sale of United States lands in the territory northwest of the Ohio and above the mouth of the Kentucky river." To the deed are attached the signatures of President James Madison and Secretary of State James Monroe, and on the opposite lower corner is affixed the official seal of the government.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Improving an Old Master.

This is true, though you will not believe it. A distinguished, but very Philistine lady, who has in her possession a rare and beautiful "old master," has hitherto kept the picture in her gallery, because she did not consider "the nude" suitable for exhibition in a drawing room. The other day she asked her German governess—an amateur artist—to paint clothing on to the figures. Now the picture has a place of honor in her drawing room. I am told the effect is rather extraordinary.—London Gentlewoman.

Had Some Familiarity With Both.

"What is the biggest game in your country?" inquired the English tourist with the gun on his shoulder.

"Moose and politics," replied the lank American who was sitting on the fence and whittling a stick.—Chicago Tribune.

Her Name.

Such a wee mischievous lassie!
It tries one's patience quite
To watch the child. She cannot do
A single thing just right.
'Tis "Kitty, don't say that, dear!"
"Oh, Kitty, don't do so!"
These are the words that greet her
Wherever she may go.
When, just at dusk, one evening,
She climbed upon my knee,
In playful mood I asked her name,
"Why, Kitty, course," said she.
"Yes, Kitty, but the rest, dear?"
She hung her curly head—
The rogue!—for just a moment;
Then, "Kitty Don't!" she said.
—Max Guthrie in St. Nicholas.

Victor and Vanquished.

Through the crowded streets, returning at the ending of the day,
Hastened one whom all saluted as he sped along his way,
In his eye a gleam of triumph, in his heart a joy sincere
And the voice of shouting thousands still resounding in his ear.
Passed he 'neath a stately archway toward the goal of his desire
Till he saw a woman's figure lolling idly by the fire.
"I have won!" he cried exultant. "I have saved a cause from wreck,
Crushed the rival that I dreaded, set my foot upon his neck!
Now, at last, the way is open; now, at last, men call me great!
I am leader of the leaders; I am master in the state!"
Languidly she turned to listen, and decorous was her pretense,
And her cold patrician features mirrored forth indifference.
"Men are always scheming, striving for some petty end," said she;
Then, a little yawn suppressing, "What is all of this to me?"
* * * * * * *
Through the shadows of the evening, as they quenched the sunset glow,
Came the other, faring homeward, with dejected step and slow,
Wistful, peering through the darkness, till he saw, as oft before,
Where a woman stood, impatient, at the threshold of the door.
"I have lost!" he faltered faintly. "All is over!" with a groan.
Then he paused and gazed expectant at the face beside his own.
Two soft eyes were turned upon him, with a woman's tenderness;
Two white arms were flung about him, with a passionate caress,
And a voice of thrilling music to his mutely uttered plea
Said, "If only you are with me, what is all the rest to me?"
* * * * * * * *
All night long the people's leader sat in silence and alone,
Dull of eye, with brain unthinking, for his heart was turned to stone,
While the hours passed all unheeded till the hush of night had ceased
And the haggard light, returning, flecked the melancholy east.
But the other, the defeated, laughed a laugh of merriment,
And he thrust his cares behind him with an infinite content,
Reckng not of place and power and the smiles of those above,
For his darkness was illumined by the radiance of love.
Each had grasped the gift of fortune, each had counted up the cost,
And the vanquished was the victor, and the winner he that lost.
—Harry Thurston Peck in Bookman.

SYSTEM AND PRACTICE

The Reasons Given For Removing Ballington Booth and Wife.

Signs of Rebellion In the American Ranks.

Arbitrary Action From Abroad Not Likely to Be Tolerated.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—Bramwell Booth, on Feb. 15, mailed a long letter to Chauncey M. Depew, in reply to Mr. Depew's letter of protest, as chairman of a mass meeting held in New York, against the removal of Commander and Mrs. Ballington Booth. The letter says:

"I have to acknowledge the receipt of the letter of Feb. 3, signed by yourself and other gentlemen, and addressed to General Booth. Inasmuch as a considerable delay must needs occur before the general can reply by letter to yours, owing to his absence in the East, and seeing that I have already obtained from the general—to whom I have cabled an epitome of the resolutions which are embodied in yours—telegraphic instructions as to his views on the matter generally, I shall endeavor at once to explain them on his behalf so far as I am able.

"I will confine myself to indicating to you the general principles that are at the base of the general's decision to change the commanding officers of the army in the United States. I desire, first of all, to point out that this change is in entire harmony with the system and practice of the army since its inauguration. Indeed, but for the operation of this rule of periodical removal from one command to another, Commander and Mrs. Ballington Booth would not have been appointed to the United States at all. I dwell upon this fact because I see evidence, both in your memorial before me and in the comments of a section of the American press, of a supposition that in some way our treatment of the present case is exceptional.

"I think you will admit that the large measure of success which has been attained by the army is in itself proof that the anticipations of disaster—very similar in character to those you seem to entertain—which have nearly always found expression when our successful commissioners were removing, have been groundless. These removals have always been made; they have always been deprecated, and often vigorously opposed; but I think you will acknowledge that the mere existence of the army today in greater strength than ever is a striking proof that they were necessary to the realization of its divine commission to go into all the world, and to 'disciple all nations.'

"But why such changes? Not only for the sake of the direct advantages—the positive good—which in the United States and in other countries that have already been gained, but in order to secure the utmost devotion to the principles which the army has been raised up to enforce, and to avoid any such exclusive confidence in, or attachment to, individuals as your memorials convey. It is much the same consideration as has led your statesmen to

Object to 'Third Terms.'

"And the general feels himself all the more bound to this principle, and to its equal application, in a case where members of his own family are involved. It would be gravely and immediately destructive of confidence in the whole administration of the army if it could appear as though to be his son privileged, and, on that account, to obtain for himself a more agreeable position or a greater popularity than others no less devoted and experienced could attain. Expediency, as well as the universal sense of justice, demands that it should be made impossible to doubt the impartiality of the general in those great appointments.

"But there is one respect, especially, in which I venture to think your memorials reveal a danger which General Booth cannot but regard with sincere regret. He would be the last to dispense with the services of any of his children to the Army and to the kingdom of Christ, and he has always rejoiced in every evidence Commander and Mrs. Ballington Booth have shown to their appreciation of America and Americans.

"But after all they are only Americans by adoption, and the general, during his recent months of travel in your country, had abundant opportunity of seeing what has been accomplished among your people by the self-sacrifice and toil of officers of the army, many of them American born, and others of them laboring in the country for years before the present leaders were appointed.

"It would, I am confident, be exceedingly distasteful to him to find an effort for the exaltation of his son and daughter based on any want of appreciation and esteem for the devoted and unselfish men and women who have served under them, and whose toil, they would be the first to admit, has so largely ministered to their success.

"We all are intensely awake to the importance to the whole world of the success of the army in America. We always look forward with confidence to the time when your great country shall furnish no small quota of both men and women for the vaster conquests that still await our Lord and Master in the Eastern world.

"To you, as well as to others who value the work of the Army, I would say that the success of the work in the past, both in the United States and other lands, is in itself your highest ground for confidence that General Booth will still receive the divine blessing of the leadership in the future.

"To you, sir, therefore, and to the gentlemen whose names follow yours in the letter before me, I know that the general will look to act in accordance with those very kind expressions of confidence in and sympathy with him which were so frequent during his last visit to the States, and which again find expression in the letter referred to."

Won't Yield to Tucker.

R. O. Alexander, attorney for Ballington Booth, ex-commander of the Salvation Army in the United States, declared yesterday that his client would not turn over the American property of the army to Booth Tucker, the new chief now coming from London to take charge of the American army. Mr. Alexander said further that Mr. Booth might proceed to reorganize the army on an independent and distinctly American basis.

"The Salvation Army is not organized as a corporation," said Mr. Alexander, "and cannot hold property in its own name. Nor can a foreigner hold real estate in this country unless he has declared his intention to become a citizen and so the army property—all the real estate property at any rate—has been acquired in his name.

"Legally he is the absolute owner of property valued at $700,000. There are no restricting clauses about holding in trust, or as trustee in any of the title deeds. The War Cry belongs to him also. He may do with it exactly as he pleases. Neither his father nor anyone else has a legal right to interfere with its management, or to claim a penny of what the paper earns.

"Ballington Booth realizes where his obligations lie, and he will not fail to meet them, but he knows what is in justice due to him as well, and he will be guided, as well as his wife, by the best interests of the army in this country. The result of the trouble will be good. The United States may have its own army, an American army, the best in the world."

A meeting of sympathizers with Ballington Booth was held at headquarters yesterday. The staff officers who were at the meeting were fixed in their purpose to support Ballington Booth in whatever he chooses to do, even to the extent of rebellion and the establishment of an American army totally independent of English control.

One of the staff officers said that the property of the army in America, as well as the money, was in Ballington Booth's hands, and was likely to stay there. He thought that the time for sympathy was over, and practical business was at the top. There was no reason why the army in America should submit to arbitrary action from England, and it would not be tolerated.

Another staff officer said that there was no doubt in his mind but that Ballington Booth would declare the army to be free and independent of England, and would go on with him at the head without dictation. The officer felt sure that the rank and file of the army would stand by the commander in the present emergency, although some might hold out for a while.

A bulletin was posted stating that Eva Booth had been appointed (by cable) temporary commander, pending the arrival of a new commander from England.

BY LAYING ON HANDS

Blacksmith Newell Is Said to Have Performed Marvelous Work.

Man's Paralyzed Legs Cured In Five Minutes.

Over a Hundred People Treated In Western Massachusetts.

GREENFIELD, Mass., Feb. 26.—Bradley C. Newell, the village blacksmith of Jacksonville, Vt., whose reported marvelous power for healing by laying on of hands has given him a widespread reputation, came to Greenfield yesterday and is quartered at one of the leading hotels, where he will remain for three days to attempt his cures on all who come to him.

He drove from his home in Vermont to Shelburne Falls, and came from that village to Greenfield on the cars. At Shelburne Falls he treated about 20 people, and on the train he was importuned by passengers to exert his influence upon them.

At the hotel here a crowd of nearly 50 were waiting for Newell, many having come from Springfield, Athol, Northampton and other cities in western Massachusetts. Not a few walked with crutches, and some had to be helped.

All this display was made over a great, awkward Yankee blacksmith, who less than a month ago was as unknown to fame as the poorest plodder.

All the afternoon Newell was engaged in treating the patients. For the first time in his career he

Charged $2 For His Services

to those who were able to pay, but last evening he treated about a dozen persons who are in straitened circumstances free of charge.

He treated probably 100 people yesterday, many of them prominent citizens of Franklin county. Some were helped, while others went away disappointed. John Hayden of Athol, a paralytic, was one of the latter, while C. G. Crane of Springfield, whose legs were paralyzed, was cured, apparently, in five minutes, so that he jumped about the room like a young colt.

In an interview last night, Newell said: "I am tired of the notoriety and excitement which attends my efforts, but I came to Greenfield, as I went to Brattleboro, at the earnest solicitation of prominent citizens. Since Aug. 1, 1895, I have treated probably 5000 people, and many of them say I have helped them, but I know that there are many whom I do not help. That is what I dislike about it. I know people are disappointed when I fail to help them, but it is no fault of mine, for I do not advertise myself or make any boasts.

"I never knew what it was to be tired before. Tonight I am weary. The crowd which follows me is tiresome, and I lose strength by treating folks. I am still at a loss to explain the power which I have. ## ON BEACON HILL.

Worcester Normal School—Female Notaries. The Robinson Obsequies.

BOSTON, Feb. 26.—The senate adopted an order that, when it adjourns, it be to meet on Thursday afternoon.

An order was adopted that when the house adjourns it be to meet on Thursday, Feb. 27, 1896, at 2 o'clock, on account of the funeral of the late ex-Governor Robinson. Previous to the adoption of the order, Speaker Meyer, who took the floor for that purpose, advocated its passage as a fitting recognition of the character and public services of the deceased.

In the senate a committee of seven members were appointed to attend, with the president, the funeral of the late ex-Governor George D. Robinson at Chicopee.

The speaker appointed 12 members as a committee on the part of the house to attend the funeral of the late ex-Governor Robinson. The speaker, in accordance with the terms of the order adopted by the house, is also a member of the committee, but will not be able to attend the funeral.

When the bill providing for retaliation when the insurance brokers of this commonwealth are discriminated against by other states came up in the senate for enactment, Mr. Malone moved that it be tabled. He had consulted the law department, and there was some doubt as to its constitutionalty. The bill was tabled.

On motion of Mr. Roe an amendment was adopted to the resolve to provide for completing and furnishing the gymnasium of the Worcester normal school, increasing the appropriation from $10,000 to $12,000, and the resolve passed to be engrossed.

Mr. Slade offered an order in the house requesting the opinion of the supreme judicial court as to whether the legislature can legally authorize the governor and council to appoint women notaries public. The order, at the request of Mr. Mellen, was laid over.

Adventists' Views.

BOSTON, Feb. 26.—The midwinter prophetic convention of the Second Adventists opened here yesterday. The following officers were elected: President, G. H. Wallace, Springfield; vice presidents, W. J. Hobbs, Boston; F. Burr, Somerville; secretary, F. L. Piper, Boston. President Wallace, in his annual address, said: The people have been called out to herald the second coming of Christ to this world. We are not looking for the end of the world by total annihilation. We are looking for the redemption, and for that Christ is coming back to this earth. We are looking for the end of the age. The world is not going out of existence; it will last forever, but in a restored state. All indications seem to point to the fulfillment of the great promises by God in the Bible. There has been no time when these prophetic signs have become so apparent as the present.

Teaching Cleveland's Children.

BOSTON, Feb. 26.—The school committee last night reconsidered the previous vote and granted Miss Frieda M. Bethmann, principal of the Thomas N. Hart kindergarten, leave of absence till April 1. Miss Bethmann left for Washington several weeks ago to teach the children of President Cleveland, although the school committee refused to grant a leave of absence.

Sifting the Evidence.

CONCORD, N. H., Feb. 26.—At yesterday afternoon's session of the governor and council, in the hearing in the Manchester police commission case, Governor Busiel announced that it was the opinion of himself and his associates that "the law of 1893 does not impose upon police commissioners the duty of enforcing the laws, but we will hear evidence tending to show misconduct on the part of the police officers, which the commissioners have connived at, or, which having been brought to their attention, they have willfully or wrongfully refused to consider." After a sharp wrangle by the attorneys the examination of witnesses began. The hearing is unfinished.

A Generous Starter.

WORCESTER, Mass., Feb. 26.—At a meeting of members of the Worcester Art society and other prominent citizens last night, the announcement was made of the formation of a corporation to be called the Worcester Art museum. Stephen Salisbury has presented to the city a tract of land, comprising 1 3-5 acres, whereon is to be erected a public art museum. He gives for this purpose the sum of $100,000, of which $50,000 is for the building and $50,000 for a fund, to be held in trust by the art museum for the benefit of the city of Worcester.

A Tale of Misery.

BOSTON, Feb. 26.—The New England Armenian relief committee have received the following cablegram from the treasurer of the Anglo-American relief committee in Constantinople: The British ambassador hears that there are great misery and sickness among refugees at Zeitoun, especially on account of the bitter cold. The sick by hundreds lie near corpses of dead women and girls, without a rag to cover them. Press upon all committees our need for funds.

The Deadly Live Wire.

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 26.—Jesse Tracey, aged 45, and his son, aged 17, employed at the British Hosiery company's mills at Thornton, were killed yesterday by taking hold of a live wire that had become crossed with a trolley wire. The men ascended a pole to remove the telephone wire, and the elder Tracey grasped the wire and died almost instantly. The son also grabbed the wire, sustaining a fatal shock. The senior Tracey leaves a widow and four children.

Mrs. Valois Surrenders.

JOHNSTON, R. I., Feb. 26.—Mrs. Clara Valois appeared yesterday in the office of Judge Phillips, saying she wished to surrender herself, as she was charged with shooting her father. Judge Phillips said that as the warrant for her arrest had been taken to another town by a deputy, she could not be held until later. Mrs. Valois declares the charge is ridiculous.

Wanted For Forgery.

NASHUA, N. H., Feb. 26.—The police officers sent after Gustave Ganlin, who is wanted for uttering a forged check and getting it cashed, arrived here from Effingham, Ills., last night, with Ganlin. The prisoner's father is a wealthy Providence man. When Ganlin went away a girl from Lowell, Mass., accompanied him, but she left him in Chicago.

CUBANS IN COURT.

United States and Spanish Consul Prefer Charges Against Them.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—The iron steamer Bermuda, flying the British flag, which was seized off Liberty island by revenue officers because she had been bought by Cuban revolutionists and was fitted out as a filibuster, is tied up at the government pier at the battery.

Benjamin J. Guerra, treasurer of the revolutionary junta, was arrested yesterday afternoon by the United States marshal. It is charged that he gave a receipt for certain money to be used in the filibustering expedition.

At the examination before Commissioner Shields, United States District Attorney MacFarlane directed the calling of General Calixto Garcia, Captain Hughes, Benjamin Guerra, Captain Brabazon and John D. Hart. The first four, through their counsel, were granted a postponement until March 3. John D. Hart asked for a speedy hearing. His examination was set down for Friday next.

General Garcia and Captain Hughes were subsequently arraigned upon another count, the two charges including the Hawkins and the Bermuda filibustering.

The charges against the five accused were made in the name of the United States, but the additional charges against General Garcia and Captain Hughes were brought by the Spanish consul. All the prisoners furnished bail and were set at liberty.

A. G. Gonzalez, a lawyer, who is a supporter of the junta, said that the expedition had cost about $100,000. The Cubans, he declared, were by no means discouraged by the present disappointment.

A report from Washington says that while Minister Dupuy de Lome declined to speak about the Bermuda's seizure, it was learned, however, that the Spanish authorities there attach more importance to Monday night's results than to anything yet accomplished.

For at least a month they have spared no efforts to circumvent the departure of filibusters or the shipment of arms to Cuba, and every man who escaped from the foundering of the Hawkins off Long Island have been unceasingly "spotted" by the Pinkertons.

General Calixto Garcia, who led the Hawkins expedition, has been most closely watched from day to day, and spies have accompanied him to Philadelphia and other places which he visited, it is claimed, to secure support for another expedition.

The Spanish legation, it is said, was fully informed that the men from the Hawkins were held in daily readiness to re-embark, and extraordinary precautions were taken to defeat them.

Bank Robbers Foiled.

WARREN, Ark., Feb. 26.—A daring but unsuccessful attempt was made to rob the Merchants' and Planters' bank of this place yesterday. About 3:30 o'clock three men entered the bank, and two of them went behind the enclosure, where Cashier Adair was in conversation with T. M. Goodwin and D. W. Sutton. Their first salutation was: "Hold up your hands." Mr. Adair sprang for his pistol, when the men commenced shooting, and Goodwin received what is thought to be a mortal wound and Adair was shot through the shoulder. He returned the fire and wounded one of the men. The robbers did not accomplish their object. As they rode out of town they kept up a fusilade of shots.

First Impressions Last

Therefore be careful of the first impression. On entering a strange house one gets his first impression from the hall. If this looks bare the impression is bad.

The hall should be furnished, not of course with bric-a-brac and rocking chairs, but appropriately, that is with a simple hall stand. They are rich, handsome, convenient, and add a constant air of welcome. Wonderfully low in price; in rich quartered oak they cost from $5.50 to $25.00.

BECAUSE THE sum of $75,000 has been named, possibly off hand, in the first draft of the order for new schoolhouses, it does not follow that that sum will finally be appropriated, or that it is actually necessary for the construction of schoolhouses after any plan proposed. It is said that the estimate for nine-room buildings under the plans approved by the School Committee will not exceed $32,000 each, which would be less than Fall River and New Bedford pay for eight-room buildings. The cost of the Lincoln building of eight rooms was $24,150 or $3,020 per room. The proposed buildings are of nine rooms requiring a material change in construction, and at $32,000 each would make the cost per room but $3,555.

At the time the appropriation was made for the purchase of the school lot at "The Rail," objection was made by some that it would cost a large sum to make it fit to build upon. It now seems that the estimate for this work is $2,500, which must be included in the order, but this should not be charged up against any architect. Even with this extra cost, Quincy may secure nine-room buildings for $35,000 or less, which is as low a figure as in other cities. However would it not be a good idea to appropriate $75,000 "or so much thereof as may be necessary," and not borrow the whole amount unless needed? This might keep the city debt down $5,000 to $10,000.

NEW QUARRY RAILROAD.

Quarries on North Common to be Connected with N.Y., N.H. & H. R.R.

The proposed extension of the Quincy Quarry railroad, when completed, will enable quarry owners on the North Common to enjoy the same transportation facilities, as those west of the Granite branch, and they will therefore be able to compete successfully with other places.

The route as shown by the plan accompaning the petition to the City Council is as follows:

Commencing from a point about 1,000 feet north of the Quincy Adams station, going north the track turns to the left, crossing the estate of the heirs of Daniel Baxter and crossing Granite street, near the office of Swithin Bros., by an overhead bridge fourteen feet above street. The line then runs nearly parallel with Gass place through land of the Adams Real Estate Trust, passing near numerous ledges and unoccupied quarries until near the quarry of Fagan & Ballou when it makes a long sweeping curve, crossing Quarry street and passing near the Matthews quarry and ending near what is known as the Carr quarry.

From the main line there are numerous spur tracks, the first of which runs into Field & Wild's quarry. Then comes the quarry of C. H. Hardwick & Co., which has a spur on each side of its quarry. Other spurs reach quarries of the Craig & Richards Granite Co., Merry Mount, Hitchcock, Dell, Fallon, and many others whose names do not appear on the map.

GRANITE SITUATION.

March 1st Rapidly Approaching and No Agreement.

Some Talk of Strike but It is Hardly Probable.

Both Sides, However, Firm on the Discrimination Clause.

As the first of March draws near there is a feeling of uneasiness on the part of those engaged in the granite industry, both the manufacturers as well as the men, for the reason that the bill of prices has not been adjusted as yet, and it is doubtful if it will be, for the fight, if such it can be called, has simmered down to a contest for supremacy.

Among the most important matters asked for by the cutters last December was that a day's labor should be eight hours, and the elimination of what is known as the discrimination clause.

A number of meetings have been held between the two committees and while a number of small matters still remain unadjusted the two most important questions unsettled is the discrimination clause.

The men are firm in their demand to have that clause stricken out, while the manufacturers are just as firm in their wish to have it remain in, and here the whole matter hinges. March 1st is the time the agreement expires. Work will probably continue however until an agreement is reached.

The two committees hold a meeting this evening, but it is not thought by either of the two committees, members of which were seen by the LEDGER representative this morning, that either will give in on the discriminative clause.

Many of the cutters are strongly opposed to a strike although they have the promise of support from other unions.

All agree that there is considerable of that going on now but how much more so would it be was there no bill to act as a stay upon those who are disposed to abide by and live up to the bill of prices.

Secretary McAdam of the Cutters' Union when interviewed, said things looked bad, and although he personally was not in favor of striking, many of the men were, and he could not tell the outcome. He had, however, issued a call for a meeting of his association for Friday evening, when definite action would be taken as to whether a strike should be declared or whether the men continue to work without any bill of prices.

The Wisdom Of Trading Here.

Confidence in the people you trade with, should be the first principle of shopping with the thinking buyer.

If one needs the services of a physician, he naturally has a preference, and its nothing but confidence in the man you talk with that leads you to follow his advice to the letter. The sole aim of the clerks in many of the stores of today, seems to be the one object of selling goods, no matter by what means or by what misrepresentations.

At this store things are different, the great fundamental principle of this business is to keep the interest of our patrons at heart—misrepresent nothing, and sell the best the market produces at money-saving prices. These methods alone account for the success of this business and the confidence the people have in our store system.

REPUBLICAN CLUB.

A Meeting Last Evening to Organize One.

Those Present Were of Many Minds as to Feasibility.

Committee Appointed and Another Meeting to be Held.

In response to invitations sent out among the more prominent Republicans, the following gentlemen met in Durgin & Merrill's block Tuesday evening to take some action toward the formation of a Republican club:

John F. Merrill, Warren W. Adams, Frederick L. Jones, Lester M. Pratt, Charles A. Howland, John Q. A. Field, Russell A. Sears, Warren H. Rideout, George H. Field, Harry W. Read, Albert Keating, Charles H. Johnson, James P. Clare, Henry O. Fairbanks, T. H. Newcomb, Stephen O. Moxon, H. B. Brown, Walter S. Pinkham and Wellington W. Mitchell.

John F. Merrill presided, and he stated that it had been thought advisable to form a Republican club in Quincy, and for that reason the meeting had been called.

Remarks followed by nearly every gentleman present, and it was noted that there were about as many ideas expressed as there were gentlemen present.

Some thought a great mistake had been made in ignoring the Ward and City Committee as a committee and that it would cause the impression to go forth that it was for a select few. O hers thought the invitation should have been a general one and still others thought that the proper method had been taken, and after the organization had been completed an invitation would be extended to all Republicans to become members. There should be no division between this club and the Ward and City Committee or with any other organization, as it did not aim to antagonize any of them, but all should work together.

The general idea seemed to prevail that it would be well for the club to let municipal politics alone and confine itself to National and State affairs.

Warren W. Adams moved "That a Republican club be organized in Quincy."

Walter S. Pinkham offered an amendment, "to further the interests of the party in National and State affairs."

This caused some discussion. The amendment was voted down and the original motion carried.

It was then voted that a committee of seven be appointed to include the chairman, to formulate a plan for the organization of this club and report at a future meeting.

The committee consists of the following gentlemen:

John F. Merrill, Warren W. Adams, Charles H. Johnson, Frederick L. Jones, George L. Miller, Henry O. Fairbanks, Harry W. Read.

It was then voted that each of the committee invite three other gentlemen, one of whom shall be the chairman of his Ward committee to be present at the next meeting.

The meeting then adjourned until Saturday evening.

Surprise and Presentation.

The many friends of Mr. Jasper B. Wentworth of Dorchester gave him a royal surprise at his residence on Tuesday evening. The company were all members of the Round About club, and anything but a grand good time with them is out of the question. Covers were spread for twenty and at the conclusion, Mr. John McNutt in a few well chosen remarks assisted by Mr. George W. Bean, presented Mr. Wentworth with a beautiful bust ornament from the members of the club, and which had been ingeniously concealed beneath a large exquisite floral bell that occupied the centre of the table. Mr. Wentworth, though dumbfounded for a few minutes showed he was equal to the occasion and his words of gratitude were admired by all.

Mr. Vernon's Perpetual Pointer.

"That pointer of mine is a great dog," declared Howard Vernon as he petted his $1,000 dog Glenbeigh. "I can always depend on him. When he makes a point, I know that he has scented a bird, and I know that he will not move a muscle while I have a chance at it.

"I was hunting quail up at Point Reys when I lost Glenbeigh. I knew he must be pointing in the brush somewhere, but I looked everywhere for him and could not find him. The next day I resumed the search, with no better success, but on the third day I found him in a dense thicket standing perfectly rigid, with his tail sticking straight out behind and one foot up. A quail had run into a hollow tree, and the dog stood at the opening pointing. The quail dared not come out, and the dog, true to his training, wouldn't move. He had been standing in that position, without so much as moving a foot, for 65 hours, and when I tried to lead him away he could not walk."—San Francisco Post.

Broke Up the Party.

At a card party in the northwest a few evenings ago a cross eyed man was posing as the man who knew it all, giving his positive opinions on every subject in a loud voice and otherwise making himself a general nuisance. A Boston girl was particularly annoyed at the lordly air he assumed and the attacks he had made on some of her pet theories. She made up her mind to bowl him over if she ever got a chance.

It came sooner than expected. A few minutes later the Boston girl was the partner of the cross eyed man, who immediately proceeded to give elaborate instructions as to how certain cards should be played to insure them the game. He finished by saying, "Now, go ahead, Miss Back Bay, and remember I have my eye on you." She never looked up, but in the most innocent way imaginable, said, "Which eye, Mr. Jones?" It broke up the party.—Washington Post.

Glory Sufficient.

The barber's trade is everywhere recognized as honorable, but The Commercial Bulletin tells a story of one man who had peculiar reasons for magnifying his office.

There was once a hairdresser in Boston who numbered among his patrons many gentlemen of the medical profession. One day, when operating upon one of them, he broke forth in great glee:

"Vat you dink, dogtor? I haf been to dot hospital, und vhile I vait to go up und cut a man's hair I see marple busts of de dogtors. Dere was Dogtor Storer und dere vas Dogtor Peegelow mit de vig I dress for him dese dwenty years, in marple. Dink of dot! Von of my vigs in marple!"

Information For the Teacher.

The teacher was asking questions—teachers are quite apt to ask questions, and they sometimes receive curious answers. This question was as follows:

"Now, pupils, how many months have 28 days?"

"All of them, teacher," replied the boy on the front seat.—Utica Observer.

Expects the Worst.

I always expect the worst in all things and all cases, because I know the worst is possible; therefore it is natural for me to expect the worst, and as it is the unexpected that happens, the worst does not often happen to me.—Fiber and Fabric.

The man who eats because he is hungry is, thus far, on a level with the brutes. The man who stops eating the moment his hunger is appeased is the wise man. Nature needs no more food than she calls for. Continued excess brings about indigestion or dyspepsia, with loss of flesh, strength, sleep, ambition and mental power; and an accumulation of aches, pains and many dangerous local maladies.

The stomach now can do nothing alone. We must appeal to some artificially digested food which can also digest other foods. That is to say, we must use the Shaker Digestive Cordial. # DR. JIM'S POPULARITY.

Transvaal Raider Cheered In Court by London Hero-Worshippers.

Magistrate Made Vain Appeals For Propriety.

Jameson's Crime Considered Serious Enough to Provoke War.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—Dr. Jameson and his officers were taken off the steamer Victoria yesterday by the police. A large crowd had gathered at Waterloo pier, and when Dr. Jameson appeared he was loudly cheered. Omnibuses conveyed the party to the Bow-street police court, the cheering crowd running alongside the vehicles.

It was probably not without design that the appearance of Dr. Jameson for arraignment in the police court was delayed. There was a disposition to hilarity manifest in the locality from an early hour, and it was evident that there was a set purpose to give "Dr. Jim" an ovation.

The British authorities desire, as far as possible, to give no appearance of encouraging such a demonstration of approval to a citizen who had been handed over to them by a power against which he sought to wage war.

But the British government is well aware that, though Dr. Jameson is brought to England for trial as a criminal, he is in the popular eyes a hero, and his raid into the Transvaal, far from being viewed as a piratical enterprise, is looked upon as a chivalrous and knightly adventure to succor hard-pressed friends and fellow countrymen.

It was for this reason that the crowds about the Bow-street police court were kept waiting, and everything done to make a mystery of the movements of Dr. Jameson. It was hoped the ardor of his admirers would be cooled by the long wait, and that the noisy mob waiting to cheer him would grow weary and depart.

But all this strategy was without avail. The people insisted upon waiting. They grew impatient and somewhat irritable, to be sure, and many rumors circulated among them that they had been duped into coming to Bow street, while the distinguished prisoner had been quietly smuggled into another court and there arraigned and quietly bailed. It did not take long, however, to prove the falsity of these rumors, and the crowd renewed its vigil with reawakened zeal.

At 3:55 p. m. the faith of the crowd that they had not been waiting in vain was quickened by the arrival at Bow-street police court of a party of aristocratic friends of Dr. Jameson. Many of these were shown to prominent places in the courtroom, which was thus made to present an animated scene during the period of the still further wait.

As a matter of fact, it was quite late in the day before Dr. Jameson was landed at all. He was brought on a tug to Frith-on-the-Thames, and was then conducted by a further roundabout and obscure route to Bow-street police court. As a consequence, it was almost 6:30 o'clock in the evening when he was finally driven up to the entrance of the court and brought in. The authorities thus succeeded in evading any very noisy demonstration on the part of the waiting crowds outside, as they were scarcely aware that the prisoner was among them before he had disappeared into the courtroom.

But his entrance to the courtroom was the signal for a remarkable scene. Evidently everyone in the courtroom was of one mind in sympathizing with him. All were his friends and all rose, giving him hearty cheers. It was in vain that the court officers sought to quell the demonstration. The effort to do so seemed

Little More Than Cursory.

The charge lodged against Dr. Jameson and 14 of his fellow-prisoners was then declared to be "warring against a friendly state."

After the charge had been read, Henry Matthews, Q. C., who was home secretary in the former Salisbury government, announced that in view of the importance of the case that the law officers of the crown would conduct the prosecution. Formal evidence was then presented as to the circumstances of the arrest.

The lawyers who were in court on behalf of the accused men asked that their personal recognizances be accepted for bail.

Sir John Bridge, the chief magistrate of the Bow-street police court, said that, before deciding on the bail, he felt that he ought to observe that, in his opinion, a graver offense could not be charged against men than that charged against the prisoners. It was a crime of the highest possible gravity, the magistrate continued, and it must be so treated by everyone, when they consider that the commission of such an offense might create a war between countries previously friendly. The circumstances of the present case, he added, were most peculiar. He felt satisfied that the prisoners would appear when wanted. He, therefore, accepted their personal recognizances and fixed their bail at £2000 bonds each.

Sir John Bridge then addressed the prisoners personally in a grave and serious vein. He begged them for their own sakes and for the sake of the good faith of the country to refrain from appearing where public excitement would be aroused by their presence, or in any way lending themselves to the disturbance of the peace.

Notwithstanding the seriousness of Sir John's tones, and the tenor of his remarks deprecating any public demonstration over the prisoners, the withdrawal of the defendants from the courtroom was accompanied by a renewed outbreak of cheering. The court officers set about restoring quiet, and by vigorous remonstrances finally succeeded in quelling the disturbance.

When the courtroom had become quiet again, Sir John Bridge said: "That sort of thing might bring the name of England into contempt."

Meanwhile a still wilder scene was being enacted outside the courtroom. The prisoners had been smuggled into the courtroom so unexpectedly and with such dexterity that the waiting mob were cheated out of their opportunity for shouting. But they were ready this time. Dr. Jameson's appearance outside the building was the signal for a wild outbreak of cheering, throwing of hats in the air and a tremendous pressure to get up within reach of the popular idol.

The crowd's intentions were friendly, enthusiastically so, but they threatened bodily harm to the object of their admiration. Dr. Jameson was quickly hemmed in by a surging throng, who apparently sought to carry him, and he made his way through them with great difficulty.

Manuscripts by Dickens.

What have become of the manuscripts of Dickens' earlier works? Some light is thrown on the question in Mr. Shooling's paper in The Strand. The manuscript of "Our Mutual Friend" was given, as is well known, by the author to his friend Mr. Dallas, and subsequently bought by Mr. Childs, the publisher, of Philadelphia. The manuscript of "Pickwick" was, Miss Georgina Hogarth states, never preserved in its entirety, though stray fragments have turned up, and are dispersed about the world, but it was not given by its author to any one. "I don't think," adds Miss Hogarth, "he attached much importance to his manuscripts in those early days." Portions of the original manuscript of "Oliver Twist" figure among the numerous interesting facsimiles which accompany the article. They are taken from a fragment of the manuscript still remaining, which begins with the twelfth chapter and ends with what is now called the forty-third chapter, "wherein is shown how the Artful Dodger got into trouble." "Oliver Twist" was written in a much larger hand than were most of the later works. The manuscript shows some notable variations. The manuscript of "Nicholas Nickleby" is one of those which have vanished, but a facsimile is given of part of the revised proof of the preface, which shows a long passage struck out by Charles Dickens.—London News.

The Drummer's Dilemma.

"I was born under an unlucky star," said C. E. Jameson, a Baltimore knight of the gripsack, to a reporter. "Over in Maryland there are two men named Curtis doing business in adjoining towns. One of them has been a customer of mine, while I could never sell much to the other one. I was told that the one whose trade I wanted and could not get had been presented by his wife with twins. A bright idea came to me. I would seal his trade forever. I sent him the best baby carriage I could buy. Then in a few days I went over there. He was the maddest man I ever saw. It seems that he is a bachelor and everybody in town had guyed him.

"Then I went to the other town to see my customer and he was mad. It was he who was father of twins and a rival had given him a carriage, with the information that he had seen me buy one for another customer who had a baby. I haven't straightened it out yet, and I'm doubtful if I ever can."—Washington Star.

A Keen Eyed Engineer.

An old engineer was getting his sight tested by a doctor who lived in a house facing a large park. The doctor used to say to his patients, "Look over there and tell me what you can see." When the engineer learned that his sight was to be tested, he had arranged with his son to take his bicycle half a mile into the park and be oiling it. In due time the old man was led to the window, the doctor saying, as usual:

"What do you see?"

The old man, peering out, said, "I see a young man stooping beside his bicycle."

"Do you?" said the doctor. "I don't see anything at all."

"Nonsense," said the engineer. "Why, he is oiling it."

The doctor took up a pair of field-glasses and plainly saw the same.

"Magnificent sight!" he said.

The Voice of a Child.

Professor Drummond tells the story of a little girl who once said to her father: "Papa, I want you to say something to God for me, something I want to tell him very much. I have such a little voice that I don't think he could hear it way up in heaven, but you have a great big man's voice, and he will be sure to hear you." The father took his little girl in his arms and told her that, even though God were at that moment surrounded by all his holy angels, sounding on their golden harps and singing to him one of the grandest and sweetest songs of praise ever was heard in heaven, he was sure that he would say to them: "Hush! Stop the singing for a little while. There's a little girl away down on the earth who wants to whisper something in my ear."—Ram's Horn.

Wagner and Schumann.

Wagner, writing in 1846, said of Schumann: "He is a highly gifted musician, but an impossible man. When I came from Paris, I went to see him. I told him of my Parisian experiences, spoke of the state of music in France, then of that in Germany, spoke of literature and politics, but he remained as good as dumb for nearly an hour. One cannot go on talking quite alone. An impossible man!" Schumann gave an account of this interview which practically agrees with that of Wagner. "I have seldom met Wagner," he said, "but he is a man of education and spirit. He talks, however, unceasingly, and that one cannot endure for long together."

Slavery In Great Britain.

Slavery survived in England much later than is generally supposed. The word "bondage" in Northumberland still means a female farm servant. The coolies and salters—i. e., salt miners—of East Lothian were actually slaves till 1775. If they deserted their service, any one harboring them was liable to a penalty of £5 if he did not restore them in 24 hours. The last slave in England was not freed until 1799, and in 1842 there was a cooly living who, as well as his father and grandfather, had worked as a slave in a pit at Musselburg.

Paradoxical.

"It seemed sort of strange at first," said a stroller, "to see a one-legged man looking at the display in a shoe store window, for it didn't seem as though he would take more than half an interest in shoes, but as a matter of fact he appeared to be as much interested as anybody."—New York Sun.

Big Bridge Down.

DAVENPORT, Ia., Feb. 26.—The movement of ice in the Mississippi yesterday carried out 180 feet of the draw span of the government bridge, which was supported by trestlework while undergoing repairs. The bridge was a heavy double decker, used by the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railway. The wires on the bridge were carried away, and telegraph and telephone communication are interrupted. Another result is that the Davenport street railway system is shut down.

A Woman.

I am a woman—therefore I may not
Call to him, cry to him,
Fly to him,
Bid him delay not.

Then when he comes to me I must be quiet,
Still as a stone—
All silent and cold.
If my heart riot,
Crush and defy it.
Should I grow bold,
Say one dear thing to him,
All my life fling to him,
Cling to him.
What to atone
Is enough for my sinning?
This were the cost to me.
This were my winning—
That he were lost to me.

Not as a lover
At last if he part from me,
Tearing my heart from me,
Hurt beyond cure.
Calm and demure
Then must I hold me,
In myself fold me,
Lest he discover;
Showing no sign to him
By look of mine to him
What he has been to me.
How my heart turns to him,
Follows him, yearns to him,
Prays him to love me!
Pity me, lean to me,
Thou God above me!

Miss Flagler Found Guilty.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—Miss Elizabeth M. Flagler, daughter of General Flagler, who about a year ago shot and killed a colored boy who was stealing pears from her father's garden, was found guilty of manslaughter in the criminal court yesterday. Miss Flagler was sentenced to three hours in the district jail and a fine of $500.

HABANA, Feb. 26.—United States Consul General Williams had a prolonged conference with Captain General Weyler with reference to Messrs. ### Crippled by a Strike.

TARIFF BILL IS DEAD.

Senate Vote on Its Consideration Accepted as a Defeat.

An Unusually Fierce Debate Over the Measure.

Silver and Anti-Silver Republicans Indulge In Plain Language.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—A storm broke over the senate yesterday. It had been gathering force ever since the defeat of the motion to take up the tariff bill. There was a fierceness of debate which set aside all the usual restraints of the senate, and arrayed Mr. Teller (Colo.) in a wordy war against his party associates, Mr. Morrill (Vt.) and Mr. Sherman (O.).

The controversy rose unexpectedly on the motion of Mr. Morrill, chairman of the finance committee, to take up the tariff bill. This motion was defeated: Yeas, 22; nays, 33.

At the close of the vote Mr. Morrill announced that it was obvious that there was not a Republican majority in the senate, and that he did not feel authorized, under the circumstances, to waste further time on this bill; but he added that the Republicans on the finance committee were ready to consider any tariff measure their colleagues in the party might think wise to pass.

The vote in detail was as follows:

Yeas—Messrs. Aldrich, Allison, Baker, Burrows, Cameron, Clark, Cullom, Davis, Elkins, Gear, Hale, Hansbrough, Hawley, Lodge, Mitchell (Or.), Morrill, Nelson, Perkins, Proctor, Quay, Sherman, Shoup —22.

Nays—Allen, Bacon, Bate, Berry, Butler, Caffrey, Call, Cannon, Carter, Chilton, Cockrell, Dubois, George, Gordon, Gray, Harris, Hill, Jones (Nev.), Kyle, Lindsay, Mantle, Martin, Morgan, Palmer, Pasco, Peffer, Roach, Stewart, Teller, Turpie, Vest, Walthall, White—33.

Mr. Teller (Rep., Colo.) took offense at Morrill's remark that there was not a Republican majority, saying that it was the attempt of Mr. Morrill to read the silver Republicans out of the party. He notified that senator that he and his colleagues, who believed in the cause of silver, had been as zealous and worked as long in the Republican party as the senator from Vermont or his colleagues. The silver Republicans did not propose to be read out of the party, they would only go when they saw fit. They could, he assured the senate, get along as well without the party as the party could without them.

Sherman's Argument.

Mr. Sherman (Rep., O.) said that every day since the passage of the present law the country had been running in debt, and there was no occasion for it. Already there had been issued $263,000,000 of bonds by this administration. The great body of it was for deficiencies of revenue. Speaking of the tariff bill, Mr. Sherman said: "Let us take this bill up, and if it is not a perfect bill, let us make it so. Let us give the government revenue. Our duty is not yet performed. If the chairman of the committee will not move to take up the bill again, I will. I will make the motion at the proper time."

Mr. Harris asked Mr. Sherman why he did not advise the treasury to issue the $50,000,000 of seigniorage and the balance of the silver to meet the deficiencies.

Mr. Sherman, in reply, said that question had been tried and tested. The house of representatives pronounced their denunciation of that most foolish and dangerous fallacy by a vote of almost 2 to 1. This senate did not represent the people; it represented the states, and Sherman called attention to the fact that more than 10 votes cast in the senate came from states whose aggregate of population did not equal one-third that of the state of New York.

Sherman warned Harris that the cause of free silver would never be so strong in the future as it had been in the past. The sober second thought of the people of this country, as expressed by their representatives in the popular branch of congress, was for sound money and against free coinage, and the sentiment in that direction was rapidly and surely growing.

Mr. Frye said that he had advised all his constituents who were business men that the house tariff bill was as dead as Julius Cæsar, and that he hoped no attempt would be made to resurrect it.

The senate was entertained later by an interesting bimetallic colloquy. Teller declared, in reply to Morrill's speech, that the house tariff bill was nothing but an electioneering scheme, got up to promote the presidential interests of a certain candidate. Sherman announced that he, like Morrill, was ready to vote for any tariff measure promising treasury relief, whether taxing tea, coffee, or both.

Allen (Neb.), after Stewart's tirade, asked Senator Aldrich whether he would vote for the tariff bill, with a free coinage attachment? Aldrich said "he would not." Allen declared that this reply showed the hypocrisy of the Republicans in passing bimetallic resolutions everywhere and yet refusing to vote for a bimetallic measure. A bimetallic colloquy of considerable warmth ensued.

Platt (Conn.) maintained that he was a true bimetallist, as was his party, but opposed to silver monometallism. Whereupon Teller, Mitchell (Or.) and Stewart joined the affray in charging bad faith in interpreting the meaning of the term bimetallism, and cited the Republican platform criticisms of the first Cleveland administration, because of its unfriendliness to silver.

Platt declared that when the silver men had reached a readiness to throw over protection by attaching free coinage to it, the death knell of the silver delusion and craze had struck.

The house passed the Indian appropriation bill, the sixth of the 13 general appropriation bills, and sent it to the senate. It was thought that a yea and nay vote would be had on the Linton sectarian school amendment which passed Monday, but the demand was not made.

In the House.

The house also passed, without debate, the Dingley bill, authorizing the secretary of the treasury to take and kill the Alaskan seal herd if a modus vivendi could not be concluded before the opening of the present season for the protection of the seals pending negotiations for permanent protection to the herds with the countries interested.

The Van Horn-Tarsney contested election case from the Fifth Missouri district occupied the remainder of the afternoon. The majority report favors Van Horn, the contestant, who is a Republican, while the Democrats and one Republican favor recommitting the case with instructions to reopen the testimony, purge the returns of fraud and recount the honest ballots.

Chairman Hitt, of the foreign affairs committee, yesterday reported to the house the preamble and resolutions agreed to by the foreign affairs committee, censuring Ambassador Bayard for portions of speeches he delivered at Edinburgh and Boston, Eng. The resolutions follow:

Resolved, That it is the sense of the house of representatives that Thomas F. Bayard, ambassador of the United States to Great Britain, in publicy using the language above quoted, has committed an offense against diplomatic propriety and an abuse of the privileges of his exalted position, which should make him the representative of the whole country, and not of any political party. Such utterances are wholly inconsistent with that prudent, delicate and scrupulous reserve which he himself, while secretary of state, enjoined upon all diplomatic agents of the United States. In one speech he offends a great body of his countrymen who believe in the policy of protection. In the other he offends all his countrymen who believe that Americans are capable of self-government; therefore, as the immediate representatives of the American people, and in their name, we condemn and censure said utterances of Thomas F. Bayard.

Resolved, further, That in the opinion of the house of representatives, public speeches by our diplomatic or consular officers abroad, which display partisanship or which condemn any political party or party policy or organization of citizens in the United States, are in dereliction of the duty of such officers, impair their usefulness as public servants and diminish the confidence which they should always command at home and abroad.

Acting as Peacemaker.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Commissioner Eva Booth, who is now in command of the American division of the Salvation Army, yesterday made a full statement of her intended action. She said that the trouble between Ballington Booth and international headquarters grew out of a letter which Ballington Booth wrote on Jan. 31, in reply to his recall from the American command. In this letter he made two definite charges—one against the incompetency of his father as an individual, and the other against the methods of the army. Commissioner Booth's presence was in the hope of inducing Commander Booth to withdraw those charges. When he insisted, she tried to induce him to submit the matter to arbitration, which he also refused.

THE STUDIOUS GIRL.

An Interesting Letter From a Young Ladies' College.

Race Between the Sexes for Education. Health Impaired by Incessant Study.

The race between the sexes for education is to-day very close.

Ambitious girls work incessantly over their studies, and are often brought to a halt, through having sacrificed the physical to the mental.

Then begin those ailments that must be removed at once, or they will produce constant suffering. Headache, dizziness, faintness, slight vertigo, pains in the back and loins, irregularity, loss of sleep and appetite, nervousness and blues, with lack of confidence; these are positive signs that women's arch enemy is at hand.

The following letter was received by Mrs. Pinkham in May, one month after the young lady had first written, giving symptoms, and asking advice. She was ill and in great distress of mind, feeling she would not hold out till graduation, and the doctor had advised her to go home.

—— College, Mass.

You dear Woman:—

I should have written to you before, but you said wait a month. We are taught that the days of miracles are past. Pray what is my case? I have taken the Vegetable Compound faithfully, and obeyed you implicitly and, am free from all my ills. I was a very, very sick girl. Am keeping well up in my class, and hope to do you and myself credit at graduation. * * My gratitude cannot find expression in words. Yours sincere friend, MARY ——

P. S. Some of the other girls are now using the Compound. It benefits them all.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the only safe, sure and effectual remedy in such cases, as it removes the cause, purifies and invigorates the system, and gives energy and vitality.

OUR MOTIVE IN QUOTING THESE EXTRAORDINARY LOW PRICES—Our place of business, 78 Beach street, opposite U. S. Hotel is one of the nearest stores to the Albany, Old Colony and N. Y. & N. E. Depots, rendering it the most convenient place for those who travel on these roads to make purchases.

We hope the same inducement that has obtained for us the largest hotel and restaurant trade in the city, namely, low prices and a true representation of our goods to the buyer, will have the same favorable results—a larger and increasing trade—with the patrons of these roads.

We do not pay freight or express charges on goods going out of town sold at these prices.

SECOND TRIAL ENDED.

Miss Bartlett Loses Her Suit Against Bigelow Executors.

Breach of Contract Was the Claim Presented.

Review of a Novel Case Which Has Attracted Much Attention.

BOSTON, Feb. 27.—In the famous Bartlett-Bigelow case the jury yesterday returned a verdict against the plaintiff, Miss Mary O. Bartlett, who has tried twice to recover from the executors of the will of Dr. Henry J. Bigelow $150,000 which she says was promised her by Dr. Bigelow in the event of his dying before they were married, together with interest on that sum since 1890, when Dr. Bigelow died.

Judge Dunbar stated to the jury that but one of two verdicts could be rendered. Either the plaintiff must be awarded $150,000 with interest from 1890, or the verdict must be for the defense. To bring in a verdict for the plaintiff it must be proved that there was an arrangement of marriage; that Dr. Bigelow agreed to give her $150,000 if she consented to let the engagement remain; that she agreed to read to him, write to him, and that she had carried out her part of the agreement.

DR. BIGELOW. MISS BARTLETT.

Dr. Bigelow, who was perhaps the most noted physician that New England ever knew, has generally had the credit of announcing to the world the discovery of anæsthesia, an event which is commemorated by the well-known monument in the Public Garden. In his will he made no mention of Miss Bartlett.

The doctor died in October, 1890, leaving as executors Dr. W. Sturgis Bigelow, his son, and Treasurer Edward W. Hooper of Harvard university. Against these two gentlemen Miss Bartlett brought her suit. The first trial was held at Cambridge in October, 1894, before Chief Justice Albert Mason, Hon. Samuel Hoar appearing for the estate, and Harvey D. Hadlock for Miss Bartlett. The jury at that time disagreed, its first vote being seven to five in favor of Miss Bartlett. The vote was afterward changed to nine to three in her favor.

Miss Bartlett is now 52 years old, and lives with her mother and brother in Malden. She has maintained that her relations with Dr. Bigelow began with an acquaintance made upon a railroad train when she was a student at a normal school. The suit was not for breach of promise, but for a breach of contract.

The plaintiff maintained that her marriage with Dr. Bigelow was postponed on condition that, in case of his death before recovery from what proved to be his last sickness, she was

To Receive $150,000 In His Will.

During his father's last sickness the younger Dr. Bigelow took from his own property large amounts of money, which he gave to his father for certain western speculations, which resulted disastrously. When he saw that the loan worried his father he tore up the notes, amounting to almost $200,000.

Therefore, it would seem if he had lost the present suit he would have paid out on his father's account from his property the sum of $400,000.

In this contest Samuel Hoar, son of the late Judge Hoar, counsel for the Boston and Albany railroad, a fellow of Harvard university and one of the best known lawyers in the state, has had pitted against him Harvey D. Hadlock, well known in Washington and New York, as well as in Boston. The encounters between these two lawyers have been numerous and spirited.

Another interesting feature of the trial has been that the correspondence between Dr. Bigelow and Miss Bartlett has not been brought into the case. A large package of Dr. Bigelow's letters, left in the care of a personal friend, were brought into the courtroom at the first trial, but neither the plaintiff nor the defendant ordered them introduced as testimony.

Chicopee Mourned.

CHICOPEE, Mass., Feb. 27.—The funeral of ex-Governor George D. Robinson was held in this city yesterday. The whole city was in mourning, flags were at half staff, business was nearly at a standstill, and all united in showing their love for the dead. Most of the big manufacturing concerns were shut up all the afternoon. The stores were closed during the funeral and the schools had but one session. The exercises throughout were very simple, in accordance with the wish of the family. Besides floral offerings from the city and immediate friends, many tributes were given. A short service was held at the house at 1:30 o'clock. The casket was then taken to the church, where an opportunity was given to view the body, as it lay in state. There was no change apparent in the features of ex-Governor Robinson, and the sight of his face moved many of his old friends to tears.

A Matter of Speculation.

BOSTON, Feb. 27.—In regard to the reported purchase of the franchises and charter of the Meigs Boston Elevated Railroad company by J. Pierpont Morgan of New York, several persons whom it would seem are in a position to affirm or deny the truth of the report will not discuss it, but the general belief is that the elevated road has sold its franchise in order to obtain money to carry out its plans, and that a reorganization of the company will follow shortly, and that an elevated road will be built in Boston.

A. O. U. W. Elect Officers.

BOSTON, Feb. 27.—The grand lodge A. O. U. W. yesterday elected the following officers: Grand master workman, J. C. Gallagher, New Haven; grand foreman, L. C. Merrill, Concord, N. H.; grand overseer, E. F. Danforth, Skowhegan, Me.; grand recorder, J. E. Burtt, Boston; grand receiver, T. F. Temple, Boston; grand guide, Nathan Crary, Chicopee; supreme representatives, G. F. Higgins, Providence, A. G. Andrews, Augusta, Me., and Edward Mitchell, Salem. A new law was adopted, providing that six months after a member has been notified to send his present residence, and has not complied, he shall be suspended. The member shall have six months after such suspension in which to be reinstated.

Established a Precedent.

BOSTON, Feb. 27.—The first suit of its kind was tried in the superior civil court here yesterday, in which Robert C. Kennedy sought to recover $5000 damages from Drs. Algernon Coolidge and Perley of Ipswich for violence done his feelings in consequence of an autopsy performed by the defendants on the body of the plaintiff's wife without his consent. The jury returned a verdict for the defendants.

Drug Clerk's Bad Plight.

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 27.—Ernest Whitaker, a drug clerk, was taken into custody yesterday for selling or giving to Eugenia Reynolds, a young woman who died in this city Monday evening by taking an overdose of medicine, an unlabeled bottle containing poison. He says that he gave her the medicine, being an intimate friend of the family, and presumed that his actions were proper.

IS FALSE TO SILVER.

Republican Party Severely Arraigned by Senator Carter.

Says "Sound Money" Means Political Suicide.

Senator Hoar Contributes to the Stirring Events of the Day.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—The tariff crisis in the senate brought another day of intensely dramatic action, of impetuous debate, and of stormy personal colloquy. The speech of Senator Carter (Mon.), one of the five Republican senators who voted against proceeding with the tariff bill, was the main formal event of the day. There was added interest in the speech, owing to Mr. Carter's position as chairman of the Republican national committee. The senator used very plain words in denouncing what he termed the movement to drive him and his silver associates from the Republican party.

Four members of the party, said Senator Carter, including himself, had been pronounced guilty of treason without trial. The house tariff bill was not a Republican measure, but was a measure to meet an alleged emergency which the chief executive stoutly asserted did not exist at all. Continuing, he said:

Recently certain self-constituted censors of party motion have been pleased to denominate the Republicans who voted against the bill as conspirators against the public weal; others have gone so far as to invite them to relieve the party of their obnoxious presence.

Mr. Carter then paid his respects to the Republican senators and representatives who co-operated with the Democratic administration to bring about the repeal of the Sherman silver law, and in speaking of the suggestion of the president that the greenbacks should be retired, said:

Again we hear the Republican magpie chatter. A horde of presidential aspirants rushed to political suicide yelling "Sound money!" The press of New York city leads the procession—sound money is their cry. And under the cover of this cry the president protected himself and his administration from just criticism for the most shady and iniquitous transaction in public finances the world has ever known (referring to the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman act).

It is high time that Republicans who claim to be within the party should take their cues from the party platform, rather than from the White House. If it shall occur that this senseless crusade against Republicans who believed in good faith in the Minneapolis platform when it declared for bimetallism as well as protection shall be carried to such an extent as may result in the adoption of President Cleveland's scheme by the St. Louis convention, I submit that Republican success will be rendered utterly impossible.

If the platform of 1896 announces to the country, in conjunction with the action of Republicans between the two conventions, that the plank on bimetallism adopted at Minneapolis was a delusion, a fraud and a snare, it would be just as well for the Republican party not to make a nomination at St. Louis at all.

Senator Hoar followed Carter's tirade by an address, delivered without notes and with considerable oratorical fire. "The senator from Montana," said Mr. Hoar, "charges the eastern Republicans with falsity to the platform of 1892. Does he mean to say that the interpretation put upon that platform by Benjamin Harrison was delusive, fraudulent or misleading? Does the senator mean to say that if our interpretation is wrong, although according to our convictions, we must surrender to him our honest convictions on true bimetallism?"

New England Defended.

In commenting upon New England's part in achieving the recent Republican victories, he referred to Representative Fitzgerald as one solitary lone star. Senator Hoar defended the attitude of the New England senators on the raw wool question. He is a purblind manufacturer who supposes that the American people will submit to continue protection on his industry while denying it to the farmers and the wool grower of the great west.

Referring to a "small states" feature of Carter's speech, Senator Hoar declared that he had no misgivings concerning the doctrine of the equality of states in the Union, and had favored the admittance to statehood of territories having populations entitling them to one representative.

Carter followed by saying that there was much in President Harrison's attitude to give evidence of a friendliness to free silver, and cited the Sherman act, which though it did not go far enough, was in the right direction.

Gear (Ia.) interrupted by declaring that Jones (Nev.) and Teller (Colo.) had taken part in drawing up the platform of 1892, and understood it as since interpreted.

Senator Hoar declared that there were no gold monometallists in the Republican party in the senate; that they were believers in true bimetallism, the doctrine of the constitution, of Hamilton and of the Republican party today. He believed President Cleveland was a gold monometallist.

"He is—that is right!" shouted Senator Teller.

Senator Hoar then outlined his interpretation of bimetallism, and expressed his strong opposition to Cleveland's idea.

Awaiting Seventh Defeat.

OTTAWA, Feb. 27.—John Charlton, Liberal, introduced a Sabbath observance bill in the house of commons yesterday, which provides for the closing of all canals, the total stoppage of railway traffic and of the publishing and sale of newspapers on Sundays. The bill is similar to other bills introduced by Mr. Charlton, and defeated at six former sessions of parliament.

Under Government Auspices.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—The navy department is making arrangements to have another trial of the torpedo boat Ericsson. This time the trial will be held under the auspices of the navy department entirely, and the engines will be speeded up to a certain point that will indicate that the boat is making the required speed of 24 knots an hour.

Shawmut Spring Water.

How many people realize the importance of drinking only pure water in large quantities in order to keep in absolutely good health? When we consider that two-thirds of the human body is in the form of water, and that in order to supply the losses from excretion and evaporation it is necessary to drink from one-half to one gallon of water daily; it is of the utmost importance that it should be of the very best quality, perfectly free from the slightest trace of organic matter.

The Shawmut Spring Water stands second to none as a pure drinking water. Hundreds of families are using it every day. It is an important factor in maintaining health, building up and restoring the organs of digestion to healthy action. Cures Rheumatic, Kidney and Bladder troubles, when drugs have proved useless.

Send your order for a 5-gallon sample package. If you don't like it, it costs you nothing. Drink it and you will be satisfied of its purity.

THE SELECTION of Mr. W. H. Brasee may solidify the Wollaston Democracy, which is already practically solid, but how will the Democrats of the city feel if they have already endorsed Mr. Burns?

THE HEARING before the legislative committee at the State House, Wednesday, on the libel law was well attended by newspaper men from different parts of the State. The Quincy LEDGER and PATRIOT were represented by their editor. The OBSERVER was represented by F. W. Crooker.

ONLY A DOZEN towns now have municipal electric lighting plants, viz: Braintree, Danvers, Hingham, Hull, Marblehead, Middleboro, Needham, North Attleboro, Peabody, Reading, Wakefield and Wellesley. Besides Quincy, the cities of Taunton and Waltham and the town of West Springfield aspire to have plants of their own. In Quincy the arc light supplied by a company cost $75 per year; in Braintree which has a municipal plant the cost fluctuates. In 1894 it was estimated at $47.55, while in 1895 it appears to have been $84.17. If the cost is to double each year Quincy don't want a municipal plant.

SOME PAPERS do not seem to understand that the representation in the Massachusetts House is based on the legal voters—not on the population or the registered voters. The LEDGER pointed out in its issue of Dec. 14 that if the membership of the House remained the same, which has not yet been determined by the Legislature, Norfolk county without Cohasset would be entitled to thirteen as for the past ten years. The basis of representation would then be 2,337, and Quincy with 4,325 legal voters would lack but 339 of being entitled to two at the start. But Quincy is gaining more rapidly than the towns of the county and there is no question but it should have two representatives by itself beginning next year.

Golden Wedding at West Quincy.

Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Folsom, well known in West Quincy where they have resided for many years, observed the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage on Wednesday by a family gathering at their home off Miller street. It was their original intention to observe the event by a large gathering, but owing to a recent death in the family the gathering was limited to the immediate family, although many of their neighbors called during the day to extend their congratulations as well as to present them with a number of gifts. Mr. and Mrs. Folsom enjoy remarkably good health and bid fare to live to observe their diamond wedding twenty-five years hence.

GOLDEN WEDDING.

A Quincy Bride of Fifty Years Ago Celebrated Yesterday.

Fifty years ago, Feb. 26 Mr. Abraham Rich led to the altar Mrs. Anna Maria Andrews of Quincy, and the Globe says: "The happiest man in the Quincy market Wednesday was Mr. Abraham Rich, the senior member of the firm of Rich & Matthews, the oldest fish dealer in the market.

Mr. Rich was 75 years of age the 20th of last month, and Mrs. Rich was 70 last Sunday. He was born in Wellfleet, down on the Cape, and has been engaged in the fish business one way or another all his life.

He has been for the past 25 years in business in the market, and is probably the best known of anybody there in his line of business.

Mrs. Rich was a Charlestown girl. Both enjoy the best of health.

There were 80 friends present at the little orthodox wedding, which took place in Quincy 50 years ago, and of this number 14 are alive among them being the groomsman and the bridesmaid, which is rather an interesting fact.

Owing to the illness of Mrs. Matthews, the only living child of Mr. and Mrs. Rich, and the wife of Mr. Rich's partner, no very elaborate celebration took place.

A Bicycle Record.

As the bicycling season of 1896 will shortly open we think that some of our Atlantic readers may be interested in the records of century runs and longer runs made last season an Atlantic enthusiast, though no longer a "young" rider of Squantum street. These long runs were all made on a 33-pound Lovell diamond cycle.

1. Middletown, Ct., to New York city.
2. Millers Falls, Mass., to Atlantic.
3. Atlantic to Plymouth via Nantasket, Cohasset and Duxbury, returning via Hanson and Whitman.
4. Portland, Maine to Atlantic.
5. Atlantic to Worcester via Walpole, Franklin, Milford and Grafton, returning via Westboro and Newton.
6. Atlantic to Plaistow, N. H. and return, by different routes.

These runs were all made by an amateur and we should be pleased to have the records beaten the coming season by any Atlantic rider. Who will it be?

Mock Trial at Atlantic.

The Pilgrim Fathers at their meeting Monday evening indulged in a mock trial which proved so enjoyable that the court adjourned for two weeks there not being time to conclude the hearing. Eben Stocker was the judge, George E. Todd, clerk of the court, and James Tilton, sheriff. On complaint of Miss Maud Rice, Dr. D. A. Bruce had become the defendent in a suit for mal practice and administering chloroform to a cat, illegally, with malice, etc. Lawyers for the prosecution, C. F. Merrick and James Churchill; for the defence, H. W. Read and C. R. Safford. Great sport may be expected when the pleas and charges are made. The jury is an "up to date" affair, being made up of both ladies and gentlemen and a disagreement is looked for.

Quincy Debating Club.

The interesting question of the biennial elections will be debated at the Y. M. C. A. rooms this evening at 7.45 o'clock The question is not only of great present interest and one which every voter will soon have to decide upon, but it is a question interesting historically and interesting in itself.

The disputants will be: Affirmative, H. B. Faxon and Everett Litchfield; negative, Alex Craig and E. D. Gourd.

MILTON

The railroad crossing gates at East Milton have been frozen for a week.

Rev. Mr. Dougherty will preach at the Congregational church Sunday for the last time. The society will then hear candidates from whom to select a pastor.

Mr. D. J. Brown gave an entertainment and supper Tuesday evening to the Sunday school of the Baptist church.

The young people are looking forward to the coming leap year party of the 400.

A pleasing musical and literary entertainment for the benefit of the Congregational church was given at Ellsworth hall on Wednesday evening. Those to contribute were: Miss Mary Webster, pianist; Miss Edna Louise Sutherland, reader; Miss Gertrude Dennis, violinist; Miss Edna Josslyn, soprano soloist.

It is claimed that the recent caucus was not called according to the caucus act and all of the candidates nominated have filed nomination papers.

—In certain cities there is a strong tendency to introduce fads and hobbies into the public schools. A gentleman living in one of these unfortunate places complained that the school committee were so intent upon introducing type-writing, sewing, cooking, and other new fashions into the school which his daughter attended, that the fundamental studies were not receiving the time and attention which is needful for a sound education. Plainly the public schools cannot be expected to teach everything. If they are to fit the young to be cooks, dressmakers, carpenters and blacksmiths, where can the limit be drawn?—Milford Gazette.

Odd Fellows' Sociable.

The first of a series of sociables under the auspicies of Mt. Wollaston lodge, I. O. O. F., was held Wednesday evening at Odd Fellows' hall, and was largely attended by the members and their ladies. A very enjoyable affair it proved to be, and much credit for the success of the affair is due to the committee, consisting of C. M. Jenness and E. Frank Mitchell.

When the larger part of those to participate had arrived, Chairman Jenness called order and introduced Representative James Thompson, who in a few words presented the lodge with a handsomely framed oil painting of P. G., Dudley Folsom, one of the oldest Odd Fellows in the city, in behalf of C. M. Jenness and Albert E. Foster.

The picture which was a perfect likeness, was done by Mr. A. E. Foster while Mr. Jenness mnnufactured the frame.

Then came solos on the banjo and mandolin by Frank Bassick, and a piano duet by the Misses Miller.

Next in order was a social dance in the banquet hall, music being furnished by Hanson's orchestra, while in the lodge room, those who desired were given an opportunity to play whist.

A Pleasant Gathering.

Miss Lizzie McAuliffe of Bennington street gave a very pleasant "at home" to her friends last evening. The evening was spent very pleasantly in games, singing, etc. Some very pleasing vocal solos were given by Miss Sadie Gleason, Mr. James McKay, Miss Lizzie Gleason and Mr. John Toland, all of South Boston. Mr. John Walsh gave a vocal solo, with Mr. John Ross as accompanist; Miss Jennie Griffin and Miss Lizzie McAuliffe gave recitations; also piano solos by Miss Mary Powers and Mr. Stephen Pierce.

Among those present were Miss Sadie Gleason, Miss Lizzie Gleason, Mr. James McKay, Mr. John Toland of South Boston; Mrs. Edward Power, Mr. John Ross, Mr. John Walsh, Miss Jennie Griffin Miss Nellie Griffin, Miss Mary Powers, Miss Katie Powers, Mr. Stephen Pierce. Ices and cake were served during the evening.

N. E. O. P. Social.

The first social of the N. E. O. P. was held in Faxon hall Wednesday evening. At 8.15 the grand march was formed led by Mr. Frank A. Souther and Miss Beatrice Porterfield, who were followed by fifty couples. From that time until twelve o'clock the dancers kept time to the fine music rendered by Bates' orchestra of Braintree. This social was pronounced by all a most enjoyable affair and when it was announced that the next social would take place March 12th, it was greeted with loud applause. Much credit is due to the floor director, Mr. Frank A Souther and his aids, Mr. Thompson B. Crane and Mr. C. Leonard Hewson, for the able manner in which the social was conducted.

Andrew and Philip.

In the Centre Congregational church, a strong organization of the Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip was formed early in January, with the following officers:

President,—Ernest D. Gourd.
Vice President,—Rev. E. N. Hardy.
Recording Secretary,—H. Everett Crane.
Corresponding Secretary,—W. W. Parry.
Treasurer,—Walter C. Sampson.
Chairman of Social Committee,—Delciware King.
Chairman of Devotional Committee,—Albert L. Hayden.

Bi-monthly cottage prayer meetings are held in various parts of the parish under the auspices of the Brotherhood, and already the organization is exerting a strong influence in the church.

Mrs. Livermore's Lecture.

The large audience at the Washington street church at Quincy Point on Wednesday evening inspired Mrs. Livermore to make one of her noblest efforts. From her personal knowledge of the anti-slavery movement and of her subject "Wendell Phillips," she gave a most interesting lecture, of an hour and thirty minutes. It was not only a notable production for a lady in her 75th year, but for a lady of any age, and she received the closest attention. At the close she held a reception, and all present were pleased to meet her. Mr. T. B. Pollard presided and introduced the speaker as one who had done much for the advancement of women.

My husband has also taken it and he is now in good health. The sidewalk on Copeland street, from Common street down, is receiving a coat of stone chips with a gravel top dressing.

Mayor Adams, City Treasurer Gray and Chairman Claflin made a visit of inspection to the police station Wednesday evening.

Mr. Dewson's history of Hancock street, which is becoming more and more interesting, will be continued in tomorrow's LEDGER.

The Tufts College boys are always interesting and no finer Glee and Mandolin clubs can be found anywhere than those of Tufts.

W. H. Fay, who has been confined to his home by illness for nearly eight weeks, made his first appearance on the street today.

Benjamin Johnson has the contract for frames in which the "Quincy" bicycles will be shipped. The 5000 require considerable lumber.

The degree staff of Mount Wollaston lodge, I. O. O. F., go to East Weymouth this evening to work the third degree for Crescent lodge.

F. F. Crane is to have another of those combination sales of horses and carriages about April 1. He advertises that goods should be consigned before March 16.

Those receiving foreign mail are mourning over the receipt of wrappers without contents, and papers broken open before reaching New York, as shown by inspectors' stamps.

At the drive-whist party at the Granite City club rooms on Wednesday evening, the lady's prize was won by Mrs. Joseph C. Morse, and the gentleman's by Deputy Sheriff Field.

Considerable complaint is made of the gang of young men who loaf on the street corners nights at West Quincy and make themselves a nuisance by blocking up the sidewalks so that ladies in order to pass must go into the street. When they see the officer approaching they scatter only to come together again as soon as his back is turned.

The owners of dogs and cats in the neighborhood of Belmont street, Wollaston, have been excited the past few months by a wholesale poisoning of those animals. On Wednesday morning five dead cats were found within a radius of a few hundred feet. It is pretty well known who the miscreant is, and if sufficient evidence can be obtained it will go hard with him.

A party of six from Atlantic went to the concert in the Association hall, Charlestown, Tuesday evening, where Miss Clyde Robbins was a reciter. Though so young, Miss Robbins is doing excellent work in her chosen profession. Not the least of her charm is the lack of the unreal style of the schools, she has naturalness that permits her to have an original conception of her part.

First Impressions Last

Therefore be careful of the first impression. On entering a strange house one gets his first impression from the hall. If this looks bare the impression is bad.

The hall should be furnished, not of course with bric-a-brac and rocking chairs, but appropriately, that is with a simple hall stand. They are rich, handsome, convenient, and add a constant air of welcome. Wonderfully low in price; in rich quartered oak they cost from $5.50 to $25.00.

Atlantic Sociable.

The Ladies' Benevolent society of the Memorial Congregational church, Atlantic, held their usual monthly supper and entertainment at the church Wednesday evening. There was a crowded house at the entertainment at which time "Grandmother's Memories," consisting of readings by Mrs. Charles R Safford illustrated by tableaux, which were the best ever given in Atlantic, red lights being used to make pictures more vivid.

Incidental to the tableaux was a lullaby by Miss Annie Hall and duet by Mr. C. R. Safford and Mrs. W. F. Cummings with guitar accompaniments by Mrs. L. A. Bassett. Special mention may be made of the love making scene by Mr. Hall and Miss Curtin, which fairly captured the young ladies, it being so realistic.

In addition to the tableaux were piano solos by Miss Southworth and Miss Hill, piano duet by the Misses Priest, and singing by a double quartette composed of Mrs. Matthews, Mrs. Cummings, Miss Annie Hall, Miss Susie Hall, Messrs. H. W. Read, Thomas, Owens, and Curtin.

Candle Pin Contest.

The Wollaston Postmastership.

It is understood upon excellent authority that pressure has been brought to bear upon Mr. W. H. Brasee to accept the postmastership of Wollaston. If this takes place, and there is no doubt but what Mr. Brasee can have the appointment if he so desires, it will simplify a vexed problem and again unite the Wollaston Democracy. There is no reason to doubt but what he will accept the position. Rumor has it that he has been in Washington this week.

A Fine Entertainment.

The entertainment by the Young People's Christian Alliance at the Universalist vestry on Wednesday evening was by home talent, and very much enjoyed. Mrs. Emma A. Burrill announced the pieces, and the following was the programme:

A TEXAS LYNCHING BEE

In Which Two Bad Men Were Promptly Launched Into Eternity.

WICHITA FALLS, Tex., Feb. 27.—At 8:30 o'clock last night a mob of several thousand persons attacked the jail here, where Foster Crawford and "the Kid" were confined. After a show of resistance on the part of the authorities, the mob battered the jail doors and forcibly took possession of the prisoners.

The two men were taken to the bank which they attempted to rob Tuesday, and improvised scaffolds were erected. The first impulse of the half-crazed mob was to burn the prisoners, but the calmer counsel prevailed.

All this time "the Kid" was jeering at the audience, laughing and cursing. He never quivered. He was asked to say what he wanted and was told he would be given a hearing. He said: "By God, that's all right. If you are impatient, swing me up now. I ain't afraid to die, not a d—d bit of it. Pull the rope, by God."

"The Kid," or Younger Lewis, as he at the last moment said his name was, continued chatting and laughing with the crowd, poking fun at them and cursing for a moment, and then some one yelled: "Time is up!"

"The Kid" said: "I am 20 years old and robbed that d—d bank. I am dead game and ready to die. Go ahead."

In an instant he was pulled up above the throng. He never quivered or kicked. He just went up in the air. Men on the frontier for years and years said that a nervier man never died. He was the coolest man in all the great throng.

All the while Crawford was a spectator of the scene. He began to weaken and confessed, giving valuable information. He placed the responsibility for the crime on "The Kid."

When the crowd began to look for a second rope he begged for whisky. It was given him. He talked and then begged for more. He then addressed the crowd in Comanche, English and Spanish. Those who understood, say his utterances were incoherent. The rope soon arrived, and it was put about his neck.

He fell either in a faint or from the effects of the liquor he had drank. He was soon strung up, along with his companion, and their bodies are still dangling in midair.

Left Salvation Ranks.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Manifestations of the much-talked-of revolution in the Salvation Army took a more definite form yesterday. Major Peter Glen, the oldest office in point of service on the headquarters staff, who for several years has had charge of the field department, sent in his resignation, together with that of his wife's. Major Glen said that Ballington Booth was in no way responsible for their action. "If our late commander engages in any evangelistic work where our services are needed," he said, "we will, of course, go with him. For the present, I shall act as his secretary."

A Precious Pair.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 27.—The police of this city have in custody a man and woman, charged with swindling a number of large stores here, and suspected of operating successfully in New York, Boston and elsewhere. The prisoners are well-dressed and possessed of considerable money and diamonds. The man gives his name as Robert Davidson. The woman says she is Nellie Edwards. Their scheme was to obtain goods by means of checks, and immediately afterward to draw the money deposited in the bank to their credit before the checks could be deposited.

Springfield Wants It.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 27.—William Webster, secretary of the board of trade of Springfield, Mass., visited Thomas Reath, chairman of the Pennsylvania rowing committee, yesterday, for the purpose of urging that the race between Harvard, Columbia, Cornell and Pennsylvania take place on the Connecticut river at that place. Chairman Reath told Mr. Webster that the matter would receive serious consideration from the committee representing the four universities.

Driven to Desperation.

CHICAGO, Feb. 27.—In a fit of rage Jacob Dietzel, 68 years old, shot his daughter, Mrs. Henry Ohner, and then shot himself, inflicting wounds which in both cases will probably prove fatal. Dietzel was once in prosperous circumstances, but of late years he has been dependent upon his children for support, and their frequent taunts on his condition, it is said, was the cause of the crime.

Outrages Continue.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 27.—It is reported that on Feb. 14, the first day of the Ramadan festival, the Turks surrounded the Armenian quarter in Marsovan and ordered the Armenians to accept Islam. Five hundred of them agreed to do so, but 150 recalcitrants were killed. News of excesses in Asia Minor is kept dark, for fear they will impel Russia to occupy Armenia.

Forgery Alleged.

ST. JOHN, N. B., Feb. 27.—E. C. March, of the firm of March & Berryman, proprietors of the Singer ice skating rink and bicycle academy, was arrested last night, charged with forging a school bond and uttering the same for $2000. March's father is secretary of the board of school trustees. March & Berryman are extensive dealers in American bicycles.

After Editors' Scalps.

OTTAWA, Feb. 27.—Two days ago the Halifax Chronicle published a statement that Charles Tupper, when high commissioner to England, had misappropriated $40,000 of public money. Several Liberal newspapers copied the statement. Tupper has taken proceedings for criminal libel against the publishers of these journals.

Lax Liquor Law.

CONCORD, N. H., Feb. 27.—The police investigation hearing is apparently a great way off. Ex-Governor Goodell, ex-Commissioner D. M. Perkins, Rev. T. E. Clapp, Rev. M. W. Bothwick, Rev. W. M. Felch and others testified yesterday, all of them agreeing as to the non-enforcement of the liquor laws in Manchester.

Raid Left Out.

LONDON, Feb. 27.—The report of the Chartered South African company, which has just been issued, does not refer to the Transvaal, but deals merely with business affairs. The revenue for the year was £119,000, and the expenses £142,432.

Awarded to Boston Firm.

PORTLAND, Me., Feb. 27.—The city of Portland yesterday issued $48,000 gold bonds, due in 1916. There were 25 bidders, the highest being N. W. Harris & Co. of Boston at $108.19, who secured the entire amount.

A Palmerston Reminiscence.

Lord Palmerston on one occasion took the chair at a meeting in connection with University college, London. He was not so familiar, writes Mrs. S. E. de Morgan in her reminiscences, with the sort of speech expected in such a place as he would have been at Westminster, and meaning to adapt his rhetoric to the occasion began very appropriately, "It has been said that 'a little learning is a dangerous thing,' but it is better than—better than—better than"— Here came a dead stop. Lord Brougham, who sat beside the speaker, came to the rescue, speaking with his peculiar nasal twang, "Better than a great deal of ignorance." This of course brought down the house, and during a volley of laughter, cheers and Scottish fire, Lord Palmerston recovered the lost thread of his speech, and finished it with his usual ease and fluency.

Freezes Water In a Kite.

A Yankee farmer in Brazil who longed for ice water has utilized a kite for the purpose of obtaining ice. He fills a tin can with water and sends it to the height of three miles, where it is promptly frozen. After a sufficient interval the kite is rapidly hauled in and the cake of ice secured. The inventor is so pleased with his toy that it is said he now proposes to send up a kite 150 feet long by a steel wire cable. Under the kite will be suspended a pulley, over which runs an endless chain bearing cans attached to hooks. The cans will be filled with water and the speed of the belt upon which they will run will be regulated so that the topmost cans will be converted into ice sufficiently hard to withstand the downward journey.

Why He Voted Aye.

When Dr. Kenealy, being returned to parliament by the electors of Stoke, took an early opportunity of moving a vote of censure on the judges, he found a teller in Mr. Whalley. On the house dividing it was found that 433 men of all parties voted in the negative, Dr. Kenealy's proposition being supported by a single member. The single member was Major O'Gorman. Asked afterward why he had gone against his own party, for once merged in the majority, the major, mopping his massive brow, answered, "Bedad, it's a hot night, and I knew there would be more room in the 'aye' lobby."

Business Rush.

Take a run over to London and there try to do business before 10 and 11 in the morning, and learn how impossible it will be, because the Englishman is thoroughly imbued with the idea that business is an incident of and not the sole aim and end of life. There is no nation of the world wherein work is regarded as it is with us; no other nation "lives that it may work," as we do. They "work that they may live;" they thoroughly live while they live. We toil and slave that we may leave money to those who, because of our very work, will not inherit the vital strength to properly utilize and enjoy it.

Individual exceptions might seem to negative our assertion, but we are not dealing with individuals, but our nation as a whole, and as a whole we fear not contradiction of the assertion that the great American nervous system is in a deplorable condition of prostration, and that this lamentable condition of affairs has been the direct outcome of our methods of work, particularly during the past 30 years.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Circumventing Them.

Before Bismarck reconstructed the map of Europe, and made a united Germany, a dozen little principalities used to annoy travelers by retaining them at their frontiers until they had satisfied the custom house demands.

A Yankee once had his carriage stopped at the frontier of a petty prince's country. The herr ober-controleur at the custom house came forward, and, much to his indignation, was received in a nonchalant way. The Yankee was ungentlemanly enough not to get out of the carriage, nor even take off his hat. The herr ober sharply demanded the keys of the tourist's trunks, which his subordinate began handling roughly.

"Here, hands off!" shouted the Yankee. "I didn't come from the United States of America to be controlled by you. Put those trunks back. I'll not go through you at all. I'll turn back. I'm in no hurry, and don't mind losing a few hours. You're no country, you're only a spot. I'll go round you." And he did.—Strand Magazine.

He Tried It a Second Time.

A new story of the late John P. Spaulding, illustrating his unlimited generosity and original methods of distributing it, was told the Saunterer the other day.

The "sugar king" of Broad street was a confirmed bachelor, as everybody well knew. His brother, the late Mahlon D. Spaulding, used to live in Beacon street, and was the father of a happy family. At the birth of the first child word was sent to the rich uncle that the boy had been named after him, "John P. Spaulding, 2d." Uncle John responded with a check for $10,000. A couple of years later another heir was born, this time a girl, and Uncle John was again notified that the little daughter had been named after him. This was a stickler for the uncle, and he wrote for particulars. A day or two afterward he received a reply, something in these words: "There is really no mistake. We named our little daughter 'Spaulding'—after you." Uncle John sent another $10,000 check.—Boston Budget.

Illustrating a Sermon.

A north country clergyman once made clear even to the dullest of his flock the difficulty of treading the straight and narrow path, as contrasted with descent on the spacious highway leading in the other direction. Before he was well started in his discourse he ran down the pulpit stairs and proceeded to suit the action to the word.

"My brethren," he cried, "the road to heaven is like this." And lying flat on the banister he began to pull himself up, hand over hand, as laboriously as a boy climbs as greased pole.

At last he reached the top, and got on his feet again, happy in his Christian victory. Then, having taken breath, he exhorted his hearers to look at the road to the other place, doubled one leg under him and slid down the rail in a half sitting posture with a rapidity and grace that betrayed a juvenile familiarity with the route.—Pearson's Weekly.

Geographies to Blame.

Ask any hundred English men, women or children what is the name of the capital of Russia, and every one of them will reply, "St. Petersburg." It may be a small matter, but in point of fact the proper name is "Petersburg." The English are the only folk who insist upon the "Saint." The city was founded by Peter the Great, and is named after him. It is quite true that Peter was one of the most extraordinary men that ever filled a throne, but no one would have been more astounded than himself at being dubbed a saint. He neither lived nor died in the odor of sanctity, and it is hard to find out how it became the English fashion to miscall the splendid town he founded.—Little Folks.

An Agricultural Peer.

The Earl of Winchelsea is best known to the English public by the great interest he takes in matters agricultural. His interest in birds has led him to make many expeditions, some of which have extended as far as Egypt, and to risk his life at the end of a rope many scores of times on the west coast of Scotland. He has the finest collection of eagles' eggs in England. The earl is also keenly interested in pet animals of different kinds, and he used to walk about the park at his ancestral Haverholme accompanied by a lioness.

Unkind.

"There are 14 varieties of apes in Venezuela," he said after a long silence.

"And only one variety here," she responded sadly. And again the silence settled upon them.—Detroit Free Press.

The first clothmaker was the weaver bird, which, from threads and vegetable filaments, manufactures a fabric quite waterproof and of very dense structura

When the Green Gets Back.

When the green gits back in the trees, and bees
Is a-buzzin aroun again,
In that kind of a lazy "go as you please"
Old gait they bum 'roun in;
When the groun's all bald where the hayrick stood,
And the crick's riz, and the breeze
Coaxes the bloom in the old dogwood,
And the green gits back in the trees—
I like, as I say, in sich scenes as these,
The times when the green gits back in the trees.

When the whole tail feathers o' winter time
Is pulled out and gone,
And the sap it thaws and begins to climb,
And the sweat it starts out on
A feller's forrerd, a-gittin down
At the old spring on his knees—
I kind o' like jes' a-loaferin roun
When the green gits back on the trees—
Jes' a-potterin roun as I—durn—please,
When the green, you know, gits back in the trees!

—James Whitcomb Riley.

He (excitedly)—I did, but I must go. Goodby!

She—What's the matter? Stop and tell me all. You asked him for my hand. What did he say?

He (taking out his watch and glancing at it)—He gave me just two minutes to get out of the house!—Wonder.

An Extraordinary Wager.

The series of bravado bets which have been so frequent in Paris reached a climax when a shop assistant, named Alexander, laid a wager of 500 francs that he would swallow a yard of galvanized iron stove piping. The bet was accepted and witnesses and referee appointed. Alexander and one of the witnesses went to buy the piping, which was about one-sixteenth of an inch in thickness and five inches in diameter. Alexander took it to a whitesmith and requested him to file it down into a powder in the presence of the witness, who subsequently carried it to a cafe in the Rue de la Chapelle, where the operation of swallowing the filings was carried out. Quite 100 persons attended as spectators. Alexander divided the filings into five portions, placed them in five glasses of beer and tossed them off at intervals of ten minutes. He played cards during the process of drinking, and when the last glass of beer and its metallic addition had been consumed the bet was declared won and the 500 francs handed over to him. He stated afterward that he felt no inconvenience whatever from the feat.—Paris Letter.

Strikers May Resume Work.

SACO, Me., Feb. 27.—The striking weavers of the York corporation were notified yesterday by Agent Page that the mills will start up next Monday at the usual hour. The striking operatives will hold a meeting tomorrow, when it will be decided whether or not they will return. The agent has made no concessions to the strikers, and if they return it will be under the old schedule.

Forced to Assign.

BANGOR, Me., Feb. 27. — The Bangor Pulp and Paper company, which operates the pulp and paper mills at Basin Mills, Orono, made an assignment yesterday. This week the creditors, especially the employes, who had about six weeks' pay due them, began to press the firm, and it was found necessary to make an assignment. The amounts of liabilities and assets are unknown.

Strike Almost Certain.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 27. — A strike involving 5000 garment workers in this city is almost certain. President Reichers of the American Federation of Labor and the Clothiers' board of trade held a conference yesterday, but failed to come to any agreement by which the strike might be averted.

The Usual Reports.

HABANA, Feb. 27.—Colonel Molina reports that he has fought Maceo at Navajas, east of Bolondron, in Matanzas. He states the insurgent loss to be 50 killed and 150 wounded. Several other minor engagements are reported, in all of which the insurgents are said to have been defeated.

AFTER RAINY SEASON.

President Cleveland, It Is Said, Will Then Recognize Cubans.

New Reorganization of the Insurgent Army.

War Affairs Said to Be Conducted on a Strict Military Basis.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—This country is approaching a crisis in its relations to Spain and Cuba, says the Washington correspondent of The Herald. In addition to the action of the senate, foreshadowed by the speeches made from day to day in that body, it is now considered certain that the house will adopt an even more advanced attitude toward the Cuban question.

The foreign affairs committee of the house, it is reported, will agree upon a resolution requesting President Cleveland to intervene in behalf of peace in Cuba. Mr. Cleveland has a strong sympathy for the Cubans. It has been said, however, that he has given a tacit promise to Spain that there will be no interference by this government until the rainy season has put a stop to active military operations.

This promise holds good, however, only until June. It has long been President Cleveland's intention to intervene at that time, it is said, unless the rebellion should be crushed in the meantime, and he determined that when he did take action in the matter, it would be of the sort likely to lead to results.

There has been in the United States some curious intrigue as to the assurance with which filibustering expeditions from the United States have Set Sail For Cuban Shores.

It is well known that Spain is guarding the Cuban coast with warships, and to those looking on from a distance it has seemed to be a hazardous undertaking to land men and arms on Cuban shores.

Some light upon this subject is afforded by the Cuban general, Dr. Joaquin Castillo, who arrived in this city within the past three days on a mission from the insurgents in the field. Dr. Castillo states that the insurgents have instituted a service of coast inspection under which careful outlook is constantly maintained for arriving expeditions from foreign ports.

There is a carefully organized band of coast inspectors, with armed assistants, who patrol the beaches or watch the gulf and ocean from the hill-tops. Thus it is that approaching expeditions, although not heralded in advance, are reasonably sure of finding compatriots soon after landing at any point upon the island.

Dr. Castillo states that there has been a new reorganization of the insurgent army and of the different services of the rebellion. The army is composed of five bodies. The first and second are in the eastern region; the third is in Camaguey, the fourth is in Las Villas, and the fifth in Habana and Pinar del Rio. These bodies are divided into sections, the sections into brigades, the brigades into regiments and the regiments into battalions. They also have annexed to them bodies of military engineers, health sections and military administration.

Every important column has an engineer's section, who direct the construction of trenches and make the designs of the different localities. Each column, according to its importance, has one or more physicians. Antonio Maceo's had five when he invaded Las Villas. Every physician has three practitioners at his command, and each of the latter has three letter carriers. With each doctor goes a mule laden with two medicine chests and the necessary surgical instruments. The wounded are never kept crowded in one place. When circumstances permit, large and ventilated huts are built, where at most four wounded are placed, thus avoiding accumulation of persons so contrary to sanitation and favorable results.

Duties of Prefects.

The military administration is complete, and is in charge of prefects who provide the columns of their prefectures with vegetables, meat and salt. The prefects also have care of the postoffice stations, each office having one chief and several messengers ready to carry any message or document whenever necessary, said messengers always requiring a receipt of the hour in which they deliver any document. Prefects take care also of the depots for horses, which are many, some depots having 700 horses in good condition. They also oversee the farms worked by the rebels. The employes of these farms make Majagua ropes and mats for the cavalry.

The prefects keep books in which they register the births, marriages and deaths in their respective jurisdictions; they act also as judges, and they legalize marriages with their presence at such ceremonies. They keep also books in which are the names of all men useful for the war, thus easily replacing the men who die or are killed in the ranks, always preferring single men or those who have small families and least necessities.

They have tanyards, shoe and leather factories, carpenter and ironsmith shops, and armories said to be as good as in the cities, one in Camaguey deserving special mention.

There is a body of auditors or war judges, the chief of whom is the lawyer from Holguin, L. D. Frexes. Every brigade has one auditor.

The order and discipline of the Cuban army are said to be good; the camps are in good order; the drums are beaten at daybreak, and the tattoo at 8 p. m. In the general headquarters these exercises are rendered lively by the bands of music, of which there are several. General Castillo says the spirits of the patriots in the field are enthusiastic, and they sustain strong hopes of final victory.

Tom Platt Laid Up.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Thomas C. Platt slipped on the sidewalk near an entrance to the Fifth Avenue hotel last night, and fell heavily, injuring his hip and thigh. No bones were broken, but the ex-senator suffered a severe strain and nervous shock. He will probably be confined to his room for some days.

Indicted For Murder.

UTICA, N. Y., Feb. 27.—In the county court yesterday the grand jury handed in indictments of murder in the first degree against John Hildreth, Theodore Hibbard, Herbert Plato and Fred Bristol, the Rome train wreckers. The date of their arraignment has not yet been decided on.

Deadly Acetylene.

QUEBEC, Feb. 27.—Arsene Consigny was killed and his brother Nochlas fatally injured yesterday by an explosion of acids while manufacturing acetylene gas.

Perhaps the "New Woman" will be a stronger woman than the old one. Certainly, fresh air and the right exercise will do much for her. Fresh air is a great restorative, exercise a great nerve tonic if a woman be in condition to take it. A healthy woman can avoid disease. She can avoid the seemingly almost inevitable "weakness" of her sex if she pursues the proper hygienic methods. The same methods will not cure her if she be already sick. Taken under medical direction, in connection with the right medicine, they will help effect a cure. No women who suffers at all from so-called "female weakness" should attempt athletics of any sort. She should first put herself into possession of strong and hearty health by taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. After she is thoroughly well, exercise and diversion will help to keep her well. The cure should come first. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is designed and recommended for only the one thing. It acts directly upon one set of organs. No matter what is the matter with them, it will cure it. It will not cure anything else. It is a wholesome tonic, invigorating nervine, or nerve food as well as a healing medicine, and thousands of perfect well women have found that by taking it regularly during the period of pregnancy, the danger and pain of parturition were much lessened, and in many cases, almost entirely obviated.

In every American household, there should be a copy of Dr. Pierce's great work, "Common Sense Medical Adviser," 1008 pages, illustrated. One copy free to any address on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay for mailing only. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

NOT WEAKNESS.

Goschen Says That England's Isolation Is a Sign of Independence.

LONDON, Feb. 27.—G. J. Goschen, first lord of the admiralty, speaking at Lewes last night, said that conciliation, negotiation and arbitration might be valuable, but woe to the nation lacking the courage or means to back their opinion by their own resources. The new system of log rolling and bartering for alliances, he said, had displaced the old system of a balance of power between European nations. England was not clever at this game, he added, and had held aloof, although her alliance was courted by several groups of power. "Our isolation, therefore," Mr. Goschen continued, "is not one of weakness, but of freedom to act independently. I am able to say that our relations with the German emperor are now as cordial as they could possibly be." He concluded with a reference to the necessity for a powerful fleet.

Given Up For Lost.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 27. — News received here points to the probable loss of the schooner Josie R. Bent, Captain A. E Bent, with a crew of eight men and a cargo of coal. This vessel left Philadelphia, Jan. 27, for New Bedford, Mass., which port she should have reached in about five days, but no tidings whatever have been had of her. About the time the Bent left the Delaware capes, terrific gales swept the eastern coast, and it is likely that she became disabled, drifting aleak and wentdown with all hands.

The Wisdom Of Trading Here.

Confidence in the people you trade with, should be the first principle of shopping with the thinking buyer.

If one needs the services of a physician, he naturally has a preference, and its nothing but confidence in the man you talk with that leads you to follow his advice to the letter. The sole aim of the clerks in many of the stores of today, seems to be the one object of selling goods, no matter by what means or by what misrepresentations

At this store things are different, the great fundamental principle of this business is to keep the interest of our patrons at heart—misrepresent nothing, and sell the best the market produces at money-saving prices. These methods alone account for the success of this business and the confidence the people have in our store system.

Resignation Without Apology Would Not Have Been Considered.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—At an adjourned meeting of the annual meeting of the New York Yacht club, with 40 yacht owners present and about 600 members crowding the clubhouse, Lord Dunraven was expelled from membership in the club by a vote of 39 to 1, the one being the sloop yacht Oriva, owned by Chester Munroe.

It was rumored that a letter embodying a resignation was on its way from the owner of the Valkyrie, but it was not in evidence when the meeting was called to order at 8:30 by Commodore Brown.

The only member of the board of investigation which carefully considered Lord Dunraven's charges of fraudulent practices on the part of the owners of the victorious Yankee craft, Defender, present was George L. Rives. The model room of the clubhouse was choked up with the members, who were anxious to join the yacht owners, who could decide the issue, in sending the Irish earl to Coventry.

As soon as the meeting was called to order by Commodore E. M. Brown, Captain Lewis Cass Ledyard requested that his motion calling for the resignation of Lord Dunraven from the New York Yacht club, which he proposed two weeks ago, should be withdrawn. The request was granted unanimously. Captain Ledyard then claimed that under chapter 21 of the by-laws of the club, Dunraven's actions should be summarily dealt with. This chapter reads as follows:

In case of an occurrence injurious to the welfare of the club, the name or names of any member or members implicated therein may be removed from the list of members by a vote of the majority of the yachts represented at any general or special meeting.

Captain Ledyard then offered the following preamble and resolution:

Plainly Put.

The Earl of Dunraven, an honorary member of this club, has publicly charged foul play on the part of the Defender in the recent races for the America's cup of such a nature as to necessarily implicate the managing owners of the vessel.

The charge has been investigated by a commission of the highest character, which has proceeded judicially, and before which Lord Dunraven has appeared and given his own and other testimony, and has been heard in person and by counsel. The commission has unanimously decided that the charge was false; that it was not merely unproved, but was affirmatively disproved by competent and uncontradictory evidence, leaving no possibility of doubt.

The commission has also found that the facts upon which Lord Dunraven acted, according to his own statement, furnished no justification for making such a charge.

We deem it to be among the unquestioned rules which regulate the course of gentlemen that when one finds that he has been led by mistake to cast unjust imputations upon the character of another, he should promptly make such reparation as remains in his power by acknowledging his error, withdrawing the imputations and expressing his regrets. Such reparation to Mr. Iselin and his associates, the Earl of Dunraven, after a full opportunity, has failed to make.

It further appears from the evidence, including Lord Dunraven's own admissions, that at the time of the cup races he intentionally refrained from making the charge formally, or making any protest, as required by the rules, because it was impossible for him to verify the charge, and he was unwilling to take the responsibility of entertaining it.

It is open to discussion that when gentlemen are engaged in any sport, and one suspects another of foul play, he is bound to make the charge then, and in such form and manner as to assume full responsibility therefor, or there after to remain silent.

It further appears that in print and in public speech Lord Dunraven has sought to justify the making of the charge by numerous misrepresentations of fact. He has been forced himself to admit the untruth of most of these, yet he stubbornly refuses to retract the injurious inferences drawn from them.

The representatives of this club engaged in the international yacht races with Lord Dunraven, as the representative of English yachtsmen, upon the footing of mutual confidence and honor. He has requited their courtesy and confidence by distrust, suspicion, unfounded imputations of fraud and refusal of reparation.

Lord Dunraven, by his course, has forfeited the high esteem which led to his election as an honorary member of this club; therefore,

Resolved, That the privileges of honorary membership heretofore extended to the Earl of Dunraven are hereby withdrawn, and that his name be removed from the list of honorary members of the club.

An Explanation.

In introducing the above resolution, Rear Commodore Ledyard said: "At the last meeting of the club I introduced a resolution which called upon the Earl of Dunraven to resign his honorary membership in the club. It seemed then more consistent with the courtesies and dignified and careful way in which all this subject has been treated by the New York Yacht club. I do not think that there has ever been in the mind of any member of the club an idea that we should accept any resignation by Lord Dunraven, unless it was accompanied by a full, ample and complete apology and a retraction of his charges.

"When I suggested, by the introduction of my resolution, that Lord Dunraven's resignation should be requested, I had in mind a resignation to be given by him in answer to a demand by the club, not a resignation such as any member in good standing could tender and expect to have accepted. The communications which we have received since the last meeting show that Lord Dunraven has not accepted the result of this inquiry. He is still carping, still hedging, still evading and still insisting that he saw with his eyes what we know he never did see, as has been conclusively proved.

"I think that his course has been such that it is due to the dignity and self-respect of this club that action should be taken which will leave no room for doubt as to the attitute of the club. And with that view I ask the unanimous consent of the members of the club to withdraw the resolution which I offered at the last meeting for the purpose of submitting in its place another and different one."

When Mr. Ledyard had done speaking, he was greeted with wild cheers. As soon as quiet was restored, Commodore Brown put the resolution to 40 yacht owners present, all of whom, but one, answering in the affirmative. The only dissenting vote was cast by Chester E. Monroe, owner of the sloop yacht Oriva.

When the result was announced, the yells of the club members could be heard blocks away, and when it was understood that Dunraven's name was no longer on the roll of the club, every member, with the one noted exception, expressed himself as being perfectly satisfied that the rule of the majority was in every way right and deserved. The vote was 39 to 1 in favor of Captain Ledyard's resolution dropping Dunraven from the roll. The remarks of every one interested were in accord with the views expressed tersely by ex-Commodore James D. Smith, who, in reply to the query of a reporter, said:

"It is the most just and satisfactory decision that was ever arrived at by any yacht club in the world against a man who had violated the honorable rules of sport, honor and integrity of men his peers."

OLD MAN MURDERED.

Beaten to Death, and His Watch, Chain and Money Taken.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Feb. 28.—Timothy Parmlee, 76, was found dead yesterday morning in his lonely home on the Cobalt hills. Mr. Parmlee lived alone, his wife having left him several years ago. For some time he had been in feeble health, and Wednesday evening he sent for Dr. Lawson. The physician was unable to visit him until yesterday morning. Upon arriving at the house, the doctor's knock met with no response, and he opened the door, which was not fastened. There on the kitchen floor lay the old man. He had apparently been dead for several hours. His head was horribly battered. The skull was broken in three places; the nose was broken, and the face, head and body were covered with bruises, cuts and contusions. Nearby, in a pool of blood, was found a flatiron covered with gore. The authorities were notified, and an investigation was begun. It is thought that the deed was committed by burglars. No money was found on the old man's body, and his watch and chain were gone. There were also evidences of a struggle. The dead man always carried a goodly sum of money on his person. The is no clew to the robbers and murderers.

Made No Confession.

UTICA, N. Y., Feb. 28.—Frederick Bristol, one of the four Rome boy train-wreckers, who derailed the fast mail on the New York Central Nov. 13, died of consumption in the jailer's residence adjoining the jail yesterday afternoon. The grand jury had just reported two indictments against him, as well as against his three companions, charging murder in the first degree. He was 19 years of age, and was the only one of the quartet who did not make a confession of guilt to District Attorney Klock.

A Drunkard's Crime.

JERSEY CITY, Feb. 28.—John Mackin, a shiftless fellow, shot and killed his wife, Lizzie Mackin, and his mother-in-law, Bridget Connors, and fatally wounded his father-in-law, Morris Connors, at their home in this city last night. Mackin was arrested, and said that he did the shooting because they refused to allow him to see his children. He has been married several years, but recently his wife left him, and he has spent most of his time in drinking.

Blackburn's Time Is Short.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Feb. 28.—A resolution has been prepared by the gold standard Democrats who have been supporting Senator Blackburn for re-election to the United States senate asking his withdrawal. If Senator Blackburn refuses to withdraw, 25 Democrats will vote for some other Democrat. The 31st ballot for United States senator resulted as follows: Blackburn, 62; Hunter, 62; Carlisle, 5; Holt, 3: Colson, 1; Bate, 1.

A Lively Fusilade.

ROME, Ga., Feb. 28.—A desperate street fight occurred here yesterday between V. T. Sanford and Policeman Mulkey. Mulkey is dead, ex-Sheriff Matthew perhaps fatally wounded and several stray shots took effect in other innocent spectators. The altercation began between the two principals because Policeman Mulkey clubbed a friend of Sanford's.

Sensational Testimony.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 28.—Miss Mattie Overman, with whom Rev. Dr. Brown is said to have been unduly intimate, was placed upon the witness stand last night. She created a sensation by admitting that she had entered into a plot with Mrs. Davidson to blackmail Dr. Brown. She said she was induced to take the step by Mrs. Davidson.

A Five-Year Settler.

DES MOINES, Feb. 28.—In the house yesterday prohibition was killed. The constitutional amendment resolution was defeated by a vote of 41 to 52. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table, and then the consideration of the resolution was indefinitely postponed. This settles prohibition for five years, at least, in Iowa.

Rhodes Was Posted.

CAPE TOWN, Feb. 28.—Premier Sprigg of Cape Colony says that no members of the late ministry, save Cecil Rhodes, knew anything of the circumstances antecedent to the Transvaal crisis. In face of the delicate negotiation between England and the Transvaal, Sprigg said he was unable to go further into the question.

Must Pay the Penalty.

CHICAGO, Feb. 28.—Judge Grosscup has declined to change the sentence of Joseph Dunlop, editor of The Dispatch, convicted of sending obscene matter through the mails, and fined $1000 and given two years in the penitentiary. The court said an appeal was left to the president.

CASH IS ROLLING IN

While Blacksmith Newell Cures by the Laying on of Hands.

Paralysis and Rheumatism Knocked Out.

Two Days' Work at Greenfield Netted Him Fifteen Hundred Dollars.

GREENFIELD, Mass., Feb. 28.—Herbert Newell, the stalwart blacksmith of Jacksonville, Vt., again created a sensation here yesterday. A large crowd gathered yesterday morning and were clamoring for the magic healer to come and cure them. This crowd was made up of all classes and ages of cripples, and those suffering from all sorts of ailments.

The first person to be treated yesterday was Ernest Gruber of Brookfield, who is 38 years of age, and who has had his right arm and hand crippled since he was 5 years old. Newell grasped the paralyzed arm and hand and rubbed it for several minutes. Suddenly he took Gruber by the much-twisted hand and straightened it out. Gruber at once began to move his hand, and lifted a small weight, it being the first time in 30 years that he was able to move his arm in any manner.

George Harbicker of Amherst, who had been sick in bed for 10 months with rheumatism, was from his home to Greenfield, and Newell rubbed his lower limbs. Harbicker was told by Newell to get up and try and walk. This he did without any help.

The third patient was a Mrs. Bielech of Springfield, who had been deaf in her left ear for 30 years. Newell rubbed the ear for seven minutes. He then placed a watch close to her ear, and Mrs. Bielech said she could hear it tick. These three cases were the most wonderful, although during the day Newell cured 200 people. He received in two days for his services $1500.

He received an offer yesterday of $15,000 a year from several business men of Ware to come there and open an office, and they would be his managers. This Newell refused to do, and left for his home last night. He has mapped out a plan to visit several towns for the next two weeks.

He is a big, powerful man, over six feet tall, weighs 230 pounds, and dark complexion, with jet black, curly hair. He is unassuming and does not feel his magic power. He treated yesterday 35 persons free of charge. In each town he will do the same way.

ON BEACON HILL.

Hearings on Many Topics—Corn Doctors' Bill Killed in the Senate.

BOSTON, Feb. 28.—A new phase of the Kenngott-First Congregational church (Lowell) controversy was presented at the state house, when upwards of 150 friends of Rev. Mr. Kenngott were present in support of a bill introduced into the legislature giving any member of the First Congregational church above the age of 21 years, who hires a pew or sitting in the church, to act as a member of the society. The hearing was held before the committee on parishes and religious societies.

The church numbers some 500 members or more, and the society about 60. The society is opposed to the pastor. The church is not, but as the church members have no right to a vote in the society, the opponents of the pastor have, up to the present time, practically had their own way.

The society members leased the church property, in order, it is said, to circumvent Mr. Kenngott, to a dozen of their members, hired a new minister and procured an injunction restraining Mr. Kenngott from entering the pulpit. The injunction is now pending. The hearing is unfinished.

The committee on public health gave a hearing on the bill to prevent the manufacture and sale of cigarets in this state. The same bill has been heard for the last three or four sessions of the legislature. Mrs. Gleason, superintendent of that division of the W. C. T. U. which wars with narcotics, appeared before the committee. She said that there was a law on the statute books prohibiting the sale of cigarets to minors. It is not obeyed, she said, and the great majority of cigaret smokers are young boys. No men smoke them, she continued, with the exception of a few dudes.

There was a suffrage hearing before the committee on constitutional amendments in the old representatives' chamber, which was fully occupied by women and an occasional man. The hearing most important from a commercial standpoint was that which was given by the committee on manufactures on the proposed compulsory consolidation of the Bay State and Brookline Gas companies.

Among other subjects considered in committee were the bills to prevent the manufacture and sale of cigarets, dangers from broken trolley wires, prevention of vivisection and several municipal and insurance matters.

A third reading was refused to the bill for a commission in chiropody.

A Record of Prosperity.

BOSTON, Feb. 28.—The executive committee of the Y. M. C. A. of Massachusetts and Rhode Island held their annual banquet here last evening, at which upwards of 200 members of the association from both states participated. Chairman Durrell spoke of the work and growth of the association in both states under state supervision—in 11 years increasing its associations from 42 to 89, its membership from 14,722 members to 31,006 and its property valuation from $385,070 to $1,572,923. Ex-Governor Beaver of Pennsylvania dwelt upon the benefits to the community accruing from the Y. M. C. A.

Forced Out of Business.

ROCKLAND, Me., Feb. 28.—The Knox County Co-operative Creamery association yesterday decided to discontinue business. Up to this year it had been producing 70,000 pounds of butter annually. It is charged that through lack of management, combined with keen competition, the co-operative business had greatly fallen off, until at present the association's finances are behind several thousand dollars.

The honest pharmacist may, without flattery, be called a benefactor of humanity. He spends a number of years in the thorough mastery of his profession and is a man of broad views, liberal education, and wide experience. ## The Wisdom Of Trading Here.

Confidence in the people you trade with, should be the first principle of shopping with the thinking buyer.

If one needs the services of a physician, he naturally has a preference, and its nothing but confidence in the man you talk with that leads you to follow his advice to the letter. The sole aim of the clerks in many of the stores of today, seems to be the one object of selling goods, no matter by what meaus or by what misrepresentations.

At this store things are different, the great fundamental principle of this business is to keep the interest of our patrons at heart—misrepresent nothing, and sell the best the market produces at money-saving prices. These methods alone account for the success of this business and the confidence the people have in our store system.

Reception at Wollaston.

The reception given by George and Martha Washington, at Mrs. Ross', Central avenue, Wollaston, on Wednesday evening, under the auspices of the Ladies' Society of the Methodist church, was a great success. The house was packed by friends who came to pay their respects to the distinguished pair.

Mr. and Mrs. Washington were finely personated by Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Emerson, who were dressed in Continental style. Several of the guests also wore the costumes of many years ago.

Music was furnished on the violin by Miss Bjorkman with Miss Wilder as accompanist. Rev. C. W. Wilder read an article on "Washington as an Athlete," and also the words of a song that Washington once sung to the twin sons of Chief Justice Ellsworth, of Connecticut. Miss Mabel Hastings gave a recitation and General and Lady Washington, on being introduced to the audience, made brief addresses. Coffee and cake were served.

Joint Meeting Cutters' Union and Manufacturers.

The Secretary of the National Cutters' Union in Town.

Tonight may be termed the night before the battle, as before another day dawns it will probably be definitely settled whether work in the granite business will go on uninterrupted for another year.

James Duncan, of Baltimore, secretary of the of the Granite Cutters' National Union, arrived in Quincy Thursday night and is in conference with the Cutters' committee today, and will be present tonight at a joint meeting between the Manufacturers' and Cutters' committees. An effort will be made to settle the differences in a peaceable manner, and it is hoped it may be successful.

What the outcome of this meeting will be it is hard to tell, but the condition of affairs in the granite industry for the balance of the year will depend on what understanding the two committees come to.

After the joint meeting of the two committees the cutters will hold a mass meeting to hear the report and take such action as seems expedient.

BOARD OF TRADE.

The New Association Taking an Interest in Public Improvements.

The directors of the Board of Trade held a meeting Thursday evening and talked over informally quite a number of matters. The committee to whom was referred the matter of the extension of the Quarry railroad was not ready to report and asked further time.

The matter of the proposed change in the grade of Hancock street was brought up and was referred to the Committee on Highway Improvements.

This brought up the advisability of a board of survey to establish all street grades, which was discussed at length.

The Committee on New Industries was not ready to report.

Supper and Entertainment.

The second night of the midwinter festival at the Evangelical Congregational church was even more of a pleasing success than on Tuesday. It opened at 6.30 with a fine supper by the Chapel Builders, when the attendance far exceeded the expectations. Escalloped oysters, salads, turkey, ham, pies, coffee, etc., were served by a bevy of pretty young ladies.

The entertainment of the evening followed, under the direction of Mrs. Wood, who received the hearty cooperation of the young people. It delighted the large audience. Miss Grace Isaac was a charming "Red Riding Hood," and Mrs. Herbert T. Drake, as "mother," was at her best. "The Blue Bells" was a hit of the evening with Bessie Merrill as the "wee bit of a blossom." The chorus songs were all good, and the effect of the tableaux was heightened by calcium light.

Each evening the King's Daughters sold home-made candies, and the two days' festival was a financial as well as a social success.

Castle Square Theatre, Boston.

The Castle Square Theatre presents for the present week the great double bill Pinafore and Cavalleria Rusticana, which has crowded the beautiful theatre for the past week. The Pinafore stage setting is a work of art, while the Cavalleria Rusticana scene is one of the most telling ever placed on the stage. A feature of each performance is the playing of the celebrated intermezzo by Mr. Herschfeldt, the musical Director. Rarely does one hear finer musical phrasing or more perfect unison than by the Castle Square Orchestra in this number. For next week, Mr. Rose announces The Mikado, being the last of the Gilbert and Sullivan season. The cast will be a strong one and the production in every way worthy of the high standard maintained by the Castle Square since May 6th last. As a further addition to the already strong company, the engagement of Mlle. Fatmah Diard is announced by the management. Mlle. Diard comes direct from Paris where she has spent some time perfecting herself and her fine soprano voice under the mentorship of Marchesi, the famous Parisian teacher. Mlle. Diard has filled several important engagements on the other side, notably with the Carl Rosa Opera Company.

Papaw Vines For Luck.

The Rev. T. D. Witherspoon in a sermon at Paducah related an amusing story of his experience while evangelizing in the mountains. One day while passing a cornfield in Leslie county he was surprised to see long strings of papaw bark knotted together and tied to stumps. He asked his guide what it meant and was informed that it was "to bring luck."

"And does such a foolish superstition exist all over this community?" asked the minister.

"Oh, no," said the mountaineer; "the old preacher over in the settlement yonder says papaw vines don't do no good."

"Yassir," the native continued, "he 'lows that yarn strings beats papaw strings all hollow when it comes to bringin luck. Fact is, he don't use nothin but yarn strings."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Polite Child.

Professor Sully, in an article in The Popular Science Monthly, commenting on the jealous regard for ceremony and the proprieties of behavior as seen in the enforcement of rules of politeness by children, cites a delightful instance that fell under his own observation as he was walking on Hampstead heath. "It was a spring day, and the fat buds of the chestnut were bursting into magnificent green plumes. Two well dressed 'misses,' aged, I should say, about 9 and 11, were taking their correct morning walk. The elder called the attention of the younger to one of the trees, pointing to it. The younger exclaimed in a highly shocked tone, 'Oh, Maud, you know you shouldn't point!' The notion of perpetrating a rudeness on the chestnut tree was funny enough. But the incident is instructive as illustrating the childish tendency to stretch and generalize rules to the utmost."

Open Car Windows.

A correspondent writing of open car windows and the disagreeable draft from the same suggests that screens similar to those used in sleeping cars be provided for coach windows, and that only trainmen be allowed to place or remove them. A lady writing to the same paper suggests original tactics by the person annoyed:

"Simply raise your umbrella or parasol in front of you, so that the wind, cinders, dust and smoke blow from your umbrella on the back of the neck of the person who sits by the window in front of you. A very few minutes suffice to convince this person that the wind is blowing harder than he thought and is very disagreeable and uncomfortable. So down goes the window, and also the umbrella, with a quiet smile of gratitude and content, with the result of self protection."—New York Tribune.

A Sponge Statue.

Sponge is certainly one of the most original and unlikely materials in the world for a statue; but, for all that, one of Germany's great men is modeled in this unpromising substance.

In the Friedrichsstrasse, Berlin, is a shop which contains a statue in sponge of Mr. Withorst. He is represented life-size, seated in an armchair and holding his notes for a speech in his hand.

Every one acknowledges that the likeness is an excellent one, and the manner in which the statesman's frock coat and gold spectacles are represented is a subject for universal admiration.

The Whole World at War.

The whole world is at war—not the war of armies or fleets, but none the less war. Capital contends against labor, labor against capital; capitalist fights capitalist in trade competition; workman fights against workman in ways which have nothing to do with mere competition. There be men who deplore the facts, who denounce the existence of this warfare, as though nothing good could be said of it, and yet it is far from clear that without it the world would make any progress.—Engineer.

In Line With the Business.

"He's one of those self acting clerks," said the proprietor of the little gunshop in speaking of the young man who had quit his employ.

"How is that?" asked the patron.

"He discharges himself."—Chicago Post.

Authors.

Authors may be divided roughly into three groups, the good, the bad and the popular. The first make fame, the second make books, and the third make money.—New York Evening Sun.

AN HISTORIC STREET

An Interesting and Valuable Paper by Edward H. Dewson.

Hancock Street for Period Covering 257 Years.

Each Estate to be Taken up Separately and History Given.

Returning to the junction of Hancock and Adams streets, we will again journey southward taking the estates on our left hand or the east side of the street. It will be remembered that all the land on this side, from this point to the training field or meeting-house green, (twenty-eight acres,) was in 1640 granted to John Dassitt, by the town of Boston. Mr. Marsh says: The first house we find on this side was built by Samuel Littlefield, the house previously standing on this site, having been burned in 1835-6. Later, it was successively owned by Gideon F. Thayer and his son, then by F. E. Edson and J. Alba Davis and lastly by Cotton Center Johnson in 1863. A little farther south, near the big tree in the sidewalk of the E. B. Pratt estate, there stood soon after the close of the war of 1776, the house of John Pray.

We have not the date of its erection. Pattee states that Pray manufactured shoes there, being the first who engaged in that business in this town.

The old house was brought in the seventies, by Lysander S. Richards who removed it to Alleyne terrace, corner of Alleyne and Hancock streets, where it now stands remodeled. Next, is the house of the late Edwin B. Pratt. This is of modern construction. Pratt brought of Francis M. Johnson. He, of Warren Marsh, who came from Boston and built it in the early fifties.

We come next to the house of Mrs. L. G. Horton, built by Ebenezer Chamberlain a little later than 1811. It is of the first type. A piazza has been added.

Near it is a small two story house of modern appearance. It was formerly Mr. Horton's bake house.

In 1760, it was voted to remove the schoolhouse of the North Precinct "to nigh the ten mile stake to be placed in the road convenient as may." Its location was near the above house. It stood partly in the present road, where it remained until 1795. Pattee says "the third schoolhouse was erected on Hancock street opposite the ten mile post in 1763. It was to be placed there provided John Beal will allow a piece of land in exchange for the land where the old pound stood.

The next house, is a modification of the first type, inasmuch as it is only one room deep, and has an addition on one-half of the rear, but it is lacking in simplicity. It was built by Charles Newcomb soon after 1811. In 1827, it was owned by his son George, later Thomas Adams became its owner. He was high sheriff of Norfolk county. The small building in the yard was his office. The estate is now owned by the heirs of A. W. Russell.

The next house was built by Moses R. Marsh in 1817. It also is a modification of the first type, somewhat modernized. It is the property and residence of Doctor John A. Gordon. Beyond it, there was for many years the shoe shop of the Marsh's, later removed to Faxon avenue.

The next house was built by Edmund Marsh a little earlier than the other. Saville avenue has been opened south of it. The house is a good specimen of the modified first type, unchanged and well preserved. Henry H. Faxon brought this property and erected a wheelwright and blacksmith shop near Doctor Gordon's line. Later, Doctor Gordon acquired it and removed the shop.

The Marsh's were grantees from John Whitney and Joseph H. Dorr, Boston, and Jonathan Webb, Quincy.

The next estate was sold by Jonathan Webb Oct. 19, 1816, to Josiah Saville, father of the late George Saville. The house was built on the south corner of Saville avenue soon after. Originally it was of the first type. In 1855 a new roof was put on. Other changes have altered and improved the appearance very much. It was bought by Cotton C. Johnson in 1867. The present owner is John O. Hall.

The next house on the corner of Faxon avenue was built by Johnson since 1867 on the site of the blacksmith shop of Josiah Savil.

NOTE.—Mr. Dewson requests that corrections and omissions in the above historical paper be sent to the PATRIOT for publication, instead of to him; although if anyone prefers the latter course he will be glad to receive their letters and see that they are recorded. At his suggestion the PATRIOT will inaugurate an historical and genealogical column upon the completion of the history of Hancock street, probably March 28 or April 4—[EDS.

New Magazines.

"What a Great City Might Be" is the subject of the opening article in the New England Magazine for March. It is a lesson from the White City, and its author, John Coleman Adams, taking us back to the wonderful scene at Chicago three years ago, a scene which he justly urges ought not to be allowed to pass from memory, draws many morals pertinent to the municipal problems which seem to be always with us. His article is beautifully illustrated, and it will be a pleasure to every one who visited the White City to go back there in Mr. Adams's company for the practical purposes which he has in view.

Wheelmen and wheelwomen will find much to interest them in Outing for March. In "A Cycling Trip in Trinidad," Henry Macbeth draws a pleasing pen-picture of a charming land for touring. Leaz's World Tour is continued from Shapur to Shiraz, and in "About the Paleanics," Charles Edwards drops valuable hints for those who may contemplate following his route awheel.

The March Number of The Delineator is called the great spring number and is especially valuable and interesting because of the early forecast it contains of spring and summer styles and materials for ladies, misses and children. It is issued by the fashion publishers, The Butterick Publishing Co.

In McClure's Magazine for March is brought to light a speech of 1837 by Abraham Lincoln, which the biographers until now, seemingly, have known nothing of, though it contains passages still of the highest interest. Col. John Hay contributes an interesting paper on Ellsworth, the young hero killed at the beginning of the war. A story by Kipling that breathes the breath of life into every plate and rivet of a great ship, and makes it an all but human community, striving, straining and gossiping, is a feature of the number.

An educational department is one of the new features of the Overland Monthly, published at San Francisco, Cal. Two notable articles in the March issue are: "The Last of the Vaqueross," and "The Poster and the Arts and Crafts;" the latter being illustrated with posters at the recent exhibition in San Francisco. The Garden City of San Jose, and the new gold fields of Cripple Creek are among the good things soon to appear.

"Women in Music" is a feature of the Jenness-Miller Monthly for March, and there are illustrated papers on women composers, on "Progress in Musical Composition," and on "Music." News and Views of Women Clubs is a very interesting department, and the "Word of Fashion" is of interest at this season.

Senator Vest Makes an Earnest Plea For Liberty.

Wrong For Us to Stand Silent While Spanish Butchery Continues.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28. — At 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon an ex-member of the house became a member and a member became an ex-member. Such was the result of the three days' debate in the house on the Van Horn-Tarsney contested election case.

The exciting incident of the day occurred just before the house adjourned. The strong resolutions prepared by the foreign affairs committee for the recognition of the Cuban belligerents had been presented earlier in the day amid a scene of great enthusiasm. In fact, the demonstration of approval was so spontaneous and seemingly so unanimous, that just before the house adjourned, Mr. Hitt, who had intended to postpone calling them up until next Monday, asked unanimous consent for their immediate consideration, but Mr. Boutelle called an emphatic halt by an objection.

He declared that the passage of the resolutions might precipitate war with Spain, and characterized as "amazing" a proposition to pass, without debate, resolutions of such "momentous gravity." He was appealed to to withdraw his objection, but he indignantly declined.

The resolutions adopted by the foreign affairs committee were as follows:

Resolved, by the house of representatives (the senate concurring), That in the opinion of congress a state of public war exists in Cuba, the parties to which are entitled to belligerent rights, and the United States should observe a strict neutrality between the belligerents.

Resolved, That congress deplores the destruction of life and property caused by the war now waging in that island, and believing that only permanent solution of the contest equally in the interest of Spain, the people of Cuba and other nations would be in the establishment of a government by the choice of the people of Cuba, it is the sense of congress that the government of the United States should use its good offices and friendly influence to that end.

Resolved, That the United States has not intervened in struggles between any European governments and their colonies on this continent, but from the very close relation between the people of the United States and those of Cuba, in consequence of its proximity and the extent of the commerce between the two peoples, the present war is entailing such losses upon the people of the United States, that congress is of opinion that the government of the United States should be prepared to protect legitimate interests of Americans by intervention if necessary.

Resolved, That congress pledges its support to the president in carrying out the foregoing resolutions.

The resolutions were adopted after a session of over two hours. All but two members of the committee who were present voted for them. The main question discussed at the meeting was the expediency of adopting a resolution which, Mr. Draper said, might precipitate the United States into a war with Spain, but it was generally agreed offense could not be taken at the recognition of belligerency, which simply made the United States a neutral as between the combatants. Mr. McCreary favored delay until an opportunity was afforded to discuss the question whether the president would have to sign the resolutions.

An Exciting Session.

The senate yesterday agreed that a final vote on the Cuban resolution would be taken at 4 o'clock today, and the debate was proceeding, Mr. White (Cal.) and Mr. Gray (Del.) contending as a legal proposition that the United States could not at this time recognize Cuba's independence. This aroused Mr. Vest—first, for questions of remonstrance, and then to one of the bursts of eloquence with which he at times electrifies the senate.

Mr. White said that he sincerely hoped the Cubans would win their cause; but with Spanish power encircling the island, with Spain holding every port in Cuba, with the insurgents unrecognized anywhere abroad, he could not conclude that independence had been accomplished.

Mr. Vest pointed out, however, that the Cubans, without ships, without arms, except those made by themselves, maintained a rebellion for 10 years. If this had been done, why could not the insurgents again maintain a warfare until Spain was forced to yield?

Mr. White closed with the statement that, while he hoped to see Cuba free, yet the United States could not now declare that Cuba was free and independent without belying established facts.

At this point Mr. Vest came forward with a characteristic speech. Where would the United States be today, asked Mr. Vest, if this policy, urged by the California senator, had been followed? Instead of assembling here as a congress, this would be another British colony, another appanage of the British crown. France recognized the independence of the United States, and sent her armies and fleets, and placed on us a debt of undying gratitude.

In ringing tones Mr. Vest declared that if we as the great republic of the world proposed to stand by these people in their struggle akin to ours then we must help them in their time of need. Mr. Vest drew a vivid picture of Spain's bloody rule over the old Spanish-American dependencies. Then he added:

"Of all those vast dominions won by blood, won through torture and fire, there remains today to this toothless old wolf the single island of Cuba. And Spain today, like the giant's despair in that wonderful picture of Bunyan's, almost helpless sits at the door of the dark cave of despotism and grins with impatient rage at the procession of splendid republics that march on in the progress toward civilization and liberty. That wolf can never retain that single cub. Never can Spain hold the island of Cuba after she has been unable to hold one foot south of us in all the wide area of the southern half of this continent."

Mr. Gray interrupted to ask if, as a matter of existing fact, Cuba had now established a condition of existence.

With another burst of eloquence, Mr. Vest responded that it was not for us to determine that the Cubans had completely established themselves. The question for us to determine was, Can Spain re-establish her power and dominion over Cuba?

The Cubans demonstrated today that they had the power to resist Spain. A year ago their uprising was a mere emeute. Now every Cuban is a patriot. They have abandoned homes and families for the cause of freedom. Spain may exterminate them. "But," said Mr. Vest, with impassioned tones, "Spain will never, never, never again make them the unwilling subjects of her power."

The senator spoke with contempt of the statements that the Cubans were negroes and mulattoes. So much the more should they have our sympathy, said he.

Mr. Vest added this apotheosis to liberty: "Liberty lives with the poor and oppressed; not with the wealthy and the powerful. It throbs in the breast of the caged bird, and has gone with martyrs to the stake and kissed their burning lips as the spirit winged its flight to God. Liberty cannot be extinguished when a people are unanimous in defense of the rights which God has given them."

Mr. Vest's peroration was strikingly beautiful. "Shall we," he said, "the great exemplar of republican institutions throughout the world, declare that in our opinion the people of Cuba are able to maintain their independence and have achieved it? Are we to wait until that island is desolated by fire and sword? Are we, a Christian and God-fearing people, to stand silent and dumb while the Spanish governor, called a general, declares that he intends to pen up the Cubans and butcher them into subjugation to the Spanish throne.

"Sir, if we do it, God will curse us. If we do this thing, and stand here until a desert has been made of that splendid island, you may be sure that the time will come when there will be retribution upon us as a people, because we have not been true to the task assigned us by providence, because we have not cherished the legacy of self-government as bequeathed to us by our fathers."

"Fight to a Finish."

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 28.—According to the statement of W. D. Mahon, president of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employes of America, a general strike is threatened on the lines of New York, Chicago, Boston, Worcester, Mass.; Milwaukee, Detroit, Philadelphia and other cities. The decision was reached at a recent meeting in Detroit to inaugurate a strike unless a 10-hour day at 20 cents an hour was conceded. The fight will be begun immediately in this city, where the men claim to have been tricked. "No third parties will be permitted to intervene, and," said Mahon, "it will be a fight to a finish."

Death of General Merrill.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 28.—General Lewis Merrill died yesterday at the Presbyterian hospital from an affection of the kidneys, aged 62 years. General Merrill graduated with high honors from the West Point military academy, and was appointed a second lieutenant in the famous dragoons regiment in the United States army. His chief operations during the war were in northern Missouri.

Tim's Complaint.

DUBLIN, Feb. 28.—Timothy Healy, in addressing the Irish National Federation yesterday, accused John Dillon of getting himself elected to the chairmanship of the party by intrigue and in disregard of the feeling of the country. His position, however, entitled him to forbearance as long as he kept within the broad lines of policy.

Nipped In the Bud.

TRENTON, Feb. 28.—Four prisoners in the Mercer county jail broke a hole in the ceiling over the landing running along the upper tier of cells. The discovery of this fact prevented the carrying out of the plan to break another hole through the roof of the prison, which would have resulted in the escape of 16 prisoners.

What the Winds Said.

Oh, a wind came whispering out of the east,
And these were the words that it said to me
"Of all life's treasures wealth is the least."
Oh, a wind came whispering out of the east,
All up from a summer sea.

A wind came whispering out of the west,
And these were the words that it murmured low:
"Fame is a bubble, and love is best."
Oh, the winds came out of the east and the west,
And they told the truth, I know.
—Albert Bigelow Paine.

Then and Now.

'Whose cuckoo is 'ou?" with love in his eyes,
He asks his best girl, while he reaches
His arm round her waist, and she coyly replies,
"I's 'ou's, 'ou's mine, and we's eaches!"

They're married—a year has quickly sped by,
But he calls her his cuckoo no more.
He yells: "Rush that breakfast! Hustle! Be spry!
Great Scott! I'll be late at the store!"
—Henry Richardson.

Music resembles poetry. In each
Are nameless graces which no methods teach
And which a master's hand alone can reach.

Wordsworth and Burns.

A friend writes us from England: We visited the simple tomb of William Wordsworth in Grasmere churchyard. The old church stood near it, among the ancient trees. The rapid Rotha passed the graves and the grand hills lifted their green domes in the cloudless sky.

We had ridden past the poet tuned lakes of Windermere and Grasmere, with memories of Coleridge, De Quincey, Christopher North, Mrs. Hemans and Harriet Martineau, and had rested by Rydal Water in the shadows of Rydal Mount.

"Wordsworth," said one of our party, calling to mind the author of the "Excursion," "seems to be the soul of all these scenes. He made himself the ever prevailing spirit of the English lakes."

"Burns was his teacher," said another.

"How was that?" we asked.

There, under the grand trees lifting their solemn tops to the sun, our friend repeated a single verse from Wordsworth's poem on the death of Burns:

I mourned with thousands, but as one
More deeply grieved, for he was gone
Whose light I hailed when first it shone
And showed my youth
How verse may build a princely throne
On humble truth.

MRS. GOOLD'S GRATITUDE.

Her Story of How She Was Restored to Health.

Condition Before and After the Birth of Her Child.

From every city, town and hamlet on this vast continent, come letters from suffering women; from those whose physicians have been unable to assist them, or from that numberless class whose confidence in Mrs. Pinkham's advice and the curative properties of her Vegetable Compound is unbounded.

Every letter received from women is recorded, and hundreds of volumes of cases treated aid in furnishing practical information for the women of to-day. No letters are published without the request of the writer. The strictest confidence is observed. The following letter represents thousands:—

"I always enjoyed good health until six months before the birth of my babe. Then I was very weak; my back ached all the time. My physicians said I would be all right after the birth of the child, but I was not, although at that time I had the best of care. The pains in my back were almost unbearable. I had leucorrhœa in its worst form; menstruations were painful.

"Any work or care would entirely unnerve me. When my babe was 11 months old, friends persuaded me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Before I had taken one bottle I felt the effects. My back did not ache so badly, and I felt stronger. After taking four bottles I felt well. My ambition returned, menstruations were painless, leucorrhœa entirely cured, and I could take care of my babe and do my housework. I shall always recommend your Vegetable Compound for all women, especially for young mothers."—MRS. H. L. GOOLD, Oregon, Wis.

If Mrs. Goold had been well before the birth of her child, subsequent suffering would have been avoided. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound should always be taken before and after birth, in order that the system may withstand the shock.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning March 1. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—What is involved in loyalty to Christ? —Luke x, 25-37.

Many things are involved in loyalty to Christ, but perhaps they could all be essentially summed up as they are in the topical reference by two things—first, love to God, and, second, love to humanity. For Christ's sake we must love God; for Christ's sake we must love our neighbors. This is the sum and essence of loyalty to Christ.

1. Loyalty to Christ includes love to God. Christ is God's only begotten Son. It was because it was His Father's will that He came and died for us. Therefore not to love God is disloyalty to Christ. But what does love to God include? It includes gratitude. We cannot love God and not be grateful to Him for all the blessings of life, and we should show this gratitude by living for God in Christ. Love to God includes admiration for Him. We admire those whom we love, and no one possesses more to arouse the highest admiration than God. But we must not stop at admiration, but this admiration should fill us with an earnest desire to be like God. Love to God includes a desire to have His name known and His will done on earth even as the angels do it in heaven. True love to God can scarcely be conceived of without a burning desire that all should know and love Him.

2. Loyalty to Christ includes love to humanity. Christ died for the world. For His sake we must love those for whom He died. This is taught in the parable contained in the topical reference, that of the good Samaritan. We are to love all men regardless of their nationality or their religious denominations. The man who fell among the thieves was of different nationality and different religion from the good Samaritan, but he did not hesitate to help him on that account. He saw a fellow being before him needing his help, and utterly regardless of all other considerations he gave him the help he needed. We should love our neighbors—all men—as ourselves. This does not mean that we are to share everything that we have with them, but that we should do unto others what we would that they should do unto us. The golden rule is the key to loving our neighbors as ourselves. We should love humanity practically. We should help the needy, strive to reclaim and uplift the fallen and to lead them to a saving knowledge of Christ and to loyalty and fidelity to Him.

Meetings at the Washington Convention.

At a recent meeting of the board of trustees of the United Society of Christian Endeavor the subject of the international conventions was up before the board, with results of no small moment. Belief in the great value of these conventions, as times of genuine fellowship and untold inspiration to tens of thousands of delegates, and to the church at large as a means of bringing the cause of Christ attractively before the whole world as a method of practical evangelization, was reaffirmed at Detroit.

But the conventions are not without practical difficulties. To meet these it was decided that at Washington next July the conduct of the meetings should be somewhat changed, and they will be undelegated Christian Endeavor mass meetings, open to all Endeavorers as heretofore. Their chief purpose will remain as fellowship and inspiration, and the most carefully arranged programmes will be provided. Instead of the conventions being confined to mass meetings many of the sessions will be distributed among a sufficient number of churches in the convention city. The speakers of these meetings will be the best obtainable, and the subjects discussed will deal with practical Christian Endeavor work and with the interests of the highest Christian life. There still will be mass meetings of the delegates in the three great tents, but there will also be the smaller gatherings, making the whole a convention of conventions.

Developing Tendencies.

Men cannot protract their stay in the wilderness without acquiring wilderness habits and developing wilderness tendencies. Hence in the case of "old converts" seeking to cross this Jordan and enter this Canaan of perfect love repentance as well as consecration is usually in order.—Christian Standard.

Free For All.

Blessed be God, who honored me with being a field preacher. Could I speak so loud as that the whole world might hear me I would declare that the grace of God is free for all poor souls that are willing to accept of it by Christ. God make you willing this day.—Whitefield.

Break Your Own Path.

Don't wait for somebody else to go ahead. Break your own path. Don't put off today's work until tomorrow in hope that it will be done for you.—Christian Leader.

Points to Conider.

A revival that abides never comes to the person who is afraid of the whole truth.

When Christians quarrel together, satan receives no blows. "With one accord," is the first condition of a pentecost.

If the devil can set a man to criticising the minister, he removes him a long way from the thrust of truth.

Some Christians need, most of all, the knowledge that they are dead to things spiritual.

It does not take a great crowd and a celebrated speaker to create a revival. Christ and a convicted soul are enough.

The word in the heart and a Bible in the hand are oil to revival fires.

A HUMAN WATERFALL.

Eighty Spectators at Fall River Polo Game Fell From Gallery.

More Than Two Score Were Badly Hurt.

Crowd Pressed Against Railing to See a Fight Among Players.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Feb. 29.—During a polo game between the Fall River and New Bedford teams at the Casino rink last night a section of the east gallery rail, 33 feet long, was forced off, and the men and boys on four rows of the gallery fell to the floor of the rink, 16 feet below. Some 80 fell in all.

Owing to the great rivalry existing between these two teams, the attendance was very large, the galleries being crowded to their utmost. In the rear gallery standing room was all taken by spectators, and against the rail along the edge of the balcony pressed as many persons as the space would accommodate. It wanted about two minutes to end the game, with the score 8 to 5 in favor of Fall River.

Dunning of the New Bedfords put the ball into the cage with his hand; Curley of Fall River accused Dunning of foul foul play. The men began to fight; Captain Cotter tried to separate them. Tobey, who was referee, blew his whistle, but the men paid no attention to it. The crowd in the gallery leaned forward, and two or three men were pushed over the rear railing.

The crowd behind them, thinking these men had jumped over to take part in the fight, pressed still more fiercely in their intense interest in the game, and the railing giving way, fully 80 spectators were precipitated upon the floor beneath.

The scene was indescribable; it was simply a human waterfall, and it was terrible. They fell a distance of 18 feet at least, and lay in a gory heap, while 1400 souls looked on in silent horror. Women fainted, but still there was no panic. Words of caution were passed from mouth to mouth. "Keep silent and avoid a crush" were the passwords.

Half stunned and bleeding bodies worked free from the mass, and staggered blindly to their feet. A hundred eager and pitying hands lifted the more unfortunate. Many bleeding forms remained as still as death. The floor was slippery with blood. A dozen officers were in the audience.

Of the number thus precipitated, over 50 were more or less injured. As soon as order had been partially restored, all the doctors available were obtained, and the wounded persons either taken to their homes or to the several hospitals.

It was reported that Nelson Maynard had been killed. But it later proved that he had suffered injury of the spine and was paralyzed. The outcome of his injuries is still uncertain. Following is a list of Bust of Governor Greenhalge—No Appropriation For Emergency Hospital.

BOSTON, Feb. 29. — The committee on public charitable institutions passed an adverse vote on the petition of the Emergency hospital of this city for an appropriation of $50,000 from the state.

During the sitting of the house the marble bust of Governor Greenhalge by H. H. Kitson held conspicuous place in the center just in front of the speaker's desk, although the bust itself was hid from view by the United States flag in which it was draped. At 3 p. m. the house adjourned, and the presentation ceremony to the commonwealth began, Representative Hayes of Lowell calling to order, the state being represented by Lieutenant Governor Wolcott. There was quite a delegation from Lowell, led by Mayor Courtney, who made the address in presenting the bust to the commonwealth.

The bill (reported adversely by the committee on election laws) to disqualify persons whose application is subject to the provisions of the civil service rules from serving as officers of caucuses, conventions and political committees, was rejected by the senate—19 to 11. Mr. Dalinger called for a yea and nay vote, and 23 senators voted to reject and 9 only in opposition.

There was a lively hearing before the railroad committee on the petition for an investigation of the board of railroad commissioners for alleged neglect to report upon matters brought to their attention.

The committee on federal relations reported to the house strong resolutions favoring the position of President Cleveland on the Venezuelan question.

Thoreau Homestead Scorched.

CONCORD, Mass., Feb. 29.—The historic Thoreau house in Monument square was very badly damaged by fire yesterday. The careless throwing of a lighted match into the waste basket is believed to be the cause. The lower floor was burned out, the second gutted and the third floor charred. The loss will exceed $3000; insured. This old mansion was built 125 years ago, and was occupied during his life by Henry D. Thoreau, the hermit philosopher, and famed as the naturalist and writer of Old Concord.

Light Sentence For Murder.

DOVER, Me., Feb. 29.—Judge Emery, in the supreme judicial court, yesterday, sentenced William Demond, the 19-year-old murderer of John Roderick, to three years' hard labor in state prison. The crime was committed on Sept. 13, during a drunken quarrel over drink. Demond pleaded guilty, and his counsel showed that Demond was grossly intoxicated when he fired the fatal shot. This fact and his previous good reputation induced the judge to give such a light sentence.

Branching Out.

Neighbors of the home expressed fears that consumptives distributed bacilli of tuberculosis in places frequented by school children. Specialists on lung diseases testified on the dangers of contagion from tuberculosis.

Hard Times.

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 29.—The corset factory of Mayer, Strouse & Co. of this city, employing 1200 operatives, will begin running on eight hours' time on Monday. ## OLD GLORY INSULTED.

Spanish Officers Searched a Boston Vessel Off Cuba's Coast.

Said They Were Looking For Two Deserters.

Gun Trained Upon Yankees, Who Lost Twenty-Four Hours' Time.

BOSTON, Feb. 29.—Captain Warner and First Mate Pritchard of the three-masted schooner Navarino of this city are at present the two most angry men along the water front. They are talking fight with a vengeance, and the object of their wrath is the Spanish government, or, more particularly, its naval representatives in Cuba. According to their story, an insult has been shown the American flag.

The complaint is no less a one than that of being overhauled by a Spanish gunboat while under sail for this port, and forced to drop anchor, while Spanish officers and marines searched the schooner for deserters. The gunboat's guns were trained upon the vessel all the time, and that, too, while the Stars and Stripes were flying from the masthead. The story of the outrage, as First Mate Pritchard tells it, is as follows:

"With a cargo of sugar we left Manzanilla, Cuba, on Jan. 24, with a Spanish pilot at the wheel. The following afternoon, while half way between Manzanilla and Cape Cruz, a small Spanish gunboat, of about 50 tons, was noticed bearing down upon us. To our surprise we noticed that a swivel gun had been trained upon us. Our pilot and 'Old Glory' was soon flying in the breeze. We sent our anchors overboard and waited an explanation of the affair.

Told Us to Set Our Colors,

"In a few moments a boat was lowered from the war vessel, and a second lieutenant, pilot and two Spanish marines came aboard. We were then told, through our Spanish pilot, who acted as an interpreter, that they were in search of two marines who had deserted from the gunboat and were suppesed to be on our vessel.

"They stayed with us half an hour, and all the while the swivel gun was trained our way. Meanwhile, the tide had turned against us, and we were forced to stay there for 24 hours longer. I do not know the name of the gunboat."

The Spanish consul in this city, Jose MaLuch, has no information concerning the affair other than that furnished by the officers of the Navarino. He is exceedingly discreet in all statements, and has nothing to say concerning any instructions to Spanish naval officers. If he knows of such instructions, he is sufficiently diplomatic to remain silent.

A Statement From Whitney.

JACKSON, Miss., Feb. 29.—The Clarion-Ledger prints a letter from W. C. Whitney of New York, in which he says: "I learn that W. S. McAllister has been circulating in your city a petition requesting me to become a candidate for the presidential nomination of the Democratic party. In the course of the controversy which naturally arose from such efforts on his part, he speaks of himself as one of the 'principle managers of the Whitney movement in this state' (Mississippi). I desire to disclaim any knowledge of any such movement, and I request any friend of mine not to join it. It is doubtless intended in a friendly spirit, but has not my approval or concurrence."

Help From Honduras.

MANAGUA, Feb. 29.—There is great rejoicing here over news that has just been received from Tegucigalpa, the capital of Honduras, that Honduras will send 2000 troops to aid the government of Nicaragua to suppress the revolt of the Leonists. Look For Long Fight.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 29.—The ranks of the striking garment workers were enlarged by the addition of 400 men yesterday. Strikers say that 800 Bohemian tailors will be recruited to the ranks Monday. This will increase the number of strikers to about 6200. The leaders of the strike say that there is not the slightest possibility of the strike being settled very soon. They look for a long fight.

Unfortunate Thaw.

ALBANY, Feb. 29.—The ice harvest here was progressing rapidly till Thursday night, when a disastrous thaw set in, and unless a heavy frost comes at once, the present crop will be destroyed. Five dealeas have nearly 100,000 tons in; this makes so far about one-half of the full crop. The ice is of excellent quality, clear as crystal and ranges from 12 to 16 inches in thickness.

Brutal Street Murder.

NEW YORK, Feb. 29.—In a fit of insane jealousy, Thomas Cooley, 23 years old, of this city, shot and mortally wounded Miss Kate Flynn, 27 years of age, last night, at the corner of Second avenue and Seventy-ninth street. The woman is in a dying condition and the man was arrested. The affair was unusually brutal, no less than half a dozen bullets taking effect.

Crisp's Ambition.

ATLANTA, Feb. 29.—Ex-Speaker Crisp is out in a letter to the Democrats of the Third congressional district, announcing that he will not again be a candidate for representative, but will instead be a candidate for United States senator. He says it is his ambition to represent Georgia in the senate.

Going Abroad.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Feb. 29.—Prince and Princess Troubetzskoy left Cobham yesterday for New York, whence they sail on the Werra. Princess Troubetzskoy will soon publish another story, the plot of which is laid in America, Australia and England.

The Wisdom Of Trading Here.

Confidence in the people you trade with, should be the first principle of shopping with the thinking buyer.

If one needs the services of a physician, he naturally has a preference, and its nothing but confidence in the man you talk with that leads you to follow his advice to the letter. The sole aim of the clerks in many of the stores of today, seems to be the one object of selling goods, no matter by what meaus or by what misrepresentations.

At this store things are different, the great fundamental principle of this business is to keep the interest of our patrons at heart—misrepresent nothing, and sell the best the market produces at money-saving prices. These methods alone account for the success of this business and the confidence the people have in our store system.

Medford is a city with about the same population as Quincy and some of its appropriations for 1896 will be of interest: For highway repairs $20,000; paved gutters, $1,500; shade trees, $500; street watering, $2,700; school salaries, $55,010; stewardship of schools, $5,914; fuel for schools, $6,300; water for schools, $600; text books and school supplies, $5,850.

THE OLD Farmer's Almanac doesn't mince matters any for March weather. It intends to give us enough of it, but mostly of one kind. Note the predictions:

Raw and uncomfortable weather. Grows Milder. Bleak and chilling easterly winds. Generally disagreeable.

Nothing is said however about six weeks' sleighing.

ON OR before the first day of March all the administrative officers and boards of the city are expected to furnish to the Mayor an itemized and detailed estimate of all monies required for their respective departments during the year. The limit expires today, and it is possible that Mayor Adams and Treasurer Gray will submit their estimates to the Council at its next meeting. At least one board, however, which spends quite a little money, has not yet organized, and no business can be transacted until it does. In the past the estimates of the department officials have not been submitted with those of the Mayor, and one does not know whether the department receives more or less than is asked, or which department suffers the most. They do know that the highways get but little. All these figures would be of interest to the Council, the taxpayers and the progressive citizens.

DURING ITS half century of successful business the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance company has made its stand for safety and against risk, for legitimate insurance and against gambling, for moderate and inexpensive methods and against the speedy and costly. How well it has succeeded the simple figures of the fiftieth annual statement, today published, amply show. These figures are eloquent of the company's prosperity. They show enrolled upon its books an army of 66,606 persons, carrying insurances aggregating $158,000,000. They exhibit a surplus of $7,096,256, and gross assets of $63,000,000. These are broad results. They show at the same time how business has been done and is done, in that the interests of the insured were so carefully guarded in 1895 that the ratio of expense of management to receipts was but 10 per cent. Nothing could more conclusively demonstrate how the interests of the insured are conserved. The statement is interesting and convincing.

STILL IN ABEYANCE.

No Agreement Between Manufacturers and Cutters.

But Every Evidence of a Peaceable Settlement.

Mass Meeting of Manufacturers Tonight to Consider Propositions.

The granite situation remains unchanged this morning, as no agreement was reached at the meetings held last night; but there is every evidence of a peaceable settlement between now and Monday morning.

During the early evening there was a joint meeting between the Manufacturers' and Cutters' committees, but no terms could be agreed upon.

National Secretary Duncan was present at this meeting, and certain propositions were made that will be considered by the Manufacturers' Associations as a whole this evening. What these propositions were have not been disclosed.

Besides the joint meeting last evening there was a mass meeting of the Cutters' Union at their hall at South Quincy, which was largely attended. This meeting was addressed by National Secretary Duncan and was very harmonious. The situation was talked over.

No decisive action was taken however as the cutters prefer to await the action of the manufacturers at their meeting tonight.

However, from what can be learned everything points to a harmonious settlement of the differences. May it be so.

An Exceptional Opportunity.

The opportunity which the ladies of Quincy will have to study the Bible under the leadership of Mrs. James M. Gray of Boston, is indeed a most exceptional one, as those who attended her first course of ten evenings can testify. "Wholly apart from its religious or ethical value," says, Mr. Charles Dudley Warner, "the Bible is the one book that no intelligent person can afford to be ignorant of. All modern literature and all art are permeated with it. It is not at all a question of religion or theology or dogma; it is a question of general intelligence."

This is true, and any series of careful, consecutive, Bible studies cannot but be instructive and helpful to Christian character; but the course of synthetic Bible study to be held in the chapel of the Evangelical Congregational church on ten Monday evenings beginning Monday, March 9, at 7.45 o'clock, is no ordinary course. Mrs. Gray is recognized as a leading Bible student, and as one who not only thoroughly understands, but as one who has that rare ability of being able, quickly and fully to impart. Mrs. Gray has had the widest experience as she has conducted Bible classes in the Gordon Missionary and Training school, in the Revere Lay college, etc., etc.; classes numbering sometimes from two to three hundred.

The method of study is much in the form of a lecture with occasional questions addressed to the class. Outlines will be placed on the blackboard. No books will be needed except the Bible, and the only work that is expected is a reading and rereading the chapters that are to be studied.

Tickets for the course are fifty cents and may be obtained of Miss Nellie Saunders or of Mr. D. King of the Evangelical Congregational church, of Mr. W. F. Cummings of the Atlantic Memorial church, and of such members of the other churches of Quincy as may be announced from the pulpit of these churches on Sunday. It is scarcely neceesary to add that the study of the Bible is non-sectarian, and that all denominations are cordially invited to attend these Monday evenings.

The Black Patti.

The excellence of the vaudeville programme at Keith's continues to be a subject of remark among all classes of theatre goers. There is no going backward; it is a steady progression in the way of an improved variety, one which will attract the cream of amusement seekers, not alone for its pure and cleanly tone but for its unrivalled attractiveness in all lines. Next week's bill is headed by the world famous Black Patti, who is to appear for the first time on a vaudeville stage. This talented woman is not only a magnificent vocalist, whose success is named by all the press "triumphal," but she is admittedly the most beautiful representative of her race that has ever appeared in public. She is regarded by all the amusement managers as a "star," and Mr. Keith considers himself fortunate in securing her services.

Notes from Quincy Point, Wollaston Atlantic, South and West Quincy.

The 29th of February.

The moon celebrated the 29th by getting full.

Another night lunch will locate near the PATRIOT office today.

Bussell has taken some fine views of Rogers Bros. ice plant.

The eclipse of the moon last night was invisible in New England.

Mrs. Aubrey R. Keith and infant son of River street have the mumps.

The City Council will hold a regular meeting on Monday evening.

Here's a problem for somebody: On what day of the week will Feb. 29 fall next time?

The gentlemen interested in the formation of a Republican club will hold a meeting tonight.

The warm weather of Friday together with the rain of today is fast taking the frost out of the ground.

A bright active boy is wanted to sell the DAILY LEDGER every afternoon near the depot and City Hall.

The chorus under the direction of Miss C. F. Spear will meet at The Greenleaf on Tuesday evenings at 8 o'clock.

Children born today will not have another birthday until 1904. The LEDGER hopes to record Monday the names of all arrivals on Feb. 29. Happy fathers will please forward for publication.

"The True Athlete" will be the subject discussed at the Men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A., Sunday, at 3.30. Mr. J. E. Merritt, the physical director, will be the principal speaker. Mr. Albert L. Hayden will sing.

The dramatic entertainment given in chapel of First church last evening was well attended and of great excellence. Seven dramatic stars of first magnitude alighted on the stage and vied with each other in make up and action. The proceeds go to help the work of the alliance.

The supper and social given by the Brotherhood of Andrew and Philips next Wednesday evening to the younger men of the Centre Congregational church gives promise of an exceedingly pleasant evening. Efforts are being made to secure some first class musical talent from Boston.

Last evening at the meeting in the Centre Congregational church a long and thrilling letter was read by Mrs. Hardy from Mrs. George Knapp of Bitles, Turkey. Mr. Knapp is now under arrest by the Turkish government for sedition and is on his way to trial in Constantinople. The letter was a story of persecution worse than that of the Middle Ages. The Knapps and Hardys were college mates.

Red and Green.

A gentleman in Ward Two rejoices in a family of three cats, all of whom are possessed of an inquisitive turn of mind. Last July one of them took a bath in a pot of red paint in honor of the glorious Fourth. This week not to be outdone by her sister, the second of the three nosed about the cellar and finding a pot of green paint decided that the proper thing would be to paint herself green in anticipation of the seventeenth of March, and she lost no time in carrying that decision into effect, and as a result there is a green cat wandering about in the vicinity of Edwards Hill.

THE WEEK PAST.

Aside from the interest in the settlement of the differences between granite manufacturers and granite workmen, it has been a quiet week in the city. Meetings have been held by the City Council and School Committee, but little business was transacted.

The action of a few gentlemen in attempting to organize privately a Republican club, is being criticised by the rank and file of the party. If a club is to be organized, they say they want a hand in it. New men secured control of the Republican City Committee and the old leaders should retire gracefully. Not attempt to get on top because it is Presidential year and take all the honors.

Some are suspicious that it is not all on account of a Presidential election, but that the club may desire to take a hand in the next municipal election. Should this be the case, Quincy might have its most memorable contest for Mayor. It may be early to talk up the municipal election but it is said that ex-Commissioner Eaton may be the next Democratic candidate, and that Mayor Adams may run independent. That Candidate Hammond will again be the Republican nominee, while the candidate of the Republican club is at present unknown.

The Board of Trade is actively at work and promises to be a factor in all public movements. There is an abundant field in which to work, and the organization may be a Godsend to Quincy. Whether it was wise to place everything in the hands of a board of directors remains to be seen. Some who were among the early signers of the articles of incorporation, have been ignored in the choice of directors and committees, while others who have never intimated their intention to become members have been appointed. A board of trade should not serve any personal ends, but work for the interests of the city and its people.

To charge the School Committee with favoritism as to plans for new school buildings seems unjust, for the School Committee has approved each and every plan which the City Councils have referred to them. Perhaps the fault is with the Council, and it has not proceeded as it should under the charter. Should not plans be prepared by the Committee of the Council, and reported by said committee to the Council, and then by a vote of the Council referred to the School Committee for approval. When this is accomplished the Council will be able to make quick work of an order making an appropriation.

The sudden disappearance of the snow has brought out the bicycle and the wheeling some days this week has been very good.

Two golden weddings in one day was a remarkable coincidence, — one couple former residents of the city, and the other residents now.

We are now well into Lent but the entertainments and parties appear to be fully as numerous and there have been many attractions the past week.

THE BRAINTREE CAUCUS.

Clark, Mayhew and Hayward, the Old Board, Renominated.

The annual town caucus took place last evening and nearly five hundred voters gathered in the Town Hall to show their interest in the affairs of the community.

F. A. Hobart called the caucus to order and was elected chairman, T. P. Harrison was elected secretary and the caucus started off at full speed at 7.45. A. O. Clark and John V. Scollard were given charge of the check list.

E. E. Abercrombie moved that a ballot be taken for candidate for selectmen from the north part of the town. Mr. Kelley said he had no objection to this, but thought he had a plan that would expedite matters. After a little discussion Mr. Abercrombie's motion prevailed, and the caucus proceeded at once to discover the "North pole."

It took just one hour for the voters present to pass around and deposit their ballots. Dr. Nansen could not have done better.

On motion of Mr. Porter the chair appointed E. L. Porter, W. L. Gage, H. M. Storme, Daniel Potter and Brainard T. Dyer to receive and count the ballots.

Col. Drinkwater moved that the ballot for south and east parts of the town be taken at the same time. Chair said there would be no objection if another ballot box could be provided. Col. Drinkwater then suggested that a hat be used that honest voting had been done in a hat.

The chair then announced amid peals of laughter gentlemen:

SOUTH IN THE BOX, EAST IN THE HAT.

And just an hour closed the balloting again. The following gentlemen were appointed counters: Will W. Mayhew, Chas. G. Sheppard, W. A. Kane, O. M. Crocker and D. G. Doane.

The votes were announced viz:

FOR THE NORTH:

Chairman Hobart's silk tile did good work; and, while he made an excellent chairman, it can be truthfully said that he had the whole of East Braintree in his hat.

E. E. Abercrombie spoke in favor of a separate board of assessors. He was not in favor of a street commission this year. He said, "I think the policy adopted by the town last year a good one. If we can reduce our tax rate to about $15.00 it will do more to boom the town than anything we can do. If we elect a commission we must give them a liberal appropriation to spend. I think the selectmen can keep the roads in fair condition and I move that the candidates nominated for selectmen be the candidates for overseers of poor and surveyors of highways. At this point a lively discussion over whether or not the town should have separate board of assessors.

On motion of Geo. D. Willis, Peter D. Holbrook was nominated for re-election as treasurer.

On motion of Col. Drinkwater, John V. Scollard was nominated for Water Commissioner for three years and on motion of Mr. George D. Willis the same gentleman was nominated for commissioner of sinking fund.

Col. Drinkwater moved the nomination of Samuel A. Bates for town clerk which was unanimously carried.

Mr. Scollard moved the nomination of Hon. Asa French for moderator. Brainard T. Dyer moved to substitute the name of F. A. Hobart, which was carried.

E. E. Abercrombie, H. G. Hughes, A. E. Hunt, C. C. Mellen, R. S. Randall, John Kelley, Douglas Brooks, J. V. Scollard and Henry Gardner were chosen to nominate candidates for offices not otherwise nominated, and this discussion brought about a lively tilt.

There were perhaps fifty voters left in the hall when the committee returned and the trouble arose from an attempt to drop Mrs. Loring from the school committee.

Mr. Scollard claimed that the committee had been nominated beforehand, and that everything had been cut and dried. The chairman denied this and before the gentlemen left the hall it is said that the "lie" was given straight.

This is of course to be regretted. With this exception, however, the occasion passed off harmoniously. There was no attempt to make the nominations unanimous.

Friend Fitch, with ballots in hand, moved happily about in the crowd saying, "If you want a thing done, do it yourself;" and he received a very complimentary vote.

The chairman and secretary set a good example by refraining from smoking during the entire caucus.

The caucus dissolved at 12.10.

The Voice of the People.

Swing inward, O gates of the future!
Swing outward, ye doors of the past!
For the soul of the people is moving
And rising from slumber at last;
The black forms of night are retreating,
And white peaks have signaled the day,
And freedom her long roll is beating
And calling her sons to the fray.

Swing inward, O gates, till the morning
Shall paint the brown mountains in gold;
Till the life and love of the new time
Shall conquer the hate of the old.
Let the face and the hands of the Master
No longer be hidden from view,
Nor the lands he prepared for the many
Be trampled and robbed by the few.

Swing inward, O gates of the future!
Swing outward, ye gates of the past!
A giant is waking from slumber
And rending his fetters at last.
From the dust where his proud tyrants bound him,
Unhonored and scorned and betrayed,
He shall rise with the sunlight around him,
And rule in the realm he has made.

His Identity.

Lost Child (to policeman)—Please, sir, have you seen a man without a little boy? 'Cause if you have I'ze that little boy.—Collier's Weekly.

Color Blind.

John Dalton, without whose discovery of the laws of chemical combination chemistry as an exact science could hardly exist, was wholly color blind. His knowledge of the fact came about by a happening of the sort which we call chance. On his mother's birthday, when he was a man of 26, he took her a pair of stockings which he had seen in a shop window labeled:

"Silk, and newest fashion."

"Thee has bought me a pair of grand hose, John," said the mother, "but what made thee fancy such a bright color? Why, I can never show myself at meeting in them."

John was much disconcerted, but he told her that he considered the stockings to be of a very proper go to meeting color, as they were a dark bluish drab.

"Why, they're red as a cherry, John," was her astonished reply.

Neither he nor his brother Jonathan could see anything but drab in the stockings, and they rested in the belief that the good wife's eyes were out of order until she, having consulted various neighbors, returned with the verdict, "Varra fine stuff, but uncommon scarlety."

The consequence was that John Dalton became almost the first to direct the attention of the scientific world to the subject of color blindness. — Youth's Companion.

Sure of It This Time.

"John! John!"

Mr. Billus ceased snoring.

"What's the matter, Maria?"

"There's a man in the house. Listen!"

"What?"

"I heard a heavy foot on the stairway. Listen!"

Mr. Billus listened a moment.

"I don't hear anything."

"I do. There—I heard it again!"

There was no response but a snore.

"John!"

Another snore.

"John Billus, are you afraid to get up?"

No response.

Mrs. Billus lay down again.

"If you can stand it to have the house robbed," she exclaimed wrathfully, "I can."

At the end of half an hour she spoke again:

"John!"

No answer.

"John Billus!"

"What's the matter now?"

"I was mistaken. There wasn't any man in the house. And there isn't any man in the house now, either. Hear that, do you?"—Chicago Tribune.

VERDICT OF CONGRESS

Almost Unanimously In Favor of Independence For Cuba.

Granting of Belligerency Endorsed by Senate.

Cuban Excitement Now at Its Height at the Nation's Capital.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 29.—The senate, yesterday afternoon, by a vote of 64 to 6, adopted these resolutions with regard to Cuba, which earlier in the day had been agreed upon in the senate committee on foreign relations:

Resolved, By the senate (the house of representatives concurring) that in the opinion of congress a condition of public war exists between the government of Spain and the government proclaimed and for some time maintained by force of arms by the people of Cuba, and that the United States of America should maintain a strict neutrality between the contending powers, according each all the rights of belligerents in the ports and territory of the United States.

Resolved, That the friendly offices of the United States should be offered by the president to the Spanish government for the recognition of the independence of Cuba.

The detailed vote on the final passage of the resolutions is as follows:

YEAS: Republicans—Allison, Baker, Brown, Burrows, Cameron, Cannon, Carter, Chandler, Clark, Cullom, Davis, Dubois, Elkins, Frye, Gallinger, Gear, Hawley, Lodge, McBride, McMillan, Mantle, Mitchell (Or.), Nelson, Perkins, Pritchard, Proctor, Quay, Sherman, Shoup, Squire, Teller, Thurston, Warren and Wilson.

Populists—Allen, Butler, Jones (Nev.), Kyle, Peffer, Stewart.

NAYS: Republicans—Hale, Morrill and Wetmore.

Democrats—Caffery, Chilton, George.

Populists—None. Total: Yeas, 64; nays, 6.

When the result was announced, the densely packed galleries broke into long-continued applause, which the vice president checked with difficulty. The result was reached after a day of fervid speeches, which at times aroused the crowd of spectators to enthusiastic demonstrations. The keen public interest in the subject was evinced by the presence of the largest crowd since congress assembled.

The representatives of foreign powers were numerously in attendance, the occupants of the diplomatic gallery including Ministers Mendonca of Brazil, Hatch of Hawaii, Lazzod Arriaga of Guatemala, Rengifo of Colombia and Von Kettler of the German embassy. Dupuy de Lome was not present, but two of the attaches of the Spanish legation occupied seats with the other diplomats.

The main feature of the debate was the speech of Senator Sherman, chairman of the committee on foreign relations. As a rule, the veteran senator from Ohio speaks with reserve and conservatism, so that it was the more surprising when he arraigned Spain and her governor general—Weyler—in the most merciless and scathing language. Mr. Sherman read specific instances in which Weyler was pictured as stripping young girl captives and making them dance before the Spanish troops.

Other speeches were made by Mr. Lindsay (Ky.), Lodge (Mass.), Caffery (La.) and Allen (Neb.).

The Debate.

Considerable significance is rightfully attached to the speeches of Lindsay and Sherman in the senate. The former was closeted with the president for a long time Thursday night, and, although he declines to voice the chief executive's attitude, it is inferred that so good an administration man as the Kentucky senator would not willingly antagonize the president. Sherman's experience in dealing with foreign relations and generally conservative course naturally strengthens the position of the Cuban sympathizers.

Mr. Lindsay did not think that in the present emergency the subject ought to be controlled in any way by the past conduct of Spain to the United States. It was, in one sense, a question of humanity. War was being carried on at the very doors of the United States between the people of Cuba and the Spanish government, and it would result either in the independence of Cuba or in the utter destruction of her people.

Expressions of sympathy would avail nothing to the Cuban insurrectionists. If the United States intended to take any step to bring about a condition of affairs in Cuba different from that which had existed during the last 70 years, that step should be in the direction of the ultimate independence of Cuba.

Mr. Sherman sent to the clerk's desk and had read extracts from a Spanish book, printed in a New York newspaper, reciting horrible cruelties charged against Weyler—some of the incidents being so bad that he directed the clerk to omit them. He spoke of these deeds as barbarous atrocities and as inhuman cruelties, and said that Weyler was a demon rather than a general.

He denounced the idea of putting such a man in command of 100,000 troops to ride rough-shod, kill and slaughter a feeble body of people; and he declared (in the most solemn terms) that if this kind of policy is pursued by Spain in Cuba, and if the people of the United States be informed of it, there is no earthly power that will prevent the people of the United States from going over to that island, running all over its length and breadth, and driving out from it those robbers and imitators of the worst men that ever lived in the world. [Applause from crowds in the gallery.] "If," Mr. Sherman continued, "Weyler carries out his projected plan, there is not a country in this hemisphere that will not contribute to put an end to this violence."

Senator Gallinger's speech was especially bitter. "I shall vote," said he, "for the strongest resolutions that may be presented in this chamber," and he closed with an eloquent peroration on free Cuba.

Senator Lodge said that the committee would probably accept the amendment looking to the United States taking the first step toward recognition of the independence of Cuba. Such action, Mr. Lodge declared, would be supported by the American people without a dissenting voice and would meet the cordial approval of the civilized world.

Senator Frye declared that he was humiliated to have this free republic doing police duty on the sea for the wickedest despotism on the face of the civilized earth. He recognized the supremacy of the law, but wished that the Almighty had in his divine power paralyzed the arm of the law.

"I look on these resolutions," said Frye, "as the first step. My creed has no 39 articles. I cannot forget that where we had one just cause to rebel against England, these insurgents have a dozen. The liberty and independence of Cuba is my aim in this matter."

Senator Caffery (La.), an administration man, followed: "I regard," he said, "the sentimental question as applicable to Armenia as to Cuba. I regard all appeals to the sympthy of our people by holding up dreadful pictures of the cruelties of Spain in the past as altogether out of place in this present discussion."

Cuban Matter Rested.

There was an enthusiastic demonstration in the house when Secretary Cox of the senate, shortly before 5 o'clock, appeared and announced the passage by the upper branch of congress of the Cuban resolutions, but the matter did not come up in any other form during the day. After encountering the unexpected opposition of Mr. Boutelle, Thursday, the house leaders concluded to postpone taking up the resolutions until the legislative bill was disposed of.

The whole day in the house was spent in the consideration of the legislative appropriation bill, and considerable progress was made. An agreement was reached whereby the bill to change the compensation of United States attorneys and marshals from the fee to the salary system is to be offered as an amendment to this bill.

An amendment, offered by Mr. Tawney (Rep., Minn.), to provide that the members shall have $100 a month for clerk hire throughout the year, instead of during the sessions only, as is now the case, provoked the charge that it was a "salary grab."

Mr. Payne (Rep., N. Y.), who was in the chair, ruled it out on a point of order. An attempt was made to overrule the chair, but he was sustained by a vote of 102 to 43. The provision for senators' clerks was then stricken out, with the avowed intention of effecting an "equitable adjustment" with the senate later.

The house foreign affairs committee were desirous to bring forward the Cuban resolution in the house and pass it without delay, but Cuba was obliged to yield precedence to the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bills, which had already been given the floor by a special order from the committee on rules. Chairman Hitt was surrounded by members as soon as he arrived at the house, all of them urging him to press the resolutions at the first opportunity.

This will be done, it being the present plan to call up the resolution as soon as the appropriation bill is disposed of. Two days will be a reasonable time for that bill, so that the Cuban question may be debated on Monday. Little opposition to the resolution is expected, and that mostly of a technical sort, some members questioning whether recognition will be of practical benefit to the rebels. Mr. McCreary (Ky.) and Mr. Money (Miss.) contended in the committee that the resolution should be made a joint instead of a concurrent one.

The house elections committee No. 1 decided to report in favor of unseating Mr. Robbins (Dem.) of the Fourth district of Alabama, and giving his seat to W. F. Aldrich, the contestant, who was supported by Republicans and Populists. The decision was reached by a party vote, the Republicans claiming that ballot box stuffing was practiced.

The house committee on naval affairs yesterday held its first full meeting to consider the naval appropriation bill. It was resolved to provide for an increase of 1000 in the force of enlisted men to meet the demands of the new ships to be placed in commission.

The house committee of naval affairs decided in favor of extending the sea wall at the torpedo station at Newport, R. I., at an expense of $15,000.

Many a free man who is sick would willingly change places with a healthy convict. A man might as well be shut out of enjoyment one way as another. If he is shut up in a cell, he cannot engage in active pleasures. He cannot see the beauties of nature and art, but he can imagine them, and so get some benefit from them. A man who is sick has these things before him, but he doesn't see them as they exist. He cannot look on anything with appreciative eyes. His physical condition warps his vision and his mentality. He cannot enjoy anything, no matter how enjoyable it may be in the abstract. A man with a foul taste in his mouth, with a bilious headache, and with poisonous refuse matter circulating all through his body cannot enjoy anything. He honestly believes that the world is all wrong, and that it is a mighty poor place to be in. He is blue, despondent, cynical. Life isn't worth living to him. Such a simple thing causes this condition that it is absurd and ridiculous to think of a sensible man remaining in it. Symptoms like these come from constipation. It is the most prevalent of all causes of sickness. It makes a man worthless for work or pleasure. It is a stubborn trouble when you do not treat it properly, and a simple one when you do. It is cured by Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They were made for this purpose, and no other. They accomplish this purpose as no other preparation ever did. An unscrupulous druggist may try to sell you something else. Look out! It is your health that is at stake. If is your health against an extra profit on the thing he says is "just as good." —The American newspaper correspondents in Cuba now have an excellent chance to write accounts of their own executions.—Roxbury Gazette.

—It has twice been reported, within two weeks that Dr. Nansen, the Norwegian explorer, had found the North Pole, and that he was on the way home. Several unsuccessful arctic explorers, whose course lay from a different direction, however, ridicule the story of Nansen's discovery of the North Pole, and his finding it on land instead of in the open sea. If Nansen gets home safely without the assistance of a searching party he will be doing more than most of the other arctic explorers have done even if he has not found the North Pole. — Worcester West Chronicle.

—There are 1100 students at the Stanford university in California, but Mrs. Stanford continues to assert that it will be closed at once if the government's suit to recover $15,000,000 from her husband's estate succeeds.

First Impressions Last

Therefore be careful of the first impression. On entering a strange house one gets his first impression from the hall. If this looks bare the impression is bad.

The hall should be furnished, not of course with bric-a-brac and rocking chairs, but appropriately, that is with a simple hall stand. They are rich, handsome, convenient, and add a constant air of welcome. Wonderfully low in price; in rich quartered oak they cost from $5.50 to $25.00.
